| GRA     | 521         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio I     | Students translate data, stories and references that they collect in their research into masterful visual narratives. This studio is an inquisitive environment for exploring ways to frame information and weave stories with graphic design. Students acquire new knowledge as individuals and as a group. Emphasizes studio-based research, conceptual development and articulation of process, voice and a high level of design execution.  | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Visual Communication Design major. Credit is allowed for only GRA 521 or GRA 590 (Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio I) |
| GRA     | 522         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio II    | Encourages students to develop a framework for understanding the role of design systems, tools and objects as cultural artifacts and their reflection on social diversity. In particular, students focus on the cultural experience of collaborative consumption as it is fostered through visual communication design.   | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 521. | GRA     | 621         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio III            | Structured around the Design School traveling-studio model, this studio challenges students to work together to identify new design opportunities. For approximately one week during the semester, students travel to an off-campus location to examine a local condition there for which new design solutions are needed. Students return to ASU and continue working on the project for the semester.   | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School                            | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 522  |
| GRA     | 622         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio IV             | As a culmination of study at the master level, the student is responsible for the development of an individually determined, semester-long project in response to defined objectives, periodic commentary by committee, and formal review. Students meet regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Final faculty review and project book containing a written as well as graphic theoretical component are the forms of final presentation for this contribution to the field of visual communication design. | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School                            | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 621  |

Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course.   | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z1            | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 1-3   |                 |   |
| GSC     | 501         | War, Conflict and Security     | Explores the rapidly changing and highly complex geopolitical, technological and strategic context within which modern conflict and war occur. Introduces the profound social, political, economic and cultural implications of the changing nature of war and conflict. Provides an overview of the historical background of war and conflict, and some of the classic philosophical and military-strategic theories and conceptions of war. Introduces the institutional framework, the Westphalian state-based system of modern international law and relations, within which much of the theory and practice of modern conflict and war has developed.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 502         | Security Studies               | Continues the exploration of the rapidly changing and highly complex geopolitical, technological and strategic context within which modern conflict and war occur; the profound social, political, economic and cultural implications of the changing nature of war and conflict. Provides an overview of several fundamental themes that run through the history of war and strategy, and discusses the increasing importance of nonmilitary "soft power" in managing conflict situations. Also introduces the importance of regional knowledge in conflict as a critical operational competence (using the Russian invasion of Crimea and Ukraine as a case study), as well as the broader challenges of civilizational conflict and the importance of identity and narrative in modern conflict.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 503         | Future of War                  | Provides an overview of key issues, themes and ideas associated with the future of war. Contextualizes this discussion with a reflection on the impact of 9/11, especially within the U.S. Engages a number of core concepts, including the meaning, nature and experience of war including theories that violence is in decline. Also considers the changing impact of new wars on civilians, shifts in current and future technology and future scenarios including questions of climate change, global demographics and potential major power conflicts. Links the ideas, theories and understandings of the future of war with specific cases and concrete examples.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 504         | Understanding Conflict and War | Provides a critical overview of different definitions and meanings of war and armed conflict. Engages key theories used to understand conflict including realism, neorealism, liberalism and constructivism. Considers core issues in the field, linking empirical studies with explanations for what drives, sustains and resolves conflict including reviewing the fact that democratic states tend not to go to war with each other (the democratic peace); the structure and logic of arms races; escalation and alliance; and core ideas regarding peace, conflict management and conflict resolution. Many of the issues and theories reviewed in this class are linked with case studies and concrete examples.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 505         | Law of War                     | Provides an overview of key elements of the law of war, also known as international humanitarian law (IHL) and the law of armed conflict (LOAC). Engages basic questions of international law, reviewing its history, sources and structure. Covers jus ad Bellum, the rules governing how states legally go to war as well as jus in bello, the established ideas regarding how to manage actions during armed conflict. Covers key principles within the law of war, including distinction, proportionality and necessity as well as reviewing the differences between international and noninternational armed conflicts and other key ideas. Reviews the systems through which the law of war is enforced and also considers basic theoretical and practical issues regarding compliance. In general, links the ideas, practices, rules and understandings of the law of war with specific cases and concrete examples. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 506         | U.S. Politics of Security      | Builds a foundational understanding of the complex system of formal and informal actors and structural forces that shape U.S. security policy. Starts with both theoretical and case study examinations of the role domestic politics plays in the production of policy decisions. Analyzes critical institutional actors and relationships between actors, including: the President and Congress, the National Security Council and interagency, and the civilian-military relationship. Finally, investigates key structural forces placed on the policy-making process by the American society, and the relationship between policymakers and the  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| GSC     | 507         | Global Politics of Security                           | Offers several approaches to understanding the global politics of security, including: the structure of international and multinational security institutions and actors including nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), the United Nations' Security Council, peacekeeping missions, regional organizations (NATO, EU, Inter-American System, ASEAN) and others. Also considers the roles of private military and intelligence contractors and corporations working on issues of direct and indirect relation to security issues. Through specific case studies and examples, reviews the operation of these bodies and their complex relationships.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences       | School of Politics and Global Studies          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 508         | Comparative Studies of Conflict                       | Provides a critical overview of key theories on the causes, justifications and structures of political conflict and the use of violence. Begins by outlining core issues within the problem of social order, that is, how to think about managing governance and power. Reviews the idea of "collective action" and its link with force and violence, ideas that are contrasted with nonviolence as a political strategy. Then considers civil wars and interstate wars, comparing these forms of organized violence, as well as the current challenges of armed nonstate actors (within an international system premised on states) and an overview of the meaning of peace. Links the issues and theories reviewed in this class with case studies and concrete examples as a means of linking key ideas with their practical and policy implications.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences       | School of Politics and Global Studies          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 509         | Emerging Technologies and Global Security             | Provides an introduction to the implications of accelerating changes in military and security technologies, fueled by rapid developments in five core technology systems: nanotechnology, biotechnology, information and communications technology (ICT), robotics and applied cognitive science. Also introduces the idea of revolutions in military affairs, a concept that has been used to frame discussions about the strategic implications of new technologies from drones to cyber.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences       | School of Politics and Global Studies          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 510         | Governance in Post-Conflict and Transitional Contexts | One of the most pressing current global security policy issues involves understanding and implementing strategies, mechanisms and processes to address post-conflict and transitional contexts. How do societies create and manage representational governance after the fall of authoritarian regimes? How can institutions be rebuilt and reconstituted? How can a social order address the justice demands of victims of brutal political violence whose suffering was often a key element of prior systems of rule? Provides a critical introduction to the field of post-conflict reconstruction and transitional justice. Reviews the tense and uncertain nature of post-conflict environments and their challenges, engages the security questions raised by peacekeeping and stability operations. Also considers the difficulties of governance and reconstruction in the aftermath of conflict. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences       | School of Politics and Global Studies          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 511         | Terrorism and Insurgency                              | Provides a critical overview of the use of terror by governments, insurgents and other nonstate actors. Engages the definition of terrorism and provides an overview of key practices and strategies. Reviews key theories as to the causes, meaning and impact of the deployment of terror as a strategy by distinct groups. This involves a consideration of state terror, insurgencies and global terror networks. Links many of the core ideas reviewed in this class with a set of case studies designed to ground the broader discussion of terror within specific situations and contexts.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences       | School of Politics and Global Studies          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 512         | Global Trends   | Provides an overview of a number of key issues within global politics in the post-Second World War era. Reviews important institutions, including the United Nations, the World Bank, the International Monetary Fund. Provides a critical review of key theories, discourses and practices of international development, decolonization, democratization, poverty and gender issues. Reviews these major aspects of global society in relationship to core questions of governance and social order with a consideration of past, present and future trends.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences       | School of Politics and Global Studies          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| GTD     | 509         | Technology and Development in North Africa                       | Examines historical and current patterns of political and socioeconomic development in North Africa, including the role of technological development and current events.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only GTD 509 or GTD 598 (Technology and Development in North Africa)          |
| GTD     | 510         | Technology and Development in Sub-Saharan Africa                 | Examines historical and current patterns of political and socioeconomic development in Sub-Saharan Africa, including the role of technological development and current events.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only GTD 510 or GTD 598 (Technology and Development in Sub-Saharan Africa)    |
| GTD     | 511         | Development Policy and Practices                                 | Since the Bretton Woods Agreements in 1944, enormous energy has been devoted to generating the right tools for global development policy. Yet, little attention is given to the relationship between these tools, the practice of development and actual outcomes. At best, it is understood as a "gap" between the theory of development policy and practices. There is no reflection on what the good development policy looks like or what collective learning we have thus far. Informs students on the complexity of policy making and its relationship to development practices through time. Creates an intellectual space to discuss the practices of global development; uses case studies to enhance students' creativity and skill needed in managing and negotiating critical development challenges. Approaches development policy (models, strategies and project design) primarily as a tool to legitimize power relation rather than to orient practice for desired development outcomes. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 512         | International Governance and Development of Nuclear Technologies | Examines the historical context, present development and possible futures of nuclear technologies around the world. Topics include the origins of the modern nuclear era (1945-present), the nuclear fuel cycle including waste management, nuclear energy for security and modernization, nuclear catastrophes, and new possibilities in nuclear technologies, as well as international policies, national imperatives and local concerns with nuclear development. Students gain a better understanding of the complex political, environmental, cultural and economic values that inform and shape the development and implementation of, as well as resistance to, nuclear technologies.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only GTD 512 or GTD 598 (Technology and Development in Global Nuclear Energy) |
| GTD     | 584         | Internship   | Structured practical experience following a contract or plan, supervised by faculty and practitioners.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 590         | Reading and Conference   | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 592         | Research   | Independent study in which a student, under the supervision of a faculty member, conducts research that is expected to lead to a specific project such as a thesis or dissertation, report, or publication. Assignments might include data collection, experimental work, data analysis, or preparation of a manuscript.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 593         | Applied Project  | Preparation of a supervised applied project that is a graduation requirement in some professional majors.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 595         | Continuing Registration  | Used in situations where registration is necessary but where credit is not needed. Replaces arbitrary enrollment in reading and conference, research, thesis, dissertation, etc. Used by students when taking comprehensive examinations, defending theses or dissertations, or fulfilling the continuous enrollment requirement in doctoral programs. Credit is not awarded, and no grade is assigned.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z3            | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 598         | Special Topics   | Topical courses not offered in regular course rotation--e.g., new courses not in the catalog, courses by visiting faculty, courses on timely topics, highly specialized courses responding to unique student demand.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1-4   |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GTD     | 599         | Thesis   | Supervised research focused on preparation of thesis, including literature review, research, data collection and analysis, and writing.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z2            | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCD     | 100         | Introduction to the Science of Health Care Delivery              | Introduces the science of health care delivery in the United States. Presents basic concepts in health services, health care organizations, and the delivery of safe, accessible, high-quality health care. Solidifies concepts through the use of assignments, exams and discussions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions     | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 |   |
| HCD     | 101         | Introduction to Public Health                                    | Introduces public health in the United States. Familiarize students with the broad discipline of public health and how it influences community and individual health status. Discusses the role of various agencies in public health, methods of measurement and evaluation, major public health issues in the United States, and factors that contribute to individual and community health. Solidifies concepts through the use of in-class discussion, group work and individual analysis.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions     | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only HCD 101 or PBH 100   |
| HCD     | 191         | First-Year Seminar   | Small course emphasizing student-faculty discussion and interaction. Required for first-year students. Must have taken 25 or fewer credit hours. Consulting an academic advisor before enrolling is recommended.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions     | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 1-3   |                 |   |
| HCD     | 194         | Special Topics   | Covers topics of immediate or special interest to a faculty member and students.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions     | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 1-4   |                 |   |
| HCD     | 201         | Economics for Health Majors                                      | Introduces economics and demonstrates the relevance of economic principles to the study of health care delivery systems and public health. Combines elements of a traditional introductory economics curriculum with broad coverage of the history of economics, and specific application to current issues in health care delivery and public health policy. Prepares the student for further study of health economics.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions     | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only HCD 201 or PBH 201   |
| HCD     | 210         | Cultural Aspects of Health                                       | Examines how culture influences health, health care practices, barriers to health care, interactions with health care professionals, and health disparities in the U.S. Addresses the need for cultural competence among health practitioners.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions     | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     | C               |   |

