A guide to photographic collections as wide and as varied as those held by the Department of Archives and Manuscripts is a labor of love and tedium interspersed with frustration and triumph. Richard Pearce-Moses has surely triumphed in producing the first guide to materials preserved by this department. The intent of this work is to provide a greater understanding and use of our extensive photographic collections acquired not just to preserve our visual heritage but to provide the images necessary to explain and illustrate that heritage.

Support for the publication of the guide comes from the Luhrs Family endowment, dedicated to preserving and promoting Arizona’s history and heritage. Without the dedication to Arizona’s history of individuals like the late George H. N. Luhrs, Jr., the task of preserving our documentary heritage would be difficult indeed.

Thanks also needs to go to the department’s many donors of visual materials, without which this guide would obviously be unnecessary and impossible. Photographers and collectors such as Drs. Herb and Dorothy McLaughlin, Senator Carl Hayden, George H. N. Luhrs, W. Ryder Ridgway, and many, many others have helped create and build our photographic collections. Let me encourage you to honor these donors by using the resources preserved and made available by Richard Pearce-Moses and the staff of the Department of Archives and Manuscripts.

Edward C. Oetting, Head
Archives and Manuscripts
Arizona State University
The Department of Archives and Manuscripts is fortunate to possess one of the finest collections of photography in the Southwest. The Department collects primary and secondary materials in four areas, and each area has its own collection of photographs.

The Arizona Collection focuses on the state and the American Southwest. The photographs are useful for studying the region's social and political history, industrial and real estate development, mining, and the landscape. The strong holdings of commercial photography—many accompanied by the photographers' records—make the Collection an excellent repository for studying the history of photography as well.

The Chicano Research Collection documents the Chicano/Mexican-American experience through primary and secondary sources. The Collection principally covers the Southwest, beginning with the history of Spain in the New World, and is expanding to cover Chicanos throughout America and is rapidly acquiring contemporary material.

University Archives traces the history and culture of Arizona State University from its founding as the Territorial Normal School in 1885 to the present. The archive includes photographs made by and for University offices and departments and donations of personal photographs pertinent to the University, its faculty, staff, and alumni.

The Visual Literacy Collection is the newest research division in the Department. The Collection holds the papers and photographs of John Debes and Joel Benedict, among others, who were pioneers in the field of visual literacy.

The holdings total some 450,000 photographs. The collections have grown to include other graphic materials, including videotapes, films, and prints. With a few exceptions, this guide describes collections of photographic prints. Many of those collections have parallel or related collections of negatives and transparencies, which were not included in this edition of the guide.

This guide includes only descriptions of processed collections—those arranged, housed, and prepared for patron use. As additional collections are processed, their descriptions will be added as an appendix of this guide kept in the Department's reading rooms.

Structure and Organization of the Entries

Collection descriptions are structured according to the following schematic. Each element is described in greater detail below.

CN Main Entry

Biographical, administrative history, and provenance notes.

§ Title [form of materials]. Statement of responsibility. Description. Physical characteristics. Dates. [Callmark]

Related materials:

Citations.

Collection Number (CN) and Section Number ($)

Each collection has been numbered to facilitate indexing. Indices indicate the collection number, rather than the page, for more exact references. Larger collections with several components have been divided into sections marked with a numbered section symbol ($) to further refine the index reference.

Collection numbers begin with the letter of the departmental division, A for Arizona, C for Chicano, U for University Archives, and V for Visual Literacy. Collections are numbered sequentially within each division, each division beginning with one. For example, the code A10§1 under "sports" in the index points to the Arizona Collection, tenth collection, first section.

Because collection numbers may change in future editions of this guide, please do not use them as citations. To cite the material, please use the main entry, title (if any), and form of material. For primary source material, the repository name should be included; the proper form is "Archives and Manuscripts, Arizona State University." The callmark (see below) may be used as an abbreviated citation or to request materials.

Main Entry

Within each division of the Department, descriptions are organized alphabetically by main entry. Following archival tradition, provenance—or the source—of the collection is used for main entry, typically the collector, author, or other agent of responsibility. If a collection has no identifiable provenance, the title serves as the main entry. When known, birth and death dates of individuals are included in the main entry heading.

Biographical and Administrative History Notes

A brief note brings out those aspects of an individual's or corporation's life which place the collection in context. Only the most significant facts are listed if not pertinent to the materials at hand. References are made to other sources for additional information. Other notes clarify provenance and attributions.

Title and Form of Materials

In the absence of an identifiable provenance, the title serves as the main entry and appears as the collection heading. Titles are transcribed when they exist; however, they are assigned by the Department only when necessary to distinguish between groups of materials with a shared provenance.

The form of material, in square brackets, is given to indicate the principal formats of the collection when not apparent from the title. The most common form is "photographs." Other common formats include typescript, report, and dissertations. Formats may be used in combination; for example, dissertation with photographs.
Statement of Responsibility

A note may be made to describe or clarify all individuals associated with the creation of a collection and the nature of their contribution. These statements are typically transcribed from published or near-published works.

Description, Physical Characteristics, and Dates

The materials are described as completely as possible in terms of people, places, and things represented and photographers whose work is in the collection. The Description section also includes notes on the availability of specialized finding guides and on any special restrictions on the collection. The physical characteristics indicate the quantity, processes, and formats of materials in the collection. The dates describe the period the images were made; a note is made if the printing date is significantly different from the image date.

Description is at the collection-level and is an abstraction of the many specific subjects within a collection. For example, this guide might not index a portrait of Ida Jackson, but a collection indexed as "portraits" might contain such a photograph. For information on more detailed access to holdings, see Other Sources of Information below.

Callmark

This code indicates the storage location of the collection. When requesting materials please use the callmark, not the collection number. Because the callmark stands for the collection as a whole, it may represent several hundreds—occasionally thousands—of items; use of the item-level guides and the Arizona and Southwest Index will help you find the exact images you are looking for within a collection.

Related Materials

Materials with the same provenance are indicated under this heading by the format of material only, followed by entries for associated and related materials. If no repository is listed, the materials are housed in the Department.

