In a quaint lit-tle town In a val-ley way down In the heart of the When the tired lit-tle flow'r Wan-der'd back to it's bow'r In the heart of the Berk-shire Hills There a wild flow-er grew from the bud till it hills once more It was fad-ed and worn It was with-er'd and knew How a heart with long-ing fills Then it wand-er'd a-way from the torn E'er the spring-time of life was o'er Oh you wild lit-tle flow'rs stay at ones old and gray Who had watch'd o'er it day by day And now they say home in your bow'rs. And the lovd ones old and gray No more will say