| HCD     | 501         | Biostatistics and Data Management            | Provides an understanding of the statistical tools and principles of research design and methods in health behavior research in health environments. Encompasses an overview of quantitative, qualitative and mixed designs and focuses on the interpretation and communication of health behavior research through published reports and presentations. Incorporates research approaches and methodologies utilized in an array of content areas. Helps students gain a strong conceptual understanding and application of the statistical tools and research methods used to answer research questions of interest to health and health behavior researchers; it does not focus on mathematical treatments of underlying assumptions and formulae and related statistical problems sets or exercises. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCD     | 502         | Health Care Systems and Design               | Introduces direct health care delivery structures and processes within and across health care settings, and their impact on the patient, family and community experience of the health care system and services. Examines the interaction among people, resources, delivery systems and built environments using perspectives, tools and strategies from multiple disciplines to evaluate strengths, gaps and opportunities for system improvements.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| HCD     | 511         | Health Economics, Policy, and Payment Models | Economics provides a framework to understand and predict human decision making under scarcity, uncertainty and imperfect information. Examines concepts central to health care economics and their application to important decisions made by patients, families, practitioners, administrators and policy makers. Uses an individual family's scenario through a progressive case study to evaluate how incentives and information affect the health and health care of each family member. Each meeting integrates basic economic principles, existing facts and knowledge from economic research, and individual perspectives and experience regarding how these concepts apply to health care policy.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Degree- or Nondegree-seeking graduate; Credit is allowed for only BMD 511 or HCD 511 |
| HCD     | 520         | Population Health                            | Presents population health within a framework of health care delivery, public health, health promotion and prevention, health policy, and community programs and resources. Emphasizes a solutions-based perspective consistent with the Triple Aim.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| HCD     | 531         | The Health Care System  | Health care delivery in the United States, including its composition, function and historical organization. The broad discipline of health services systems, health care organizations, and the delivery of safe, accessible, high-quality health care. Discusses the health care system from the perspective of various patient populations, including the aging patient population. Examines the influence of health care reform on health care delivery and costs. Solidifies concepts through the use of in-class case studies and discussions.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |
| HCD     | 532         | Health Care Management and Finance                              | Health care organizations are very complex institutions and require sophisticated understanding of modern management techniques. Provides a comprehensive overview of health care management concepts and principles with a focus on developing individual management skills. Centered on the management function and its unique purpose for an organization. Emphasizes planning, organizing, motivating and controlling, and how to acquire competency in these functions. Also addresses health care finance, which is an essential management competency.   | N                 | LEC               | Y               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |
| HCD     | 540         | Seminar in Science of Health Care Delivery                      | Provides an introduction to the science of health care delivery, an exciting field that focuses on how to achieve the quality care that providers want to deliver and patients expect to receive. Too often quality care is compromised by inadequately designed systems of care. Provides an overview of the health care delivery system and then introduces the major components of the field.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |
| HCD     | 550         | Capstone  | Discusses the results from student capstone projects, done in teams, and these projects related to broad topics explored during the prior coursework in the program. Capstone projects are identified early in the master's program in conjunction with and overseen by the degree leaders and the industry partners, and often a health care organization or health agency. These projects are worked on through the year with final written and verbal reports due in the last half of the semester.  | N                 | RSC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 1-2   |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCD 502 with C or better  |
| HCD     | 560         | Systems Metabolic Physiology                                    | Studies vertebrate energy metabolism in the context of systems physiology. With a particular focus on mammals and especially humans, discusses macronutrient storage, mobilization and utilization at the whole organism level. Presents theory and practice of several methodologies used to measure metabolic turnover, including indirect calorimetry, mass balance, isotopic tracers and doubly labeled water. Topics include metabolic rate and fuel selection during rest, locomotion and environmental stress such as energy scarcity or oversupply.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 3.00 GPA; degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| HCD     | 561         | Cellular Energetics and Metabolism                              | Focuses on the thermodynamics and kinetics of energetic processes at the cellular level. Discusses the metabolism of macronutrients by cells, principally skeletal muscle, cardiac muscle, adipose and liver. Presents membrane transport, energy storage and mobilization, non-oxidative/oxidative pathways of ATP synthesis and energy dissipation processes. Develops and uses concepts of metabolic control, energetic efficiency, metabolic scope and signaling to explore classic and current biomedical literature. Particularly emphasizes mitochondrial metabolism, including the chemiosmotic theory, proton leak, superoxide (free radical) production, interactions between the glycolytic and oxidative pathways, and the central role mitochondria play in health, disease and mortality. Describes the theory and practice of several methodologies central to the study of energy metabolism. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 3.00 GPA; degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| HCD     | 562         | Emerging Bioethical Issues in Translational Biomedical Research | Discusses ethics and policy issues related to translational biomedical sciences research. Emphasizes research involving human subjects. Topics include: genomics and biospecimen research, especially related to biobanks, including confidentiality issues, genetic testing, ownership of genetic information, community advisory boards and return of results questions; regulation of research and proposals including human research oversight by the Institutional Review Board (IRB); relationship between medical research and medical treatment; and communication with patients, within and between institutions and with the general public.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 3.00 GPA; degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| HCD     | 563         | The Metabolic Syndrome  | Provides a comprehensive understanding of the metabolic syndrome from an environmental, genetic and molecular perspective. Also discusses the treatment of this complex disease including lifestyle changes, pharmacological interventions and surgical procedures. Evidenced-based course where research guides class lectures and discussions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |

| HCD     | 570         | Process Engineering   | Provides an overview of process engineering and the specifics of Lean Six Sigma as it applies quality improvement/process improvement in health care. The current health care system cannot deliver the necessary quality to ensure safety or consistent outcomes in predictable and controllable ways. It is essential to understand the impact of process engineering to improve the performance of health care delivery, and to understand the steps to performing a Lean Six Sigma process improvement project. This course builds on the quality improvement techniques introduced in earlier course work. Also enables students to obtain their Green Belt Certification in Lean Six Sigma.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |
| HCD     | 575         | Leadership and Professionalism                                  | Integrates principles of leadership theory, innovation leadership, change leadership and systems thinking through didactic and experiential learning. Identifies characteristics of successful leaders in health and health care, develops competence and confidence in creativity and innovation, and identifies ways to implement meaningful change in the dynamic health care environment. Applies theories to case studies in health and health systems to promote critical analysis, discussion and reflection on topics that provide the framework for future coursework.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School for the Science of Health Care Delivery | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |

| HCI     | 542         | Systems Thinking in a Complex Environment   | Examines basic and advanced systems principles as they relate to national and international health and healing systems. Specific emphasis is given to systems thinking from a complexity science perspective and the implications for innovation.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 538 with C or better                                 |
| HCI     | 543         | Approaches to Health Care Innovation  | Theory-based survey course introduces approaches to lead innovation in an organization. Many change initiatives are designed by those not completing the work, leaving workers isolated, restricted and powerless. Teaches health care leaders to value collaboration with and seeking input from those who will carry out the work. Analyzes approaches to planned change: positive deviance, appreciative inquiry and creation of a learning organization. Students construct a change plan using an appropriate approach to address a health care problem. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student            |
| HCI     | 544         | IT for Health Care Innovation   | Focuses on the information technology (IT) trends and their strategic application in health care. Students develop an IT strategy that addresses a specific health care area of concern. Students gain an understanding of the role of IT in health care innovation and develop skills in business process improvement, change management, strategy definition, value proposition, responding to feedback and managing resistance.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 538 with C or better                                 |
| HCI     | 545         | Public Speaking for Innovation: Building Your Presence and Making the Case for Change | New ideas take a lot of explaining, and innovation often involves persuasion. Builds presence as a speaker and a leader--and gains expertise in public speaking for innovation. Public speaking for innovation is a combination of finding and building one's presence as a speaker and a leader--and translating that to an ability to explain and persuade, making the case for change. Students build their presence and gain the foundational knowledge necessary to successfully explain and persuade in innovation contexts.                            | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student            |

| HEB     | 131         | Biblical Hebrew I   | Offers an introduction to Biblical Hebrew, the language in which most of the books of the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament have been written. Provides the basic tools to understand and translate Biblical Hebrew texts. Covers the Hebrew alphabet, basic vocabulary, morphology and syntax. Students learn idiomatic expressions, basic literary techniques in narratives and poetry, as well as specificities of Semitic languages. Emphasizes a critical approach to the ancient text. Also introduces the evolution of the biblical text, from ancient manuscripts to contemporary editions and translations. Includes an introduction to the development of writing and to the evolution of Hebrew, from earliest inscriptions to its revival in modern Israel. The texts translated in class are situated in the history of Israel, but also in their Jewish and Christian cultural and religious contexts. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | School of International Letters and Cultures      | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only HEB, JST, REL 131 or HEB 194 (Biblical Hebrew I)  |

Depicts how Israel is an absorbing immigration state. Israel is a welfare state and the course covers aspects of a welfare state, such as health, retirement, public transportation, art, higher education and more.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences      | School of International Letters and Cultures  | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, ENG 105 or ENG 107 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only HEB 348, HEB 394 (Israeli Culture and Society), JST 348, REL 311, or SLC 348   |
| HEB     | 349         | Israeli Wars in Israeli Movies             | From its first day, the State of Israel has been in a state of war with the Arab countries. Every few years, the fighting erupted into an open war. At the beginning of the country, there was a consensus that the wars were forced on the Israelis, and therefore, the heavy toll on human life was unavoidable. Since the Six Day War, 1967, and the political change in 1977, Israeli society is split in attitude toward war. The absolute belief in the political and military leaders was shaken, and new political agendas entered the political arena. To this divided society, the Intifadas occurred with the waves of terrorism. These events added fire to the heated debates in Israel. One means of expression is through the cinema. In this course, students watch, analyze, and discuss selected movies on the Israeli wars and terrorism in the streets of Israel. Through these movies, produced by Israelis, we'll try to understand the mood and attitude of the Israelis toward war, enemies, and political and military leaders. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences      | School of International Letters and Cultures  | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 105, or 107 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only FMS 349 or HEB 349 or HEB 394 (Israeli Wars in Israeli Movies)  |

| HSD     | 502         | Advanced Science and Technology Policy              | Focuses on the role of knowledge and expertise in political and policy decision making. Particular emphasis is placed on the analysis of knowledge systems (formalized institutional approaches to the production, validation, and use of knowledge and expertise in policy decision making), their modes of failure, and the design of approaches that may be able to prevent, avoid, or reduce the frequency of such failures.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HSD 501 or POS 571 with B or better; Credit is allowed for only HSD 502 or POS 572   |
| HSD     | 503         | Governing Emerging Technologies                     | Examines the governance of science and technology through a focus on emerging technologies whose potential consequences in society are apparent only in anticipation and whose manifestations are still being shaped by local, domestic, and international institutions. These emerging technologies include nanotechnologies, synthetic biology, and other technologies associated with genetic modification, and information and cognitive science and neuro-technologies.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only PAF 550 or HSD 503 or POS 573  |
| HSD     | 504         | Analysis of Large-Scale Socio-Technological Systems | Provide skills and methods to analyze the design and management of large-scale socio-technological systems and the societal impacts of large-scale technological systems change. Emphasizes assessing the intertwining of lives and livelihoods in large-scale technological systems and the risks and vulnerabilities associated with large-scale systems failures, including the effects of both technological failures and natural hazards.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HSD     | 505         | Science and Technology Policy Workshop              | Provides the capstone experience for the Professional Science Master's in Science and Technology Policy. Builds on theoretical and analytical work carried out in the program's required courses, providing an integrative experience that requires students to synthesize knowledge gained in prior coursework and apply it to real-world policy problems and settings. By blending exposure to national science and technology policy officials and nationally recognized academic experts, the workshop both advances student learning beyond that possible in the classroom while encouraging students to expand their abilities to connect theoretical and practical insights. At the same time, the workshop provides a natural transition from the student's formal classroom learning to their required applied policy internships, which commences upon the end of the workshop.                           | N                 | SEM               | N               | YGB           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| HSD     | 517         | Uncertainty and Decision Making                   | Knowledge is always incomplete, yet decisions must be made. Explores uncertainty and its relation to decision making, with a particular focus on the ways that science and science-derived information is applied with the intent of improving decisions. Explores the many meanings and origins of uncertainty, using theoretical and case-based approaches. A central theme is the relation among uncertainty, scientific prediction, and decision making, especially in politically charged issues, for example as related to management of the environment. Ultimately understands how effective decisions can be made in the face of inevitable uncertainties and contested knowledge.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ASB 517 or BIO 517 or BIO 591 (Uncertainty & Decision Making) or HSD 517 or POS 527 or SOS 518 |
| HSD     | 520         | Masters of Nonfiction                             | Students read and critically discuss works by well-known nonfiction writers to improve their own writing skills. Consists of weekly writing exercises, reviewed with workshop-style discussions centered on individual authors, themes or genres such as history, journalism, personal essays, biography, character profiles, travelogues, book reviews and op/ed commentary.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only HPS 520 or HSD 520 or HST 520  |
| HSD     | 540         | Responsible Innovation and Research               | Movements throughout Europe and increasingly the U.S. are beginning to consolidate the recognition of the profound effects that research outcomes have upon the world under the idea of responsible innovation and research. The responsible innovation and research pushes beyond the responsibilities of the individual researchers and addresses larger issues such as research agenda setting, management of large-scale research and innovation enterprises, funding priorities and innovation as a national policy priority. Explores the idea of innovation as a national policy; the practical and theoretical underpinnings of responsibility in the research world; the history, current state and future trajectories of responsible research and innovation. Focuses on the current literature in the field. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| HSE     | 101         | Introduction to Human Systems Engineering       | Introduces basic principles, methods and theories of psychology and applications to engineering problems relevant to human systems. Gives particular attention to the intersection of psychology and engineering. Students learn brain anatomy and physiology, sensation and perception, cognition, social systems and research methods so that they are able to design systems consistent with human capabilities and limitations.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 223         | Applied Biology of Human Behavior               | Introduces the biological basis of human behavior and implications for human systems engineering. Structure and function of the nervous system as well as the behavioral effects of the physiological processes outside the brain (for example, hormones secreted by glands). Biological processes involved in many aspects of our behavior such as eating, sleeping, sexual behavior, emotional responses, sensory perception, learning and memory, language and cognitive functions, mental illness and drug abuses. Introduces a wide range of techniques and methods used to investigate the biological foundations of behavior. Prepares students for advanced courses in neuroscience, psychology or related fields. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 225         | Human Systems Integration                       | Reviews human systems integration (HSI), which is basically systems engineering from a human-centered perspective. Research, theory and methodological approach as applied to a variety of systems ranging from transportation systems to medical and military systems. Discusses handbook chapters and specific examples of human systems integration.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 290         | Experimental Methods for Human Systems Research | Introduces the basics of research methodology as applied in human systems engineering. Quantitative and experimental design from an applied perspective. Guided study of the process of conducting research within human systems engineering. Project topics range from research question generation and literature review to reporting of results.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 323         | Perceptual Systems                              | In-depth exploration of methods by which humans receive and interpret information from the world by vision, audition, taste, smell, touch and movement. Emphasizes the integration of behavioral and neural research with potential applications to engineering practice. Topics cover a wide range from the biological basis of sensory information processing to the behavioral aspects of perception, and to the applications of perceptual theories to disciplines like computer vision, display technologies, graphic design and sound processing. Solid foundation for further coursework and research in neuroscience or psychology; students also gain knowledge that could be useful in various professions.      | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 324         | Applied Cognitive Science                       | Human cognition and how it bears on the design of technological and social systems. Although focuses on applications, requires student to delve into the basic literature that informs these applications and produce a literature review that draws on both applied and theoretical work. Many weeks involve a hands-on experience with a method or technique, and weekly quizzes emphasize critical thinking about these examples.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 430         | Statistics for Human Systems Research II       | Statistical methods commonly used in human systems engineering research. Emphasizes (1) connecting research designs and statistical analysis, (2) interpreting and breaking down significant effects, (3) addressing practical problems associated with doing research in applied contexts, (4) using statistical methods to understand the connection between variables in a complex system, and (5) the use of statistical software. Primarily focuses on analysis of variance (ANOVA) but introduces other techniques (including mediation analysis, structural equation modeling and cluster analysis). Recommended for preparation for both graduate study and careers in related industry. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HST     | 377         | Sports in United States History                     | Focuses on major themes in American sports history, organized topically around fall sports. Themes encourage students to think critically about relationships among sport and society, identity, community, media, capitalism and education. Lectures, discussions, readings and films explore race, gender, class and sexuality as categories of analysis, and the role of sport in constructing ideas about the body along gender and racial lines. Also highlights social justice issues in sport as well as athlete activism throughout the twentieth century. Explores the ways in which the participation of Black, Latino/a and Native American athletes has both mirrored and diverged from Black, Latino/a and Native American citizens' participation in society throughout United States history. Also studies the process through which the equal opportunity to participate in school sports became defined as a civil right and, more recently, a human right. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 30 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 377 or HST 306 (Sports in U.S. History)                           |