Access and Further Information

The Department of Archives and Manuscripts will make original records and research materials in its possession available to patrons without discrimination or preference. However, access to some records may be restricted by law or donor restriction. Collections are closed to researchers until they have properly arranged and housed according to archival practice to preserve their intellectual integrity. Access to fragile materials may also be restricted; the Department will work with patrons to provide suitable reproductions for research quickly.

The Department's collections are available for use in its two reading rooms. All Arizona Collection, Chicano Research Collection, and Visual Literacy Collection materials, and University Archives theses and dissertations are available in the Luhrs Reading Room, Hayden Library Room 416, in the center of campus on Cady Mall; hours are 12:00 a.m. - 7:00 p.m., Monday; 8:00 a.m. - 7:00 p.m., Tuesday and Wednesday; Thursday and Friday, 8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.; and 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m., Saturday. All University Archives photographic collections are available in the University Archives building at the intersection of Tyler Mall and Palm Walk; hours are 1:00 p.m. - 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday. Appointments are not necessary, but a call to confirm hours is advised; both reading rooms observe reduced hours during intersession and holidays.

The Arizona and Southwest Index (ASI) is one of the many online databases in the University Libraries' online catalog and provides item-level access to holdings of the Department, including manuscripts, ephemera, oral histories, and photographs. Patrons may use ASI for sophisticated, detailed searches—by subject, sitter, place, photographer, and date—and be directed to individual photographs. ASI is available on terminals in the Libraries, through personal computer and modem (602-965-7001) or via Internet (carl.lib.asu.edu); brochures on remote access are available.

Photoduplications and Publication

The Department of Archives and Manuscripts offers complete photoduplication services, including slides, transparencies, and prints. A price list is available from the reference desks or by request.

Publication of images from the Department, which includes any reproduction or exhibition, requires advanced written approval from the Department in addition to any permissions required by the owner of copyright. Some uses may require a fee.
Luhrs Office Building and Luhrs Tower. Phoenix, Arizona, ca. 1910. Photograph by the McCulloch Brothers. Luhrs Family Photographs [CP LFPC 88]

The Arizona Collection has been an integral part of the University Libraries for many years. Although no official beginning date exists, the origin of the present collection can be traced back to the period 1917 - 1943, when College Librarian Thomas J. Cookson began building a small Southwestern collection. In 1943 the primary focus shifted to materials about Arizona.
The Arizona Collection has changed considerably in size and scope since those times. In 1985 the Collection was united with the University Archives and Chicano Research Collection to become as a whole the Department of Archives and Manuscripts. The Visual Literacy Collection was added to the Department when created in 1989.

The principal focus of the collection is Arizona history, and the majority of the images were made within the state. These materials are supported by photographs from the surrounding arid regions of the Southwest ranging from West Texas to California and Utah to northern Mexico. Other regions from around the world appear as a result of Arizonans’ travel; for example, the Collection holds a number of photographs of Siam (Thailand) collected by George W. P. Hunt when he was the United States Ambassador to that country.

Collections include photographs of prominent Arizona pioneers, such as the Luhrs family, and politicians, including George W. P. Hunt, Carl T. Hayden, Dan Garvey, John Jay Rhodes, and Eldon Rudd. Many of the photographs in the collection create a collective, sociological portrait, recording the economic and social development of the state, and especially of Phoenix.

Many collections are the work of commercial photographers. The backbone of the Collection is formed by the archives of Herb and Dorothy McLaughlin, commercial photographers active in Phoenix from 1945 to the present. The photographs of the McCulloch Brothers were received as part of the McLaughlins’ archives and document Phoenix and central Arizona from the turn of the century through the 1940s. Other photographers with substantial holdings in the Collection include Daniel Zudell, Roy Molen, R. F. Kelley, and William McIntyre.

The earliest images in the Collection date from the 1870s, although the bulk of the Collection is from the twentieth century.

A1 ABEL (KARL; b. ca. 1917)

First elected to the Salt River Project Council in 1964, Abel served as President of the project from 1972 until his retirement in 1982.

A4  ALEXANDER (J. L. B. and GRACE)
Joseph L. B. Alexander (1857 - 1931) was a prominent Phoenix lawyer in the first trimester of the twentieth century and a partner in the firm of Alexander and Christy. Alexander served in the Spanish-American War as commander of Troop C of the Rough Riders. In 1912 he married his second wife, Grace Maye Forbes. Grace Alexander (1874 - 1957) was a leading member of Phoenix cultural life and was active in the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Democratic Party. Joseph and Grace had two children, Jane and Eleanor. A more complete biography of the Alexanders is reproduced in the finding guide to their manuscript collection.

§1  [Photographs]. Primarily family photographs, including Joseph Alexander's parents, siblings, and brother-in-law Ernest Fleming; the family of Grace Alexander (née Forbes); and the family of Thomas Rynning. Most photographs are studio portraits, although some are snapshots and other genre. Other subjects include veterans of the Spanish-American War, the Arizona State Penitentiary at Florence, the Arizona Rangers, and a panorama of Morenci, Arizona. Published photographs include souvenir views of Tombstone, Arizona by Frasher's Foto about 1940 and hand-tinted photomechanical souvenir postcards of Arizona scenes, including views of the Tempe Normal School (now Arizona State University) by Harry Herz.

172 silver gelatin photographic prints; 26 silver gelatin photographic negatives; 13 hand-colored photomechanical postcards. 1888 - 1957.

§2  Phoenix Little Theater and Miscellaneous Materials [scrapbook with photographs]. Includes stage productions photographed by Arrowhead
Studios. 3 silver gelatin photographic prints. Scrapbook dates 1892-1936; photographs, 1935. [CM MSS.11/Scrapbook 13]

[Photographs]. Stock photographs and fine art landscapes by Alex Wiederseder, an Altadena and Los Angeles, California photographer who operated under the name American Stock Photo. Primarily California, including Yosemite, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Santa Monica, and Carmel; some images of Canada. Includes photographs of Japanese-Americans boarding buses in Los Angeles for evacuation and relocation during World War II. Register available; photocopies of original negative envelopes available in case file. 465 negatives, including nitrate, safety, and glass bases; approximately 700 silver gelatin photographic prints. Ca. 1930 - 1945.

