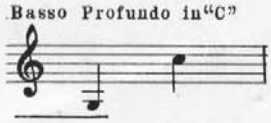
SM5192

GET THIS SONG
FOR YOUR PLAYER PIANO
OR TALKING MACHINE

Bells of the Sea

Basso Profundo in "C"



Basso Cantante in "D"

Baritone in "F"

Words by ARTHUR J. LAMB

Music by ALFRED SOLMAN

Andante marciale

Copyright MCMXXII by Sam Fox Pub.Co., Cleveland, O. U. S. A.
International Copyright Secured.
Printed in the U.S.A.

sail - or cries to the ang - ry skies, And the soft winds croon to the gold - en moon Of a bells on the dis - tant shore; And his mes - sage glad and love that was not in vain; And the moon - lit waves re - rit.
a tempo
true Rings out o'er the o - cean blue.
peat The song of a joy com - plete.
rit.
a tempo

(With a rolling swing)
Bells of the sea are you ring - ing for me,
mf
il basso ben marcato Ring - ing and sing - ing the old mel - o - dy? Some-where to-night on the roll - ing foam, Some - one is long - ing for sweet-heart and home!
attacca
Bells of the sea, Will you tell her for me, My love is all that a accelerando
il basso ben marcato

love ought to be? For love that is true nev - er knows a doubt;
mf
ff
Bells of the sea ring out! Bells of the sea ring
c f maestoso
1
out!
2
out! Ding Tempo marcato
f
D.S.𝄋
p
dong! Ding dong! Ding dong!
mf
p
pp

Bells of the Sea.

Out on his ship where the white foam flies,
Out where the breakers roar,
A sailor cries to the angry skies
And the bells on the distant shore;
And his message glad and true
Rings out o'er the ocean blue.

Bells of the sea, are you ringing for me,
Ringing and singing the old melody?
Somewhere tonight on the rolling foam
Someone is longing for sweetheart and home!
Bells of the sea, will you tell her for me
My love is all that a love ought to be?
For love that is true never knows a doubt;
Bells of the sea ring out!

Safe in the harbor of home sweet home
Fond lovers meet again,
The soft winds croon to the golden moon
Of a love that was not in vain;
And the moonlit waves repeat
The song of a joy complete.

Arthur J. Lamb.