| HST     | 379         | History of College Sports                           | Student-controlled intercollegiate contests quickly transformed into big-time college sports by the early twentieth century, revolutionizing the sports industry in the United States as well as the landscape of higher education. The American college sports enterprise is unique; nowhere else in the world does a large, amateur, revenue-generating system of school sports exist. After an exploration of the origins of intercollegiate athletics and the creation of the modern National Collegiate Athletic Association, topics include integration, women's intercollegiate athletics, the big business of amateurism, and scandal. Video lectures, readings and films introduce students to these often controversial topics, grounding them in the historical record. Many of the current debates concerning college sports have been taking place for more than a century.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 30 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 379 or HST 306 (History of College Sports)                        |

| HST     | 404         | Conquest and Encounters in Colonial Latin America        | How did Hernan Cortés and Francisco Pizarro defeat the Aztec and Inca Empires? Despite numeric inferiority, limited provisions, and little knowledge about the Americas, Cortés and Pizarro defeated advanced civilizations that had experienced warriors and millions of inhabitants. Possible explanations include the conquistador's valor, advanced weaponry, superior military strategy, Indian allies, and biological attacks. In their encounters with native peoples of the Americas, Europeans were not always conquerors. Álvaro Núñez Cabeza de Vaca and Lope de Aguirre failed both in their attempt to conquer a large Indian civilization and in their effort to find mineral wealth. A few Europeans such as Bartolomé de Las Casas spoke out against the abuses committed against the Indians during the conquest. Explores these issues from the perspective of both Europeans and native peoples and looks at the long-term impact for Latin America and its peoples. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies   | 3     | L & G             | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 55 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 404 or HST 494 (Conquest & Encounters)   |

| HST     | 439         | Athenian Democracy                               | Discussion-based seminar familiarizes participants with the origins, characteristic institutions and political ideology of the Athenian democracy of the 5th and 4th centuries BCE. Engages selected topics in the study of Athenian democracy and gives participants an idea of the substance of contemporary debates within scholarship. Topics will include: The origins of the Athenian democracy; women, slaves, and other subordinate social groups within the democracy; elite critique of democratic ideology and episodes of outright civil war; leaders and masses; the role of the court system within the democracy; democracy and the Athenian empire; and violence in Athenian society. The goal of the course, in addition to a greater familiarity with the Athenian democracy, will be a research paper with a well-chosen topic and a distinctive thesis. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies   | 3     | H                  | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 55 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 439 or HST 494 (Athenian Democracy)  |
| HST     | 441         | Latin America and the World Economy              | Globalization did not begin in the late twentieth century, but rather global trade has linked Latin America with the rest of the world for over five hundred years. The region has been an active and important participant in the world economy since Columbus's first voyage in 1492. This course explores the social, cultural, economic, and environmental impact of such participation on both Latin America and the rest of the world. It is organized both chronologically and thematically. We will study both colonial and post-colonial trade. The commodities studied include sugar, rubber, bananas, and cocaine.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies   | 3     | L & G & H          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102 or 105 or 108 with C or better; minimum 55 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 441 or HST 305 (Latin America and the World Economy) or HST 494 (Latin America and the World Economy) |

| HST     | 504         | Digital Humanities: Critical Theory and Methods | Digital technologies are now intricately woven into our lives--whether it's in terms of authoring a paper in a text editor, sending texts and emails, or doing data analysis. Popular narratives of the "big" and the "new" celebrate and sometimes bemoan the ways that these tools shape our communication, access to information, habits and even our physical bodies. Focuses on the histories of these technologies, their operations, popular conceptions about such tools, and their affordances and limits for humanities scholarship. Students learn how to leverage digital technologies, but also how to critically read them. Broad ranging; in addition to surveying the "big tent," students are encouraged to utilize their final projects to engage with specific disciplinary digital tools and methods relevant to their scholarly work. | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only CDH 501 or HST 504 or REL 504 |