Restrictions: Access to negatives by appointment only. [CP SPC 114]

A8  ARCHER (LOU ELLA; 1891 - 1968)

Lou Ella Archer was born in St. Paul, Minnesota. Although she considered Dellwood, Minnesota her home, Archer spent much of her time in Tucson and Phoenix, where she was involved in assisting Hispanics through her work for the Phoenix Friendly House. Two of Archer's publications, Canyon Shadows (Los Angeles: Times-Mirror Printing and Binding, 1931) and Sonnets of the Southwest (Los Angeles: Times-Mirror Press, 1931), were published while she was in Arizona.

A world traveler, Archer married Harold Elliott, with whom she continued to travel. They lived for a time in both New York and Washington, D.C. Archer evidently returned to Arizona in her later years, as extant records indicate she was a volunteer for the Phoenix Center for the Blind and the Arizona state commander for the American Society for the Control of Cancer.

[Photographs]. Snapshot travel photographs of people and landscapes made by Archer throughout the American Southwest, Europe, Australia, and the Orient. Additional commercial photographs and postcards produced by the tourist industry and collected by Archer. Snapshots are presumed to have been made by Archer or a traveling companion.

Loose prints and four albums, “Northern Arizona, Trip to Rainbow Bridge,” “First Part of Book – Australia Sydney Trip . . . Arizona,” “Trip around the World,” and an untitled snapshot album. 1,150 silver gelatin photographic prints. 1910s - 1940s. [CP LA]

ARIZONA AND SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

[Photograph album]. Landscapes and scenic views, primarily in the Salt River Valley, but also including the Grand Canyon, Yuma, and La Jolla, California. Many views of Native Americans on unidentified reservations. Some views depict personal mementos of picnics and outings; others of ostrich farms, Hole-in-the-Rock at Papago Park, Alligator Head at La Jolla, citrus packers, a Hopi Snake Dance ceremony, and the Arizona Canal. Photographs by [F. H.?] Maude Photo and Park Photo; many are amateur views. 1 album containing 47 silver gelatin, gelatin-chloride, and collodio-chloride photographic prints. Ca. 1900. [CP SPC 110]

ARIZONA BILTMORE HOTEL

A popular winter resort built in 1929; design by Albert Chase McArthur with Frank Lloyd Wright as a design consultant. The building's outstanding architecture was one of the first uses of molded concrete blocks. One of the most famous resorts in Phoenix, it was the choice of Ronald and Nancy Reagan for their honeymoon.

[Photograph albums and scrapbooks]. Images depict the resort's physical facilities, including construction, grounds, interiors, aerial views, and building façades; guests; and recreational activities, including golf, tennis, horseback riding, swimming, and fashion shows. The collection is useful for studying the fashions of affluent Americans, especially from the northern Midwest.

§1 Sports. Guests participating in recreational activities at the Biltmore, including ping pong, lawn chess, golf, tennis, and swimming. Substantial coverage of horseback riding, rodeos, and stables, including articles on the closing of the stables. Includes some views of the grounds and buildings. 1 album containing approximately 170 silver gelatin photographic prints. Ca. 1940. [CP SPC 108:1]

§2 Grounds. Aerials and views of the grounds, many during spring with flower beds in full bloom. Images show decorations for banquets, weddings, and Christmas and Easter holiday festivities; interior and exterior of building. 240 photographic prints, silver gelatin and color dye-coupler. 1950s - 1960s. [CP SPC 108:2]

§3 Guests. Portraits of guests at the Biltmore. Most in small groups outdoors or at banquets. Primarily adults, many from the Detroit and Chicago areas; a few children. 238 silver gelatin photographic prints, most with manuscript captions identifying the subjects. Ca. 1940. [CP SPC 108:3]

§4 Construction and Grounds. Reproduction of an architectural rendering of the building serves as frontispiece; other images show construction, including framing, workers on site, and precast concrete blocks. Aerial, interior, and exterior views of public areas and guest rooms after construction was completed. 177 silver gelatin photographic prints. 1928 - 1938. [CP SPC 108:4]

§5 Services, Recreations, Shops, Facilities. Group and individual portraits of staff, including bartenders, room service, housekeepers, chefs, and groundskeepers; fashion shows; clothing shops; and flower shops. 92 leaves: newsclippings, ephemera, and 50 silver gelatin photographic prints. Ca. 1940. [CP SPC 108:5]

§6 Publicity. Ephemera, including travel brochures and picture postcards. 19 leaves; primarily photomechanical postcards and illustrated brochures, 3 silver gelatin photographic postcards. Ca. 1945. [CP SPC 108:6]

§7 Biltmore Estates. Interior and exterior views of homes in the residential addition which surrounds the resort, with newsclippings on the development of the estates. 1 ledger containing approximately 50 silver gelatin photographic prints. 1958 - 1968. [CP SPC 108:7]
§8 Programs. Ephemeral publications by the Biltmore, including the Weekly Guide and Current Events, which detail activities for guests at the hotel; also includes travel brochures and newscloppings. No photographs. Ca. 1970 - 1980. [CP SPC 108:8]

A11 ARIZONA EASTERN RAILROAD

The Arizona Eastern Railroad Company was first listed in the Interstate Commerce Commission's Statistics of Railways in the United States in 1907 as a one mile subsidiary of the Phoenix & Eastern Railroad. It was incorporated in 1910 and operated until it was merged into the Southern Pacific Railroad in 1955. See Donald B. Robinson's Encyclopedia of Western Railroad History: The Desert States (Caldwell, Idaho: Caston Printers, 1986).

[Photographs]. Construction of the Arizona Eastern Railroad, including bridges, track, and buildings along lines from Picacho (Cholla Mountain) to Chandler and Calva to Peridot. Primarily photographs of bridges, including the Gila River, Agua Fria, and San Carlos River bridges; many in the Tucson Division. Additional views of steam shovels, pile drivers, and other heavy equipment used in construction; of flood damage to the Gila River Bridge, including salvage of heavy equipment and damage to track; of the materials yard at Pozo, Arizona; of buildings at Avondale, Chandler, Buckeye, Kofa, and other Arizona locales; of telegraph facilities and inspection cars; and of track gangs and inspection crews.

The Calva to Peridot line was moved as a result of the construction of the Coolidge Dam Reservoir; some photographs of Coolidge Dam construction. Includes photographs of the residence of James B. Kitch, Indian Agent on the San Carlos Indian Reservation.

Most by an unidentified photographer; some by W. H. Moulthrop, Office and Field Manager, and a single image by H. P. Kelker. Typed captions. 1924 - 1928. [CP AE]

ARIZONA HIGHWAYS MAGAZINE

[Separation negatives]. A collection of color separation negatives made in the process of printing the magazine. Virtually every color image reproduced in the magazine is contained in this collection in a form that will preserve the color image, even though the original photograph may show significant color shift or fading. For every photograph, four or more black-and-white negatives were made to record the separate primary colors and contrast; these separate components can be reassembled to reproduce the color image.

Photographs depict scenic and tourist attractions in the state, including landscapes, wildlife, flora, Native Americans, and recreational activities. More than 200 photographers, many internationally renowned, are represented in the collection, including Chuck Abbott, Harry L. and Ruth Crockett, Wayne Davis, Carlos Elmer, Barry Goldwater, Esther Henderson, Jerry Jacka, Gill C. Kenny, Ray Manley, J. H. McGibbeny, Jerry McLain, Herb and Dorothy McLaughlin, David Muench, Josef Muench, Willis Peterson, R. C. and Clair Meyer Proctor, Allen C. Reed, James Tallon, Darwin Van Campen, Harry Vroman, and Roy Wieghorst.

More than 2,500 continuous-tone separation negatives; the collection also contains screened separations use in plate production. Publication dates from 1942 through 1986; additional materials are transferred from the magazine on a regular basis.

Restrictions: Access to the separation negatives is restricted for preservation; images may be viewed by requesting the published magazine. Copyright is held by the photographer; all requests for reproduction by permission only.

A39 CAMPBELL (GILBERT ALAN "BERT," 1906 - 1986?, and MYRTLE)

Gilbert Alan (Bert) Campbell was born in Snowflake, Arizona on September 4, 1906. After his education in the local school system, Campbell went into business as a grocer and meat packer. As a young man, he became very active in state politics. Moving to Phoenix in the early 1930s, Campbell began publication of a party newspaper, the Young Democrat, and served for a time as the Executive Secretary of the Young Democrat Club. Later he purchased the _Arizona Stockman_ magazine.

Apparently as the result of his activities to help re-elect Governor Sidney Osborn, Campbell was appointed to replace John C. McPhee as editor of _Arizona Highways_ in March of 1937. Originally targeted to the road construction industry, Campbell changed the face of the magazine by focusing on attracting tourism to the state of Arizona. Campbell edited only nine issues before being replaced by Raymond Carlson with the January 1938 issue. When Carlson was drafted into the Army in the late summer of 1943, Campbell was called upon to return as editor of Arizona Highways. During this two year period, Carlson's name remained on the masthead as editor. Campbell expanded the use of color photographs which Carlson had begun in 1938 and increased the number of photographs appearing in each issue.

Little is known about Myrtle Campbell. She is listed in the city directory along with Bert until 1970.

— K. L. Butler and Lin Waldron

[Photographs]. Arizona Highways illustrations; some were used in the magazine, although the majority of the images were never published. The photographs reflect the magazine's mission to present the state in a favorable light to attract tourists. Many images show modern, high quality roadways and road construction; others depict a variety of subjects reflecting the Arizona lifestyle. Recreational activities include golf, hunting, fishing, rodeos, horse shows, fashion shows, homes, public buildings, and resorts, especially the Arizona Biltmore. Scenic landscapes and pictorial views document virtually the entire state; all counties but Greenlee and La Paz (which was not yet formed) are mentioned. All photographs were taken in Arizona with the exception of one series of Mexico, including Nogales, Puerto Penasco (Rocky Point), and Guaymas. The collection also includes several snapshots of members of the Campbell family, their friends, and a Democratic political rally.

The photographer is unidentified in most cases but presumed to be Bert or Myrtle Campbell. Other identified photographers include Max Kegley and Jerry McLain.

The collection totals approximately 15,000 images in some 25,000 photographs, including prints, negatives, and transparencies. The majority are black and white negative and contact print pairs in three formats, 4 x 5 film pack, 2¼ x 3¼ sheet film, and 35mm negatives; many color transparencies, primarily Kodachrome and some Ektachrome in either 4 x 5 or lantern slide format. Preliminary inventory available. Ca. 1939 - 1945.

A56 DOUCETTE (FORREST E.; b. 1894)

Born May 16, 1894 in Little Falls, Minnesota and raised in Detroit, Michigan. Doucette worked for a weekly newspaper before he enlisted for service in World War I. He was injured in a mustard gas attack. In 1923 he entered the Veterans Hospital at Whipple Barracks in Prescott to aid in the recovery of his lungs. While there, he became editor of the Whipple Echo, a leading publication for veterans.

Doucette returned to Minnesota, but when cold weather exacerbated his war injury he returned to Arizona for the mild, dry climate, entering the Pastime Park Veterans Hospital in Tucson in 1927. After his release in 1928 he moved to Clifton, where he worked for the Greenlee Chamber of Commerce and was instrumental in publicizing the Coronado Trail. He later lived in Phoenix, where he was the editor of the first issue of the Arizona Yearbook. About 1938 he moved to Ontario, California, where he owned and operated a newspaper.

[Photographs scrapbooks]. Personal and professional photographs of Doucette. The earliest photographs in the collection are of friends and family in Minnesota just before leaving for Arizona. HUNT (GEORGE W. P.; 1859 - 1934)

Born in Huntsville, Missouri, the son of George Washington and Sarah Elizabeth (Yates) Hunt. He received his education in various public and private schools in Missouri and then ran away from home in 1878. He spent time traveling and working in the Midwest and Colorado, and finally arrived at Globe, Arizona in 1881.

Hunt worked at a number of odd jobs in Globe and served as a delivery boy for A. Bailey and Company, a general store that eventually became the Old Dominion Commercial Company. He would become president of the retail outfit in later years. Hunt was elected to the Arizona territorial legislature in 1893 and served until 1898, when he left politics to pursue business and personal interests.