| IBC     | 425         | Cognitive and Behavioral Counseling                         | Frameworks for conceptualizing health behavior change. Reviews evidence-based approaches that address patient's behavioral health needs in primary care and other medical settings.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions  | College of Health Solutions                      | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |
| IBC     | 430         | Medical Pathophysiology, Terminology and Behavioral Health  | Provides an overview of pathophysiology and medical treatment of common medical conditions in primary care (e.g., diabetes, coronary heart disease, hypertension, asthma, cancer). Emphasizes medical terminology, pathophysiology, common medical treatments and behavioral health issues associated with those conditions that students can expect to see in integrated medical settings, especially integrated primary care. Students learn appropriate medical terminology for symptoms, diseases, treatments and medical tests so they can communicate effectively with inter-professional medical teams. Discusses the role of the behavioral health provider as it relates to these conditions as well. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions  | College of Health Solutions                      | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |
| IBC     | 520         | Integrated Health: The Patient-Centered Medical Home (PCMH) | Provides an introduction to the Patient-Centered Medical Home (PCMH); alignment of PCMH within primary care systems; and the importance of PCMH within integrated health care design, implementation and relevancy to the triple aim.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions  | College of Health Solutions                      | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 530         | Evidence-Based Integrated Health Care                       | Provides a management-level introduction to evidence-based guidelines for the management of health care concerns through an integrated health care design and delivery system meeting the triple aim.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions  | College of Health Solutions                      | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| IBC     | 540         | Integrated Health Care Process Improvement  | Help students evaluate, measure, analyze, change and lead improvement in health care systems. Students learn how to apply principles of quality improvement based on Lean Six Sigma health care to effectively shape and create sustainable health care systems that meet "triple aim" of improved patient experience of care, improved population health, and reduced utilization and cost of care. Based on principles of value-based health care delivery in which achieving high value for patients is the overarching goal of health care delivery, defined as health outcome achieved per dollars spent.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 550         | Integrated Care Business Operations   | Provides a management-level introduction to operationalizing integrated health care delivery systems meeting the triple aim.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 560         | Strategic Business Planning and Big Data  | Provides a survey of emerging use of "big data" in health care, a term used to describe data sets that contain massive amounts of health care information that are beyond the capacity of commonly used software programs that can be analyzed for the purpose of health care analytics. Covers analytical tools that can be used to leverage health information technology (HIT) from health care systems and applies quality improvement methodologies such as Lean and Six Sigma to make strategic improvement in health care. Covers approaches to big data business intelligence and health care analytics to design, implement and evaluate sustainable health care systems that meet the "triple aim" of improved patient experience of care, improved population health, and reduced utilization and cost of care. Based on principles of value-based health care delivery in which achieving high value for patients is the overarching goal of health care delivery, defined as health outcomes achieved per dollar. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| IBC     | 585         | Interprofessional Consultation, Leadership and Teamwork in Integrated Health Care | Integrates the closely related topics of consultation, leadership and teamwork in integrated health care. Integrated care settings are characterized by interprofessional teams representing diverse stakeholders such as clinical (e.g., PCP, nurse); management (CEO, CFO, Quality) and administrative. External stakeholders such as health plans, specialty care providers and community resources may also need to participate in the integrated care strategic plan. The integrated care consultant must effectively consult with and engage these stakeholders to develop integrated care teams committed to achieving the "Triple Aim" of improved patient experience of care, improved population health and decreased cost. Emphasizes consultation skills designed to engage stakeholders such as networking, marketing and negotiation. Teamwork emphasizes strategies and techniques of building effective and efficient teams across multiple systems of care.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 590         | Reading and Conference  | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| IBC     | 593         | Applied Project   | Preparation of a supervised applied project that is a graduation requirement in some professional majors.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-12  |                 |  |
| IBC     | 595         | Continuing Registration   | Used in situations where registration is necessary but where credit is not needed. Replaces arbitrary enrollment in reading and conference, research, thesis, dissertation, etc. Used by students when taking comprehensive examinations, defending theses or dissertations or fulfilling the continuous enrollment requirement in doctoral programs. Credit is not awarded and no grade is assigned.  | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z3            | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 598         | Special Topics  | Topical courses not offered in regular course rotation--e.g., new courses not in the catalog, courses by visiting faculty, courses on timely topics, highly specialized courses responding to unique student demand.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-4   |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 601         | Models of Integrated Primary Care   | Provides an overview of the primary care environment as well as current models of integrated primary behavioral health care. Reviews and critiques models of health care based on their success in impacted patient health outcomes and improving physician satisfaction, along with fiscal and care delivery systems for each.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 602         | Healthcare Statistics   | Provides an overview of contemporary issues in health statistics and develops student proficiency in completing hands-on statistical analyses using Microsoft Excel. Develops proficiency in using Excel to manage data analyses as an ongoing tool to collect and analyze clinical and cost-effectiveness data in primary care and related healthcare settings.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 603         | Brief Interventions in Primary Care   | Provides an overview of evidence-based care for the integrated primary care environment. In particular, reviews and applies the most common approaches to addressing co-morbid behavioral and medical conditions, including but not limited to brief psychotherapy, adherence enhancement, lifestyle medicine, and others, using cognitive-behavioral, acceptance and commitment therapy, solution-focused, and motivational interviewing approaches.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 603 or IBC 691 (Brief Interventions in Primary Care) or IBC 702 |
| IBC     | 604         | Clinical Medicine/Pathophysiology   | Overview of each of the main systems within the human body. Addresses the major diseases (symptoms, diagnosis, and medical treatments) within each system. Students learn appropriate medical terminology for symptoms, diseases, treatments, and medical tests so they can communicate effectively with medical practitioners (nurses and physicians). Content is equivalent to pathophysiology training in an RN program. Also addresses the role of behavioral care providers in medical settings; design and implementation of psychoeducational programs in primary care; stress management techniques for use in medical settings; chronic pain management; identification and treatment of somatization disorder; increasing compliance in noncompliant patients; alternative/complementary medicine; overview of nutrition; and the effects of exercise and nutrition on prevention and treatment of diseases.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| IBC     | 608         | Psychopharmacology for the Behavioral Care Provider                             | Provides overview of psychopharmacology to equip the behavioral care provider with the understanding of psychotropic medications necessary to make prescription recommendations to primary care physicians and to participate in medication management for patients being prescribed psychotropics. Basic principles of pharmacology in general, including pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, medication development and the FDA approval process, interaction effects, drug company marketing strategies, appropriate and inappropriate medication usage, over-medication, and off-label medication use. Reviews pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics in special populations (children, the elderly, and patients with co-morbid medical and psychological conditions).  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 609         | Clinical Neuropathophysiology   | Presents overview of each of the basic neuroanatomy, neurophysiology, and a focus on the manifestations of neurophysiological dysfunction across the life span for Doctor of Behavioral Health (DBH) program behavioral clinicians. Covers the basic human brain anatomy, neurophysiological processes, development, and maturation. Using case studies, presents and discusses evidence-based support for theories of psychiatric disorders and neuropsychopathology. Incorporates evidence-based research findings on the role of genetics, neurophysiological adaptation, epidemiological and societal influences in order to develop understanding of disruptions in normal neurophysiological functioning.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 610         | Behavioral and Psychological Assessment in Primary Care                         | Presents a comprehensive model of behavioral and psychological assessment for behavioral health clinicians in primary care and related medical settings. Provides behavioral health consultants with the necessary knowledge base and skills to develop an appropriate assessment and treatment plan for a variety of commonly seen complaints in primary care. Places attention on the assessment of both psychiatric and behavioral complaints across the lifespan. Students become familiar with both structured interview and empirically support quantitative measures consistently utilized to enhance our understanding of the presenting complaint.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 611         | Population-Based Behavioral Health Management                                   | Overview epidemiology for health care followed by population-based approaches to behavioral intervention. Epidemiology includes concept of populations; descriptions and definitions of health and disease; measurement of health (measures, morbidity, mortality and health); designs for studying the health of populations and standardization of population health measures. Population-based management includes definitions of medical management; planning health care for populations and population health outcomes; quality of care and economic analysis of population-based interventions; adjunctive treatments as a core component of population-based interventions. Also, advanced application of population-based behavioral interventions with a focus on design, measures, analysis, results and discussion of current approaches. Includes predictive modeling methods for defining populations; interventions focusing on stepped-care approaches; engagement strategies, interventions, measurement, and follow-up. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 612         | Introduction to Behavioral Interventions  | Provides a foundational understanding of behavioral health interventions for primary care settings for those students intending to work in administrative, management or allied health positions. Provides a theoretical basis for various psychological schools of thought, as well as an overview of the empirical evidence for those approaches. Reviews models of therapy including: psychodynamic, brief strategic, cognitive-behavioral and solution-focused. Also reviews two intervention strategies typically used in integrated settings: Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT) and Motivational Interviewing (MI). Explores the ways that these approaches serve as the theoretical framework of the Biodyne model.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | IBC     | 613         | Cognitive/Affective Bases of Health   | Provides an overview of cognitive and affective theories and their intersection with health and health behavior change among individuals and communities. Covers topics including (but not limited to): Health Belief Model, self-efficacy, attribution theory, social-cognitive theory, and the transtheoretical model of change.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 614         | Quality and Performance Measurement, Improvement, and Incentives in Health Care | Overview of health care quality management, emerging models of health care performance measurement, and models of pay for performance incentives in health care designed to reward providers for attaining quality of care goals. Prepares behavioral clinicians to provide services that are consistent with best practices in quality management and performance measurement in health care and to provide care that is consistent with performance incentive programs that are present or on the horizon. A key characteristic of health care reform is increased focus on provider quality of care, accountability for quality via performance measurement, and aligning provider incentives to meet national and regional quality of care performance targets.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 615         | Innovative Technologies in Behavioral Health                                    | Provides a quick overview and answers to basic questions related to both online therapy and telemental health. Gives a downloadable audio recording (MP3) and access to the accompanying video clips that augment a rich sampling of pages extracted from our other coursework. As a composite, this experience introduces our multi-modal learning environment and, more importantly, gives an idea of the issues involved with establishing an online or otherwise remote practice.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | IBC     | 620         | Psychosomatic Illness: Diagnosis & Treatment                                    | Teaches how to successfully diagnose and treat physical illness caused by various forms of psychosocial stress (psychophysiological disorders, PPD). Because patients are often unaware of the nature or degree of stresses that are responsible for their illness, places emphasis on learning how to detect and use clues that patients provide to develop a more complete understanding of the struggles than they are able to perceive for themselves. Focuses on selecting, assessing and treating a patient known to the student who has medically unexplained physical symptoms.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | IBC     | 624         | Integrated Behavioral Health Care for Children and Adolescents         | Integrates developmental psychology with pediatric psychology in order to prepare behavioral clinicians to provide screening, assessment, and intervention for children and adolescents in primary care and other medical settings. Presents an overview of developmental stages with an emphasis on critical tasks, while contrasting normal versus abnormal development. Develops societal, familial, and cultural influences.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 626         | Behavioral Health Management   | Presents an introduction to the roles and responsibilities of supervisor/manager in a health care organization. Provides behavioral health professionals moving into management with the necessary knowledge base and skills to be an entry-level manager and focuses on the further knowledge acquisition needed to become an experienced, effective manager and leader. In addition, discusses the larger context in which healthcare businesses operate--health care reform, regulations and technological changes. Participants take time to look at personal characteristics, interpersonal styles and presentation that affect how one is perceived and responded to in an organization. Too often we have observed individuals with high-level clinical skills moving into management without the requisite skills and understanding of issues, restricting their ability to be successful.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 626 (or IBC 724) or IBC 780 (Behavioral Health Management)         |

| IBC     | 704         | Psychopathology & Personality in Integrated Primary Care               | Covers the basic principles of the Biodyne Model, which are applicable to all behavioral health cases, both in outpatient mental health settings and in integrated care settings. Core knowledge forms the basis for success as a behavioral care provider in integrated medical settings. Includes common psychotherapist mistakes, evidence-based treatment, basics of the Biodyne Model, survey of integrated care approaches, defense mechanisms, case conceptualization strategies for maximum efficiency, and when to refer a patient for specialty care. Presents in detail common conditions (anxiety and depression), with a focus on how these conditions can be subcategorized for maximum treatment efficiency. Emphasizes the development of comprehensive treatment plans (including psychotropic medications, group programs, and other modalities). Presents didactic material in the context of actual cases. Strong focus on case examples, both illustrative cases provided by the instructor and the students' cases (past and/or current). | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| IBC     | 718         | Healthcare Systems: Organization, Delivery and Economics  | Provides an overview of the U.S. healthcare system with a focus on economics and policy. Primary goals of the course are to enable students to recognize the relevance of economics to healthcare and to apply economic principles to better understand health-related issues; understand the U.S. healthcare delivery system in the context of social, policy, and economic factors; evaluate the evolving nature of healthcare reform initiatives and their implications for clinical practice, financing, research and policy; analyze public healthcare policy from an economic perspective. Students also focus on behavioral healthcare economics and policy and the economics of behavioral health services in medical settings. Students also understand the medical cost offset effect, including economic benefits of behavioral interventions for co-morbid medical and behavioral conditions, measurement of medical cost-offset, and cost-offset for psychopharmacology and specific behavioral conditions. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 720         | Behavioral Health Entrepreneurship  | Provides an introduction to the essential entrepreneurship skills for the behavioral healthcare clinician. Focuses on entrepreneurial skills designed to prepare the behavioral clinician to start a new business venture or revitalize an existing organization or business, to meet the needs of the evolving healthcare system and marketplace.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 725         | Effective Consultation in Integrated Health Care  | Prepares students to function as effective consultants in integrated care settings. Effective consultation includes the ability to engage, educate, inform, persuade and collaborate with diverse professionals both within the clinic or hospital setting but also in related systems of care. The hospital or clinic setting includes care providers such as PCPs, nurse, allied health administrative support staff, and managers and executives such as medical director, CEO and CFO. The hospital or clinic also includes related departments such as quality improvement, electronic health records/health information technology, billing, finance and actuary. Systems of care include the patient/family, community, health plans, disease prevention or management companies, specialty mental health and substance use disorder providers, community-based resources, large employer group and related EAP providers.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 725 or IBC 691 (Effective Consultation in Behavioral Health) |
| IBC     | 728         | Cultural Diversity, Health and Illness  | Focuses on the relationship among cultural diversity, health and illness, and multicultural psychotherapy in primary care and other healthcare settings. Prepares behavioral clinicians to identify the relationship between cultural diversity and health and illness and to use effective psychotherapy informed by cultural diversity in primary care and related medical settings.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