Hunt was married to Helen Duett Ellison in 1904 and later that year he was elected to the territorial legislature once again. He was elected president of the legislative council in 1905 and again in 1909. Hunt was elected president of the Arizona Constitutional Convention in 1910 and was elected the first governor of the state of Arizona in 1912. He served as governor until January 1917, when he surrendered his office to Thomas E. Campbell after the disputed election of 1916. Hunt was reinstated by the courts in December of 1917; he declined to run in 1918. While he was out of office, Hunt served as a federal conciliator at the request of President Woodrow Wilson.

In 1920 President Wilson nominated Hunt as the United States Minister at Siam, a post he held until September 1921. Hunt returned to the governor’s office in January 1923 and served until defeated in the election of 1928. He ran for governor again in 1931, defeating incumbent John C. Phillips, and served his final terms as governor until 1933. George Hunt died at his home in Phoenix in 1934.

A100 LUHRS FAMILY

George Henry Nicholas Luhrs (originally Georg Heinrich Nicolous Lührs) was born in Hanover, Germany March 31, 1847. He immigrated to the United States in 1867 and arrived in Phoenix in 1878. Luhrs and Newell Herrick were partners in a carriage and wagon shop, and they later built and operated the Commercial Hotel.

On a return trip to Germany in 1884, Luhrs married Catharina Margarete Dodenhoff (b. February 10, 1862). They had four children:
Arthur Cleveland Luhrs (b. December 14, 1884; married Sadie Allen), Ella Louise Henrietta Luhrs (b. August 11, 1886; married Arthur Clyde Taylor), Emma Sophia Johanna Luhrs (b. December 13, 1888; married Reginald James Henry Stroud), and George Henry Nicholas Luhrs, Jr. (b. June 28, 1895). Arthur and George, Jr. both took degrees from Stanford University, George, Jr. taking a doctorate in law.

In 1890 Luhrs bought out the partnership from Herrick. The Luhrs family literally helped build Phoenix during the transition from frontier outpost to southwestern metropolis. In 1924 the Commercial Hotel was revitalized and renamed the Hotel Luhrs. The Luhrs Office Building and the Luhrs Tower opened in 1924 and 1929; both designed by Trost & Trost, they are two of the most distinctive historic buildings in Phoenix. The Luhrs also contributed to the cultural life of the city; the men were active members in the Scottish Rite Masons, the Shriners, the Knights Templar, and Odd Fellows, Mrs. Luhrs was active in the Eastern Star and helped found the Harmony Club.

After taking his law degree George, Jr. worked for the Phoenix firm of Armstrong, Lewis, and Kramer. In 1922 he began work for Luhrs properties, soliciting funds for the Luhrs Office Building. He never returned to the law practice, managing the Luhrs properties until they were sold in 1976.

A complete history of the Luhrs family may be found in the Luhrs family papers.

§1 [Photographs]. Snapshots and studio portraits of the family of George H. N. Luhrs and Catharina Margarete Dodenhoff Luhrs, including the Luhrs' children and grandchildren. Many photographs of both the Luhrs' siblings and their families, who had also immigrated to Phoenix. A number of photographs of Stanford and of the Southern California area, where the family would vacation.

A record of a pioneer and very prominent family in Phoenix, the photographs trace the social and economic development of the city and the state. Many photographs of the Luhrs properties, including the Commercial Hotel, Luhrs Office Building, and Luhrs Tower. Some materials relate to fraternal organizations.

Approximately 1,500 photographs total; most silver gelatin photographic prints, some in nineteenth-century formats and processes, several Cirkut panoramas. Virtually all have typed captions by George Luhrs, Jr. Finding guide available. Ca. 1880 - 1985. [CP LFPC]

§2 A Glimpse of Phoenix [photographs on advertising cards]. Views of Phoenix in a handmade album mounted on sheets with advertisements for area businesses; includes a self-portrait of E. A. Beattie, the photographer. 6 cyanotype photographs. Ca. 1895.

McLAUGHLIN (HERB and DOROTHY)

Phoenix-based commercial and stockhouse photographers. Herb McLaughlin (1918 - 1991) was born in Chicago, Illinois of LeRoy Clark and Gertrude (née Mizel) McLaughlin, and raised in Hammond, Indiana. By the time he was a teenager his photographs began appearing in local newspapers. In 1935 he began his photographic career under the name Mercury Pictures in Hammond. He moved to Phoenix in 1945 and began business under the name McLaughlin and Company. In 1947 he acquired the McCulloch Brothers, a commercial photography firm. In 1950 he married Dorothy Jensen Jolly (b. 1912 in Manti, Utah, daughter of James Joseph and Mary Alice (née Downard) Jensen). In 1955 they changed the name of the business to Arizona Photographic Associates. They were equal partners in the business, and together they worked on contracts from numerous national corporations, including Motorola, Goodyear, and Ford Motor Company. Although they retired from full-time picture-taking in 1978, the stockhouse continues operation.

The McLaughlins’ publications include Phoenix, 1870 - 1970, in Photographs (edited and published by the McLaughlins; Phoenix, Ariz.: 1970) and Arizona the Beautiful (Garden City, N.Y.: Doubleday, 1974). An issue of Arizona Highways (47:11) was devoted to their work.

In addition to numerous professional photographic awards and exhibits, the McLaughlins have been recognized for their prominent work in business and civic activities. Herb was president of the Phoenix Sales Executives Club and Phoenix Historical Society; Dorothy was active in the Soroptimists and member of many other organizations. The McLaughlins were granted Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degrees from ASU in 1981.

§1 McCulloch Brothers [photographs]. Commercial photographers operating in Phoenix from the first decade of the twentieth century through the mid-1940s. The McLaughlin’s acquired the McCulloch Brothers negative and prints files in 1947. Primarily architecture and street scenes, includes documentation of the construction of Frog Tanks Diversion Dam and the Lake Pleasant Dam. Approximately 5,000 silver gelatin negatives, including glass, nitrate, and safety bases; some vintage prints, later prints being made by the Department. A parallel, but incomplete series of electrostatic copies of prints. Ca. 1910 - ca. 1945.

Restrictions: Patrons may view electrostatic copies and later prints. Safety and glass negatives may be viewed by appointment; no access to nitrate negatives at this time. May be reproduced only with the permission of Dorothy McLaughlin. [CP MCLMB]

§2 Portraits [negatives]. Studio and location portraits of approximately 2,500 people photographed by Arizona Photographic Associates; many sitters were members or employees of Phoenix Sales and Marketing Executives
Club, American Legion Post 41 (Thunderbirds), and General Electric Computers; includes some wedding photography. Photographers include the McLaughlins, Walt Richey, Bill Mallory, Bowen, Wilfred C. Ziegler, Adams, Bernie, and others. Register available. Approximately 15,000 images. 1948 - 1981.

Restrictions: Negatives may be viewed by appointment. May be reproduced only with the permission of Dorothy McLaughlin.

[CP MCLP]

§3 Subject files [photographs]. The collection provides extensive documentation of the economic and social development of Phoenix and Arizona from the beginning of the twentieth century. The subject headings listed below are the McLaughlins' working categories.

Arizona subjects include agriculture, irrigation, and floods; cities; Jerome; city and county government; construction; dams; famous people; Glen Canyon Dam; governors; Grand Canyon; homes; hotels, resorts, and bars; Indians; lumber; military; mining; national parks and monuments; people and politicians, 1940s to present; ranching, cattle, and livestock; recreation; rodeos; scenic; schools; semi-centennial parade; shopping centers; state capitol; and transportation.

Phoenix subjects include aerials; agriculture, irrigation, and floods; airports and Sky Harbor; American Graduate School of International Management; Arizona city and county government; Arizona landscapes; Arizona state and federal government; banks; churches; cities; construction; famous people; homes; hospitals; hotels, resorts, and bars; lumber; mining; movie making; museums, parks, and monuments; newspapers, television, and radio; people; Phoenix Heritage House; Phoenix police and fire; ranching, cattle, and livestock; recreation, camping, hiking, dancing, softball, theaters, clubs, and square dancing; Albert J. Ross; shopping centers; schools, buildings, and students; transportation, automobiles, bicycles, trains, buses, and horse-drawn; utilities, power, telephone, and telegraph. A parallel series of photocopies are arranged chronologically. Other headings include USA and McCulloch Brothers photographs.

Approximately 7,500 silver gelatin photographic prints currently on deposit; when transfer is complete this archive will contain more than 350,000 photographic prints, negatives, and color transparencies. Ca. 1900 - ca. 1965.

Restrictions: Patrons may view electrostatic access copies; not all photographs have access copies. May be reproduced only with the permission of Dorothy McLaughlin.

A126 MONTEZUMA (CARLOS; 1866 - 1923)

Carlos Montezuma, a Yavapai-Apache Indian whose birth name was "Wassaja," was born near Four Peaks, Arizona. Orphaned as a child, he was adopted by itinerant photographer Charles Gentile. The two moved to Chicago, where Carlos received his education. Carlos graduated from high school at age 14. He took his degree in medicine and began practice on the south side of Chicago. He became a nationally known advocate for Indian rights and published a newspaper, Wassaja. Montezuma began to suffer from diabetes and tuberculosis, and he returned to the McDowell Reservation in Arizona in 1918.

The Montezuma photographs were received as a part of a collection of personal papers and correspondence from Frank Novak of Chicago in 1973. Additional photographs from other sources pertaining to Montezuma have been added to the collection over time.

[Photographs]. Personal photographs, including portraits of Montezuma, his wife Mary, Yavapai Indians of the Fort McDowell Reservation and members of other tribes, acquaintances of Euro-American origins, and souvenir postcards; snapshots and studio portraits. Additional images pertaining to Montezuma include views of graves at Fort McDowell made in 1975 and copies of Montezuma’s newspaper Wassaja. Photographers include Roos, G. V. Buck, and E. N. Moblo.

Many images are copies of photographs held by other institutions, including the Chicago Historical Society and the Smithsonian Institution. Many images are reproduced in Peter Iverson’s Carlos Montezuma and the Changing World of the American Indian (Albuquerque, N.M.: University of New Mexico Press, 1982).

MUbir (GERTRUDE HILL; 1909 - 1981)

Gertrude Muir was born October 26, 1909 at Granite Reef, the daughter of Edwin Bliss and Clara Hood Hill. Her family continued to live at Granite Reef, where her father was an engineer for the dam; they later moved to Tempe and then to Ysleta, Texas, where she graduated from high school in 1927 as valedictorian. Muir received her library certificate from the Riverside Library Service School in 1929; she later attended the University of Arizona in Tucson, taking her baccalaureate in anthropology in 1937 and her master's the following year. She took her master's in library science from the University of Denver in 1945 and worked as librarian at the Museum of New Mexico in Santa Fe from 1951 - 1960 and at Arizona State University in Tempe from 1963 - 1974. Muir married Robert Muir in 1960. She retired in 1974.

Edwin Bliss Hill was a noted printer and collector. His brother, Louis Hill, was an engineer for the Roosevelt Dam.

[Photographs]. Many amateur and commercial photographs, with some snapshots; Muir, an amateur photographer, probably made many of the photographs. Portraits include the Hill family, including Alva Thomas Hill, Francis Bliss Hill, Barbara Baird Hill, Edwin B. Hill. Many portraits of Muir, including childhood, though college, and in her adult years, often in her professional role as librarian.

Subjects include the University of Arizona while she studied there, showing student life, the buildings, and views of and from A Mountain. Other Arizona images are landscapes from around the state, including Rainbow Bridge, Mount McDowell, Flagstaff, the San Francisco Peaks, Apache Trail, Fish Creek Canyon and the Fish Creek Inn, Mount Sheldon, Lake Mary, Mormon Flat Lake, Whiteriver, Coolidge Dam, and the Superstition Mountains.

A number of images pertain to dams and water projects, including Granite Reef Dam with trash-removing equipment and the gatekeeper's house, the Livingston Intake on the Salt River, Stewart Mountain Dam, Meteor Crater, and the Gila River Bridge.

Photographs at national parks and monuments, many of ruins of cliff dwellings, include Walnut Canyon, Tonto National Monument, Casa Grande National Monument, Saguaro National Monument, Grand Canyon, the Painted Desert, and Chiricahua National Monument. Other tourist sites include the Bird Cage Theater, Boot Hill, and the OK Corral in Tombstone; Mission San Xavier del Bac outside Tucson, and the Old Jail and Turquoise Mine at Courtland.

Many views of Tempe and other Arizona cities, including Flagstaff, Phoenix, and Tucson show public buildings, street scenes, and the University of Arizona.