Organizational behavior theories and concepts related to leadership. Uniqueness of structures, processes and interactions in integrated care programs and how to adapt these to medical settings. Communication skills, teamwork and collaboration. Current challenges to leadership in health care reform.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 732 or IBC 691 (Leadership in Healthcare)                    |
| IBC     | 740         | Integrated Behavioral Interventions, Cost Savings, Medical Cost Offset and Return on Investment | Research has demonstrated that many integrated behavioral interventions designed to prevent or improve chronic disease outcomes result in cost savings by reducing overuse of health services and associated costs. Reviews research on conditions such as depression and anxiety co-morbid with chronic disease, somatizers, cardiovascular risk factors underlying chronic disease, substance use disorder, pain and opioid misuse, cigarette smoking and insomnia that show evidence for cost savings. The interventions are typically delivered in integrated settings such as primary care and based on the population health management model. Interventions include therapeutic lifestyle change, medication adherence, cognitive behavioral treatment and emerging eHealth and mHealth interventions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| IED     | 501         | Critical Indigenous Research Methodologies          | Examines research, its methods and methodologies through an indigenous framework. Presents different methods, their connections to various research questions, and thoughts of ways to analyze extant educational data. Additionally, examines traditional methodologies, methodological clashes, and the insertion of critical indigenous research methodologies into the framing of the conversation. Offers an historical overview of research in indigenous communities.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student OR postbaccalaureate student; Credit is allowed for only IED 501 or JUS 691 (Decolonizing Indigenous Research Methods) |
| IED     | 502         | Indigenous Knowledges in Education                  | Provides an overview of the literature on indigenous knowledge systems as they tie into education as broadly defined. Specifically focuses on indigenous knowledge systems and how it encapsulates relationships (between people and each other, humans and their environment, and humans and written and oral learning); responsibility; reciprocity; and respect. Covers both historical understandings of indigenous knowledge systems and the ways that these knowledge systems are currently being taken up by tribal peoples. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student or postbaccalaureate student; Credit is allowed for only IED 502 or JUS 691 (Indigenous Knowledges in Education)       |

| IFT     | 458         | Middleware Programming and Database Security            | Covers the main concepts of middleware technologies. Includes the various methodologies used to integrate applications, databases and Web services. Students develop multilevel applications using programming/scripting languages (such as PHP, Java, Python, Perl) which access data stored in a database. Middleware programs typically control database access and protect database SQL programs from security breaches. Students access the data from applications and other Web technologies such as XML, as well as protecting the data from unauthorized access. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | IGD     | 601         | Re-Thinking Global Development                 | Traces and analyzes the origins of international or global development as theory, concept, policy and practice. Studies the key theories that have been influential in development conceptualization and policy, within the context of the history in which they arose; evaluates the results; and considers future trends and scenarios considering the critiques of such mainstream approaches.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 4     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IGD     | 602         | Innovation for Inclusive Development           | Clear advances in economic, social and political development and wealth generation have been uneven, and have resulted, as well, in an increasing gap between wealth and poverty. Continuing in the same direction could exacerbate existing problems, and in this course, we imagine different future outcomes and how to make policy today for a better future.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 4     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IGD     | 603         | Methods for Research in Global Development     | Provides a practical introduction to research methods and methodologies in global development. Through hands-on exercises, exposes students to issues around quantitative and qualitative data collection and management, analysis and interpretation of results, and research ethics and practice in development as well as application of research to policy development and its implications.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 4     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IGD     | 604         | Colloquium in Innovation in Global Development | This student-centered and faculty-mentored colloquium provides critical opportunities for leadership, organization, planning and implementation of events related to global development studies. Encourages students to propose and plan their own events, focused on issues and topics of importance to them, and utilizing the resources on the ASU campus and Phoenix area.  | N                 | SEM               | Y               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 2     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

Product redesign. Students create new design language proposals for an existing product and redesign the product based on one of these languages. Provides instruction and opportunities to understand product design language and how to redesign existing products with different design guidelines. Results include evidence of concept development (sketches, drawings, models); functional development; human factors and ergonomic considerations; materials and process specifications; sustainability recommendations; and appearance visual materials and models (virtual and physical). Project-based course includes readings, presentations, critical analysis, discussion and the public exhibition and presentation of design work. | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Industrial Design major. | JST     | 131         | Biblical Hebrew I                     | Offers an introduction to Biblical Hebrew, the language in which most of the books of the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament have been written. Provides the basic tools to understand and translate Biblical Hebrew texts. Covers the Hebrew alphabet, basic vocabulary, morphology and syntax. Students learn idiomatic expressions, basic literary techniques in narratives and poetry, as well as specificities of Semitic languages. Emphasizes a critical approach to the ancient text. Also introduces the evolution of the biblical text, from ancient manuscripts to contemporary editions and translations. Includes an introduction to the development of writing and to the evolution of Hebrew, from earliest inscriptions to its revival in modern Israel. The texts translated in class are situated in the history of Israel, but also in their Jewish and Christian cultural and religious contexts. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only HEB, JST, REL 131 or HEB 194 (Biblical Hebrew I)  |

| JST     | 459         | Latin American Jewish Culture              | Focuses on forms of cultural production in Latin America marked by or under the aegis of Jewish diasporic identity from the late nineteenth century to the present. While Jewish immigrants and Latin Americans of Jewish descent may be found in all Latin American societies, cultural production is found concentrated in countries like Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Chile. Investigates essentially cultural versions of a sociohistorical consciousness, and ranges across a broad spectrum of Latin American Jewish texts in an investigation of what forms of production have emerged to represent this important immigrant component of Latin American national societies. Examines novels and other literary works, along with photography and films, and looks at theme, motifs, characters that can be identified with what might be called a Jewish consciousness or Jewish sensitivity. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only JST 459 or JST 494 (Jewish Latin American Culture) or SLC 459 or SLC 498 (Jewish Latin American Culture) or SPA 459 or SPA 498 (Jewish Latin American Culture)                                  |

| JST     | 495         | Judaism, Science and World Religions        | Studies the correlation between science and religion as an interdisciplinary study from a historical perspective. Session topics fall into three distinct units. The first correlates the physical sciences with Western religious theology; the second explores the consequences of the life sciences on religious psychology; and the third examines the impact of the interconnection between sciences and religions in society. Each unit is studied through specific readings, film, lectures, and discussion.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105 or 108 with C or better; JST 210, 230 with C or better or REL 210 with C or better; Minimum 87 hours |
| JST     | 496         | Biblical Narratives: Literary Approaches    | Presents different trends in synchronic approaches applied to the Bible such as narrative criticism, semiotics, reader-response criticism, and situates them both in the postmodern cultural context and in the history of biblical exegesis. Explores various literary devices in biblical narratives, such as repetition, type-scenes, characterization, the change of points of view, the use of metaphors. Studies each technique on particular biblical texts, literally translated into English, with a special emphasis on how these techniques guide the interpretation and create meaning. Questions the significance of literary approaches for religious or ideological texts, such as the Hebrew Bible. Also considers criticisms raised against these approaches, assesses their limits, and envisions their future. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105 or 108 with C or better; JST 210, 230 with C or better or REL 210 with C or better; Minimum 87 hours |

Focuses on how and why the "political" is felt so very personally in everyday life in Israel and Palestine.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours   |
| JUS     | 456         | Human Rights and Sustainability                                   | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     | (L or SB) & G   | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only JUS 456 or JUS 497 (Seminar in Human Rights) or SOC 455 or SOS 456  |

| JUS     | 468         | Protest, Justice, Law and the Media                               | Examines research on protests, political deviance, trials/law and justice, and critiques some of the media representations of related ideas. Investigates global social movements, political protests and nascent political trials. Analyzes varied justifications for defining action as diversity, deviance or crime and the reasons for using criminal, civil or alternative (positive) sanctions (especially via indigenous peoples). Explores the encompassing meaning of a political trial. Many people throughout the world find everyday life to be a trial, especially those placed on the margins of globalization. Expands the research on media and trials that usually have been examined narrowly by legal institutions in North America and reinforced by hegemony.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only JUS 468 or JUS 494 (Protest, Justice and the Media)   |

| JUS     | 656         | Human Rights and Sustainability                           | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences   | School of Social Transformation          | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | KIN     | 545         | Movement Assessment and Evaluation       | Students perform different laboratory and clinical techniques to analyze human movement for biomechanical applications. Delivered as two components: lecture and laboratory. The lecture component serves to discuss the theory behind quantitative analysis techniques, proper equipment usage, data processing techniques and the connection to biomechanical principles. During the laboratory component students gain hands-on experience with the equipment by performing assigned experiments and clinical assessments. Follows with practice in analyzing, reporting, interpreting and presenting data. Additionally, students make recommendations and assign exercises to correct impaired movement when appropriate. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School of Nutrition and Health Promotion     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 515  |
| KIN     | 547         | ECG Interpretation                       | Comprehensive investigation of the heart rhythm disturbances that occur within the chambers and conducting tissue of the heart. Partitioned into three sections allowing the systematic review of arrhythmias that occur in the atria, AV junction and ventricles of the heart. The material is designed to maximize understanding by analyzing electrocardiogram rhythm strips to reinforce applying the theoretical component of the course. Also uses the application of these theories through laboratory experiences allowing hands-on experience with electrode placement and 12 lead ECG interpretations.   | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School of Nutrition and Health Promotion     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Clinical Exercise Physiology MS or Exercise and Wellness MS student; Credit is allowed for only KIN 447 or KIN 547 or KIN 598 (ECG Interpretation) |
| KIN     | 550         | Clinical Applications in Biomechanics    | Hands-on experience utilizing clinical techniques and equipment to analyze human movement for biomechanical applications. Uses the student biomechanics laboratory as a simulated clinic environment where volunteers may participate as clients for students to gain experience with clinically relevant biomechanical assessments. Additionally, requires students to showcase successful interpersonal skills to be able to work with a variety of individuals (clients, peers and supervisors) and show an ability to think critically and pay attention to details.   | N                 | LAB               | Y               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | School of Nutrition and Health Promotion     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 515; KIN 540; KIN 545  |