Muir's anthropological interests are reflected in the many images of Native Americans, including Navajo, Hopi, Apache, Plains, Taos, Zuni, and Pima tribes. Photographs include a wikup, artifacts which probably are from a museum collection, trading posts. Many of these images date from her job at the Museum of New Mexico and document Native American cultures (modern and pre-Columbian).

1,061 photographs; most silver gelatin photographic prints—a few handcolored, including 1 bound album, 1 souvenir booklet, and 2 paper-bound books of prints; also 1 albumen print. 173 postcards, including 18 miniature cards in a souvenir container. Ca. 1860 - 1974; most 1940 - 1970.

A143 PHOENIX HOMESTEAD NEIGHBORHOOD ASSOCIATION

A historic neighborhood district in Phoenix listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The neighborhood is located roughly between 26th and 28th streets, and Thomas and Osborn.

The Phoenix Homestead Historic District illustrates the federal government's resettlement program during the Great Depression and the relocation of disadvantaged farmers or unemployed urban workers to planned, parttime subsistence farm projects. The experimental program was initiated by the New Deal Administration in 1933.

The Phoenix Homestead District was originally known as the Baxter Tract. This district was, and is, in two sections once separated by cooperative fields and pastures. The farms were later sold, subdivided, and became a residential area of privately built homes.

The first section, completed in 1935 and including Pinchot Avenue, had 25 homes, of which only 14 remain. The architect for these houses was Robert T. Evans, a Phoenix engineer. The northern section, completed in 1937, consists of 35 homes laid out in a T-shape. The architect was Vernon De Mars, a career public servant of note. Homes in both sections were constructed of adobe brick manufactured on the site. Many of the homes exhibit a romanticized Pueblo Revival style, combining irregular massing, battered and plastered walls, and heavy timber framing with Mission Revival detailing in windows, doors, and corbeling.

The entire resettlement program was disbanded in 1942 after the onset of World War II. Considerable national debate related to the cooperative farms caused the project to be labeled by some as socialistic, or even Communist. However, surviving residents of the Depression indicate their lives in the Homestead area were far better than many.
They had independence, decent homes, ample food, and a fine environment for growing families.

[Photographs]. Families and homes of neighborhood residents, including the Maurice and Veda Frank family (2942 North 28th Street), Charles and Carolyn Dye family (2303 North 29th Street), Otto and Esther Anderson family (3132 North 27th Street) and Kenneth and Edna Griggs family (3136 North 27th Street). 27 silver gelatin-bromide photographic copy prints and negatives. Dorothy Robinson was the daughter of William H. and Grace Perley Robinson. Her father supervised the building of the Ingleside Inn about 1908. The inn, located on Indian School Road in Phoenix, was the first winter resort in the Valley. When construction was complete, he continued as manager until he was hired by the San Marcos resort in Chandler. Dorothy attended public school in Arizona and college at the University of California and Tempe Normal School (now Arizona State University). She began her teaching career at the Chandler school about 1918. She later worked as librarian of the Payne Training School of Arizona State University until her retirement in 1967. Ms. Robinson was the author of several books and manuscripts on Arizona history, including Arizona for Boys and Girls, Boys’ and Girls’ Arizona, Geographical Background of Arizona, Navajo Indians Today, Poems about Arizona (unpublished, ca. 1950), and A History of Early Tempe (co-authored with Lola Brogh Bonham).

[Photographs]. Primarily snapshots and travel views; some commercially made images. Snapshots of Robinson from infancy to adulthood, including school portraits made at the Center Street School and the Chandler Grade School.

Many family photographs of Robinson’s parents, beginning with their baby pictures. Includes Grace and William prior to their marriage on an outing with Grace’s sister, William’s trips to California and the Orient. Additional images show group portraits, family outings, trips along the Apache Trail and to San Luis Rey, and family friends, including the Hearl, Farrish, and Fulwiler families.

Photographs of Grace as an adult include snapshots of friends Polly Perley, Helen Robinson Sartell (probably the sister of William), Nancy Perley (possibly Grace’s mother), and Bruce Robinson. Additional images pertain to Dorothy’s career, including the Payne Training School faculty, Chandler teachers getting ready for their first plane ride about 1920, and Ira Payne. Other images are from Robinson’s vacations.

Several photographs of the Robinson’s home in the Bennett Addition in Phoenix at 634 North Third Avenue and of the Chandler house; some interior views made about 1890.

Many images pertain to the Robinsons’ time at the Ingleside Inn and the San Marcos. Exterior and interior views of the Inn, its clubhouse, and Harry Colles, a golf professional at the Inn. Snapshots of the San Marcos include the building, guests, golfer J. Witherspoon, gardens and grounds, and dude rancher for the resort, Bill Huggins.

Other views made around Arizona, showing prominent citizens. Native Americans are a prominent subject and include the Navajo and Hopi tribes and scenes on the Gila River and McDowell reservations. Many were used in Robinson’s books.

1,334 photographic prints; most silver gelatin, some gelatin-chloride, cyanotype, and Polacolor. Many are mounted in 4 albums. Ca. 1860 - 1967. [CP RD]

A159  RUPPÉ (REYNOLD J.)

Ruppé received his bachelor’s from the University of New Mexico in 1949 and his doctorate from Harvard in 1953. From 1953 - 1960 he was a professor at the State University of Iowa; during that same time he served as editor of the Journal of the Iowa Archaeological Society.

Ruppé joined the faculty of Arizona State University in 1960 as the chair of the joint Department of Sociology and Anthropology (1960 - 1963). He then became chair of the autonomous Department of Anthropology (1963 - 1973). Ruppé was instrumental in establishing the master’s program in museum studies at the University. He remained active in the Department until his retirement in 1986 and is currently a Professor Emeritus.

- Julie Katz

[Photographs] Materials withdrawn from Ruppé’s papers. The papers, which include field notes, survey forms, correspondence, compiled data and analysis, and writings, document fieldwork conducted 1948 - 1952 by Ruppé as the basis of his doctoral dissertation. Much of this fieldwork was done in conjunction with Alfred E. Dittter, then a graduate student at the University of Arizona and later a fellow faculty member in the Anthropology Department at Arizona State University.

The surveys and excavations were conducted in the Cebollita Mesa region of west-central New Mexico. Specific regional sub-areas (and their abbreviations) included in this collection are Los Pilares (LP), Acoma Pueblo (ACO), Los Veteados (LV), and two unidentified areas abbreviated OG and CEB.

Images show ruins of Native American cultures at the sites, including pictographs and petroglyphs, ceramic vessels and shards, structures, lithics, grindstones, manos and metates, botanical remains, site overviews and the surrounding terrain. Finding guide available. 937 silver gelatin photographic prints, 121 silver gelatin photographic negatives.

A195  UPDIKE (LISLE CHANDLER; 1890 - 1970)

Born in Erie, Pennsylvania, Updike never received a formal education; he and his sister were tutored by their parents as they traveled extensively across the country. Updike was an itinerant photographer, making tintypes at state fairs, circuses, medicine shows, and wild west shows. In 1906 he entered into a partnership with William Pennington, operating the Pen Dike Studio in Durango, Colorado. Pennington maintained the studio while Updike continued to travel throughout the West in a five-wheel hack outfitted as a darkroom.

Updike is known for his photographs of Native Americans and early Arizona ranch life, many of which appeared in the first issues of Arizona Highways. In 1908 he was commissioned to photograph the Mesa Verde ruins for the Smithsonian Institution.

Updike moved his studio to St. Johns, Arizona in 1912, changing the studio's name to Jen Dike. The same year he became a member of the Church of Latter Day Saints and married Janet Jarvis.

He moved his studio to Phoenix in 1932. He retired from photography in 1954 and turned his studio over to his son Earl. Earl changed the studio's name to Updike Studios, which continues to operate in Phoenix and Salt Lake City, Utah.

— Mary Anne Redding

[Photographs and ephemera]. The collection contains work by Updike, Pennington, or one of the various affiliated studios; the negatives were made by Updike or a member of his immediate family. Portraits were made in the studio, itinerant camps, and with his “Original Photograph Dime Machine,” and depict Euro-American and Native American customers and his family. Landscapes include Monument Valley, Utah; Mesa Verde National Monument, Colorado; Mission San Xavier del Bac in Tucson, Arizona; Grand Canyon National Park, Arizona; and the Los Burros Civilian Conservation Corps' Camp near Lost Pines, Arizona. Three albums include additional images of the above subjects, many with manuscript annotations and letters from Updike to his grown sons and their families. Finding guide available. 420 photographs, most silver gelatin photographic prints—some hand-colored—and some nitrate, acetate, and safety negatives; many negatives were printed by Mary Anne Redding. 1901 - 1976; prints by Redding date 1990.

In 1960 he opened a studio in the house in which he still resides; he later moved his studio to Seventh Street and Indian School. Zudell did all types of photography, including commercial, architectural, commissioned, and speculative work.

In 1970 he obtained his teaching certificate and later took his master's in elementary education. He never taught full time, but did do substitute teaching throughout the Salt River Valley.

Zudell sold his studio and most of his equipment in 1985. He continues to do some freelance work.

The Chicano Studies Collection was established in 1970 in response to the academic needs of both Chicano students and faculty in higher education. Its purpose was to obtain works by and about Mexican Americans in the United States. The collection was initially composed of books which were representative and reflective of the current thought and philosophy of the Chicano movement. The collection gathered works which gave expression and voice to those writers, researchers, and educators who wanted recognition of Mexican-American history, culture, language, tradition, heritage, and ethnicity.

Over time, the collection expanded to include photographs, ephemera, and manuscripts. In 1989 the newly-named Chicano Research Collection changed its focus to the acquisition of primary research collections a resources relevant to Mexican Americans and the Chicano Experience in the United States.

C4  DECKER (PHILIP; b. 1961)
Born March 15, 1961 in Maryland, Decker received his bachelor's degree in philosophy from the University of Maryland, where he graduated with honors in 1982. After graduating, he worked as a social worker for the Maryland Department of Employment and Training, a position which involved counseling migrant and seasonal farmworkers. In 1983 he traveled to New York City and began studying photography at the International Center of Photography.

With this training he returned to Maryland to photograph the lifestyle and working conditions of Haitian farmworkers. While working on this project he met several Mexican laborers, which led him to his next project documenting migrant Mexican farmworkers in the Southwest and the process of immigration. Public interest in this project led to several television presentations, slide lectures, and photographic exhibitions. The photographs from this project, as well as several articles by Decker, have appeared in numerous publications, including New Look, Nuestro, and Foto Zoom.

ASU Photograph Collection [UP ASUB A355 1970s 6]

The University Archives serves as the official repository of the University’s permanently valuable records, documenting the institution’s administration, history, and culture. Those records exist in many formats, including paper (correspondence, ledgers, minutes), photographs, films, videos, and artifacts. In addition to those records produced by the University, the Archives also collects faculty papers and materials relating to the institution from the ASU community.

The photographs in the collections document the faculty, staff, and students of the University, their social and academic activities, and their environment. The Archives is a valuable resource for researching alumni, faculty, and many areas of scholarship, including the teaching profession, architecture and urban planning, fine arts, music, dance, and forestry. Other significant research areas include sports, fraternities and sororities, and the campus.

The major portion of the Archives' collection of photographs consists of an artificial collection of images arranged by subject. This collection, called the Arizona State University Collection, is grouped into five areas: athletics, buildings and grounds, divisions and organizations, general subjects, and people. The remainder of the photographs fall into two categories: discrete collections arranged by provenance and textual materials--theses, dissertations, and university publications--which contain photographs.

The Arizona State University Collection is described first, each major division broken down by subject and classification number. Provenance and textual collections are described second, arranged by main entry.

The Visual Literacy Collection holds materials pertaining to the academic discipline of visual literacy and records of the International Visual Literacy Association. The Collection includes the books and papers of Dr. Joel A. Benedict, John L. Debes III, and Harry Woods. The collection has also received a significant collection of educational materials from Eastman Kodak.

Established in 1988, the Visual Literacy Collection is the newest research division within the Department of Archives and Manuscripts. Although the Collection contains a significant amount of photographic material, the holdings are still being arranged and described and are not yet available for patron use.

Please consult with the Curator of Photographs concerning graphic materials in the Visual Literacy Collection.