| LAS     | 205         | Deep Roots: Latin America                                    | Introduces the diversity of Latin-American traditions through its cultural production. The approach is interdisciplinary (art, architecture, literature, film, theater, business and anthropology). Studies the history and culture of Latin America and its concept of identity and nation through a variety of genres. Focuses on aspects that reveal the complexity of Latin America and in turn provides insights into Latin American culture.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better  |

| LAS     | 330         | From the Inside: The Latin American Journey                  | Journeys through a wide variety of genres and critical scholarship in Spanish. Provides a broad exposure to different types of reading and writing. Because the Latin American Studies program is flexible, students must be able to engage with many different types of texts across disciplines. Covers Latin American cultural history from pre-Colombian to the post-modern by exploring different formats and genres around major central themes.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     | HU              | Prerequisite(s): SPA 313 and 314 with C or better OR SPA 315 and 316 with C or better OR SPA 325 with C or better   |
| LAS     | 340         | Latin American Women Writers                                 | In the 20th and 21st centuries, Latin America has seen a proliferation of literature published by women authors. While this explosion of the written word owes in part to changing socioeconomic factors and the opening of the international markets, Latin American women's literary history is often ignored in the canon. Examines the concepts of feminism through a Mexican framework, starting from the point of view of Mexican women theorizing about their own. This is not a history of feminism, but it does aim to highlight certain fundamental texts and key concepts of Mexico's history from the position of women writers, including feminism's critique of social structures beyond the bounds of gender relations. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LAS 340 or WST 341   |
| LAS     | 350         | The Construction of a Nation: Chile in the 20th/21st Century | Examines Chilean history, politics and cultural production through its historical development and explores a multiplicity of cultural issues. Develops knowledge and appreciation of cultural and visual production of Chile and Latin America as well as acquired skills for critically analyzing texts in their applicability to modern-day society. Considers the variety of cultural and artistic productions (novel, poetry, short story, film, music, pop culture, presidential speeches) as sources of social commentary in which observations of national identities are constructed.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102 (or ENG 105 or 108) with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LAS 350, ENG 494 (Construction/Nation:Chile in the 20th/21st Cen) or SPA 494 (Construction/Nation:Chile in the 20th/21st Cen) |
| LAS     | 351         | Cityscapes: Urban Mexican Literature and Culture             | Examines major developments in contemporary Mexican literature. Begins at mid-20th century as the novel turns away from the rural novel of the Revolution, toward a more urban setting. Mexico City serves as a cultural and political center, and the novels mark social and political changes across different literary currents.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better  |
| LAS     | 355         | Contemporary Mexican Cinema: Changing Cartographies          | Examines major themes and auteurs in contemporary film as their work intersects with larger cultural phenomena, expanding students' cultural knowledge as well as critical communication skills.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better  |

| LAW     | 105         | The Structure and Methodology of the American Legal System | What is law? What is the structure of the American legal system? What does it mean to understand law in the context of that system? How is this system effective and problematic and how does its evolution over time change our perceptions of and relationships with those who are part of it? Provides answers to these and other questions while simultaneously developing a working understanding of American law, its practicalities, and externalities. Takes the form of a comprehensive inquiry into the legal system, its origins, structures, applications, success, failure, and decision-making processes. In asking probing questions about the system and its nature, explores the values and philosophies that inform our American conception of the law and its role in society. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Law            | College of Law Dean's Office                 | 3     |                 |   |

| LAW     | 210         | Introduction to American Legal System and Business Law     | Introduces the American legal system and an overview of laws that impact business in the United States. Initially examines the questions: What is law? What is the source, nature, and scope of laws; and how is law shaped by our culture and political institutions? How is the American legal system structured and operated? The majority of substantive content examines the role of law in business.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Law            | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law           | 3     |                 |   |
| LAW     | 215         | Business, Law and Society                                  | What would a legal system that is pro-business look like? Explores the role law plays in American business. Considers what it means to have business relations generally governed by the rule of law, and specifically in the U.S. legal system. Draws on legal theory, political theory and American legal history to guide us. Examines some of the legal tools of the trade from property law and contract law that are fundamental to the conduct of American business. Discovers that the development of legal doctrines promoting free enterprise are at times tempered by social justice concerns rooted in conceptions of equality and fairness. Considers how the current legal regulatory climate promoting corporate social responsibility impacts business decision making.           | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Law            | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law           | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): undergraduate student  |

| LAW     | 662         | Alternative Dispute Resolution and Employment Law | The use of alternative dispute resolution has been most extensive in the area of employment law. Mediation and arbitration are widely used not only in the collective bargaining setting, but also in virtually every aspect of the employment relationship. Offers a comprehensive review of the subject with special emphasis on the extensive body of law that has developed in regulating employer-imposed arbitration. Discussion of mediation includes use of simulations to enable the students to understand how mediation can effectively resolve employment disputes. Opportunities to observe real mediations of employment disputes. Experienced attorneys discuss the "real world" use of employment ADR from a plaintiff's and a defendant's perspective. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-3   |                 |   |
| LAW     | 664         | Intellectual Property                             | Surveys the laws conventionally grouped as intellectual property, with a focus on patents, copyrights, and trademarks. Explores the policy rationales for each body of law. Particularly relevant for two types of students: (a) those who are unsure they want to specialize in IP and want a general introduction, and (b) those who do not have room in the schedules to take all of the upper-level offerings here at ASU. Not appropriate for students who have already taken the upper-level courses in copyright, trademark, and patents; students who have taken these offerings may be withdrawn.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-4   |                 |   |

| LAW     | 737         | Cults and Alternative Religions        | Provides opportunity to study laws and policies governing cults. While the definition of a "cult" will be a topic of initial study in the seminar, it may be conceived of loosely as a group with a charismatic leader whose members are persuaded to relinquish their self-identities and material possessions in furtherance of the group's goals. In addition to analyzing the definition of a cult, the first part of the seminar discusses the various types of cults, studying particular cults, and learning about cultic activities. The remainder covers domestic and foreign legal and policy issues generated by cults, including the legal rights of cultic organizations, anti-cult organizations, cult members, and cult members' families. Covers conventional religions that are conceptually similar to cults, to the degree that religious movements fall outside the mainstream. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-4   |                 |   |

| LDE     | 621         | Advanced Landscape Architectural Studio III | Structured around the Design School's "traveling studio" model and provides an opportunity for graduate-level students to refine their talents while also contributing to a better future. Challenges students to work in a multidisciplinary environment to identify new design concepts that improve society and the natural environment. For approximately one week during the semester, students travel to an off-campus location (either in the U.S. or abroad) to examine a local condition there for which new design solutions are needed. Students return to ASU and continue working on the project for the semester. Studio-based course includes reading, presentations by faculty and students, discussion, design research, conceptual design practice, and the public exhibition/presentation of this work in multiple formats. | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts  | The Design School                             | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): LDE 522 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LDE 621 or LDE 690 (Advanced Landscape Architecture Studio III)  |
| LDE     | 622         | Advanced Landscape Architectural Studio IV  | Capstone course. Students complete a design project that demonstrates mastery of landscape architecture skills and knowledge. Requires some independent direction. The instructor determines deadlines and expectations for deliverables. Requires cooperation and collaboration between students. Design performance is the themed topic and focus. Students develop a complex design project that addresses a significant professional issue. The project explores and demonstrates how advanced design resolves that issue in a performative manner using evidence-based practices and performance-based metrics. Studio-based course includes reading, presentations by faculty and students, discussion, design research, conceptual design practice, and the public exhibition/presentation of this work in multiple formats.            | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts  | The Design School                             | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): LDE 621 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LDE 622 or LDE 593 (Advanced Landscape Architectural Studio IV)  |

| LSC     | 425         | Analytical Chemistry for Life Sciences         | Presents an analysis of chemicals, including the theoretical and practical considerations regarding the separation, detection and quantitative determination of chemicals. Illustrates the application of different analytical procedures using some of the common chemicals of concern in the forensics and environmental fields.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): CHM 234 with C or better; CHM 238 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only FOR 425 or LSC 425   |
| LSC     | 426         | Analytical Chemistry for Life Sciences Lab     | Provides hands-on experience with sample extraction, sample clean-up, and instrumental analysis of common chemicals. Largely focuses on the application of analytical chemistry methods to the fields of forensics and the life sciences. Mainly uses the solvent and solid-phase analyte extraction methods; gas chromatography-mass spectrometry, FTIR and NMR, generally determines analyte identification.  | N                 | LAB               | N               | GNA           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences | 2     |                 | Prerequisite(s): CHM 234 with C or better; CHM 238 with C or better; Corequisite(s): FOR 425 or LSC 425; Credit is allowed for only FOR 426 or LSC 426   |

| LSC     | 475         | Principles of Toxicology                       | Presents the fundamental principles of toxicology and its application to both human and environmental situations. Starts with the means of defining and quantifying toxic effects through dose response curves (e.g. LD50, EC50, LOEL, NOEL). Then focuses on absorption pathways for toxicants as well as the degradation metabolism pathways for toxicants. Finally focuses on the mechanism of toxic action for common poisons and environmental pollutants. Emphasizes toxicants that students are likely to encounter in forensics and environmental fields. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BCH 361 or 371 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only FOR 475 or LSC 475 or PTX 475   |

| MAE     | 579         | Wind Energy                                  | Wind energy systems convert kinetic energy in the wind into electrical energy. Focuses on flow machines, including for example, aerodynamics and fluid dynamics. Begins with wind resource assessment utilizing atmospheric boundary layer science and then proceeds to computational fluid dynamics to understand the tools of modern wind resource assessment. Includes applications of the Navier-Stokes equations and some basics from turbulence theory. Resource assessment also includes modern remote sensing techniques such as lidar, radar and in situ instrumentation. Also includes discussions from current events and policy. Requires a background in applied experimental statistics, thermodynamics or aerodynamics. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. | MAS     | 550         | Philosophical and Spiritual Issues in Death and Dying | From Plato to Maimonides to Heidegger to Kubler-Ross, scholars, clinicians, and spiritual writers have recognized that attitudes about death and dying contribute to understandings of human existence. Recalling the ancient Socratic, biblical, and other spiritual traditions of the cura animarum (care for and cure of the soul) and joining contemporary post/secular conversations relevant to integration of body-mind-spirit, this course introduces basic concepts and practices of care ethics and spirituality. Focuses on relations among existential (ontological), therapeutic (psychosomatic), and spiritual (religious) dimensions of care. Theoretically, the course is inter-faith in approach, holistic in scope, and specialized in content. Practically, students examine real-life issues in care ethics and spirituality from multiple perspectives | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | Dean, New Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences    | 3-9   |                 | Prerequisite: Graduate (degree or nondegree) student; Credit is allowed for only MAS, PHI 550 or REL 585  |

| MAT     | 171         | Precalculus: Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) | Robust treatment of advanced algebraic skills and trigonometry that are vital in calculus. Algebra topics include functions, compositions, inverses, transformations, complex numbers, roots of polynomial functions, rational functions, exponential and logarithmic functions and their properties. Trigonometry is approached via the unit circle as well as the right triangle. Topics include the trigonometric functions, their graphs and identities, inverse trigonometry, the laws of sine and cosine, vectors and the dot product with an application toward work, and polar coordinates and roots of complex numbers (deMoivre's theorem).  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 4     | MA              | Prerequisite(s): MAT 117 with C or better, or Mathematics Placement Test with a score of 50% or higher, or ALEKS score of 61 or higher; Credit is allowed for only MAT 170 or MAT 171   |

| MAT     | 207         | Algebra and Geometry in the High School                              | Provides a conceptually rigorous treatment of the central ideas of algebra and geometry in high school. Explores and develops familiar mathematical content from a very different perspective. Focuses squarely on creating meaning for concepts and on building coherence of meaning across concepts and various representations of them. As such, course activities and assessments (class/lab activities, homework assignments, and exams) reflect these expectations, focusing on both doing high school mathematics with meaning and on expressing and communicating that meaning accurately and coherently in verbal and written form. Prior to enrolling in this course, students should have experience with algebra/geometry to at least the high school level. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Co-requisite: MTE 210   |
| MAT     | 208         | Discrete Mathematics for Secondary Teachers                          | Potential secondary teachers of mathematics should master the Math Standards proposed by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics for college-intending students. Focuses on those aspects of these standards that apply to discrete mathematics with particular emphasis on: mathematical problem solving, mathematics as communication, mathematical reasoning, and discrete mathematics. Taking a broader view, introduces mathematics as a discipline that uses known methods to discover and verify new conclusions through the study of discrete mathematics.   | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Liberal Arts and Sciences    | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 |   |

| MCB     | 503         | Bioimaging Lab                                     | Provides a fundamental understanding of light-based microscopy through the training and use of instruments contained within the SOLS Keck Bioimaging laboratory. Examines the use of bright field, contrast, epifluorescent, total internal reflective fluorescence (TIRF), confocal, multiphoton and atomic force microscopy and how they are applied to various research applications. Additional focus given toward image ethics, analysis, and presentation using programs such as Adobe Photoshop and ImageJ. During the second half of the semester, students propose and develop an experimental project, based on their graduate research, in which they collect data, do analysis, and prepare results for a final project presentation. | N                 | LAB               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Life Sciences | 2     |                 | Pre-requisites: BIO 504, MCB 504, or BIO 598 (Bioimaging Current Techniques); Credit is allowed for only BIO or MCB 503                     |
| MCB     | 504         | Bioimaging   | Lecture survey of modern techniques for imaging tissues, cells, and macromolecules, including light microscopy (e.g. video, fluorescence, confocal, multiphoton, single molecule), electron microscopy (e.g. transmission, scanning, cryogenic, tomographic) and ancillary techniques.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Life Sciences | 2     |                 | Pre-requisites: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking); Credit is allowed for only BIO or MCB 504                           |

| MCO     | 425         | Digital Media Literacy               | Helps students begin to navigate the 21st-century media, starting by becoming active users of media, not just passive consumers. The Internet-fueled democratization of media creation has enabled anyone to be a publisher, and given audiences' almost infinite choices, with both great and questionable effects. In a world of information abundance, it can be difficult to discern fact from opinion and truth from fiction. We need to know how to wade through this barrage of information with a critical eye, to be better informed, and ultimately become creators of media ourselves.                                     | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Cronkite School-Journ/Mass Com | Walter Cronkite School of Journalism & Mass Comm | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum cumulative 2.00 GPA; Credit is allowed for only MCO 425 or MCO 494 (Digital Media Literacy)  |

| MEE     | 441         | Wind Energy                          | Wind energy systems convert kinetic energy in the wind into electrical energy. Focuses on flow machines, including for example, aerodynamics and fluid dynamics. Begins with wind resource assessment utilizing atmospheric boundary layer science and then proceeds to computational fluid dynamics to understand the tools of modern wind resource assessment. Includes applications of the Navier-Stokes equations and some basics from turbulence theory. Resource assessment also includes modern remote sensing techniques such as lidar, radar and in situ instrumentation. Also includes discussions from current events and policy. Requires a background in applied experimental statistics, thermodynamics or aerodynamics. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. | MET     | 396         | Professional Orientation                  | Topics related to a successful career in engineering technology industry. Includes safety, life-long learning, ethics, and career planning.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 1     |                 | Pre-requisite: Junior or Senior standing  |
| MET     | 401         | Quality Assurance                         | Statistical quality control methods, design of experiments, sampling, gauge requirements and specifications, use of quality assurance tools.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: STP 420 (or APM 301); Credit is allowed for only MET 401 or 501   |
| MET     | 409         | Applied Engineering Economics             | Fundamentals of engineering economics in a practical, industry-based approach. Includes effects of depreciation, taxes, inflation, and replacement analysis.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Junior or Senior standing; Credit is allowed for only MET 409 or 509  |
| MET     | 410         | Manufacturing Resource Management         | Measures like cycle time, throughput, capacity, work-in-process, inventory, variability, and how they drive operating relationships in a factory.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: MET 341; Credit is allowed for only MET 410 or 510   |
| MET     | 415         | Manufacturing Simulation                  | Computer simulation of manufacturing operations. Discrete event simulation models range from individual processes to whole factories.   | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: MET 341; STP 420; Credit is allowed for only MET 415 or 515   |
| MET     | 416         | Applied Computer-Integrated Manufacturing | Techniques and practices of computer-integrated manufacturing as applied in a broad range of industry.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     | CS              | Pre-requisite: MET 341; Credit is allowed for only MET 416 or 516   |
| MET     | 418         | Composites Materials Manufacturing        | Introduces composite materials and associated manufacturing issues, including tooling, processes, and quality control. Related issues, including testing and joining.   | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: MET 300 or MSE 250. Credit is allowed for only MET 418 or 518   |
| MET     | 421         | Vehicle Powertrains                       | Internal combustion engine design, performance and operation, and power transmission systems within vehicles.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: MET 321   |
| MET     | 423         | Vehicle Chassis and Running Gear Design   | Design and manufacture of chassis, structures, steering and braking systems and components, wheels and tires, suspension systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: MET 321; MET 331  |
| MET     | 424         | Vehicle Electrical Systems                | Vehicle electrical power and signal systems, computer control and analog control systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: EST 210; MET 321; MET 421   |
| MET     | 426         | Vehicle Thermal Design                    | Heat management in vehicle systems, including thermal design of engine and transmission cooling systems, cabin heating, and air conditioning.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Engineering Programs | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: MET 421; Pre/Co-requisite: MET 434  |
| MET     | 427         | Vehicle System Integration and Testing    | Systems engineering principles. Design of the interfaces between vehicle subsystems. Testing of integrated systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Ira A. | MTE     | 301         | Investigating Change: Patterns, Functions, and Modeling             | Examines different conceptions of algebra as the study of (1) generalized arithmetic, (2) reasoning with symbols, (3) reasoning with patterns and functions, (4) structure in the number system, and (5) modeling. Distinguishes arithmetic from algebraic reasoning, and develops an appreciation for the pervasiveness of the function concept in the K-8 school mathematics curriculum. Features algebraic thinking and representation using algebra tiles and other concrete models, realistic problems, dynamic geometry software, graphing calculators, and a variety of virtual tools and Web sites. Topics include, but are not limited to: patterns, relations, functions and covariational thinking; multiple conceptions of quantity, variables, constants, and unknowns; inductive, deductive, and analogical reasoning; rate of change and proportional thinking; algebra learning trajectories; and comparisons of additive vs. multiplicative, absolute vs. relational, and arithmetic vs. algebraic thinking. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Integrative Sciences & Arts    | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): admission to the Professional Program   |

| MTE     | 605         | Research-based Practices, Pedagogy and Instructional Leadership in Mathematics | Examines research-based practices, pedagogy, and instructional leadership in mathematics classrooms K-8. Emphasizes learning and teaching mathematics for understanding. Featured practices and pedagogy for fostering symbolic thinking include inductive and deductive concept development, problem-based learning, cognitively guided instruction, learning trajectories, and use of physical manipulatives and virtual tools to facilitate mathematical thinking. Mathematics instructional leadership projects emphasize development of mentoring techniques and professional development expertise. Prepares K-6 and 5-9 mathematics teachers as mathematics teacher leaders, specialists, or coaches in middle schools and the elementary grades. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | MaryLouFulton Teachers College | Educational Leadership & Innovation, Division   | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
