| FIS     | 101         | SFIS: The ASU Experience         | Welcomes freshman students enrolled in the Innovation in Society major at ASU. Introduces the array of resources available to them as ASU students, stimulates them to reflect on their choice of major, and provides an opportunity to hear about the career trajectories and interests of faculty and alumni from the School for the Future of Innovation in Society. Capped at sections of 20 students to promote discussion and a sense of community.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1     |                 |  |
| FIS     | 111         | Welcome to the Future            | Explores the ways in which the future inspires, shapes and motivates the present. Illustrates how possible futures are used by people and institutions to advance agendas, shape conversations and sell products. Examines how science, technology and other forces are mobilized to create change. Empowers students to play a role in shaping our collective future.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 |  |
| FIS     | 201         | Innovation in Society            | In the modern age, governments, multinational corporations and civil society movements have rallied around the idea that innovation is necessary for the maintenance of health, prosperity and the good life in general. Examines the vast implications of this promise, the reasons why it is so powerful and explanations for why it falls short. Also examines what innovation is, who funds it and why some innovations succeed while others fail. Links innovation with society to see how change happens differently in different places and how diverse populations are impacted.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | H               |  |

| FIS     | 305         | Ways of Knowing                  | Students research, beginning with the concept of research itself and its various purposes, highlighting knowledge and how it is created in different disciplinary approaches. Exposes historical and philosophical underpinnings of how research is conceptualized, presented and implemented, including what constitutes information, knowledge and evidence. Introduces material that is in a traditional research design and methodology course; however, the emphasis uniquely focuses on knowledge creation, innovation, the nature of disciplinary knowledge and its impact on society. Explores the epistemological differences in problem identification and approaches to inquiry in the disciplinary perspectives of engineering, the sciences and in the social sciences. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours                              |
| FIS     | 307         | Navigating Futures               | Foresight methods and their potentials as entry-points into public discussions about near- and mid-range technoscientific developments. Four elements constitute the organizing axis of the course: (1) the history of foresight exercises in government agencies and business organizations; (2) the methods of four forms of foresight exercises (technology foresight, science and technology studies, anticipatory governance and scenario development); (3) a comparative assessment of these dominant forms; and (4) a group-based application exercise using one of the foresight methods.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours                              |
| FIS     | 308         | Politics, Markets and Innovation | Studies the roles that governments, markets and other factors play in promoting, disseminating and regulating science-based technological innovation. Includes examining the theoretical literature on factors that structure markets and shape diffusion, as well as case studies that illustrate the processes and mechanisms that govern innovations in society. In addition to studying the role of governments, firms and universities, also considers the role of publics as consumers who adopt innovations but also as citizens who may be skeptical of them. Includes case studies in agriculture, health care, biotechnology and digital rights.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours                              |

| FIS     | 331         | Technology and the Modern World    | Explores how technological systems are developed and embedded in the modern world with an eye to playing a role in creating better futures. Examines how machines and techniques can shape institutions, relationships and values. Challenges students to envision futures that they want and work to develop strategies for moving us (and our systems) toward those futures. Analyzes technologies past, present and imagined, and describes the ways in which technologies shape our world and the ways in which we shape those technologies. Through repeated practice in class students play a productive role in and even facilitate conversations that tease out the relationships between values and technological systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| FIS     | 332         | Risk and the Future                | Examines the evolving global risk landscape that is resulting from rapidly increasing global connectivity, tight coupling and massive complexity. Develops an understanding of how innovation in society is changing the risk landscape and considers how innovation in approaches to risk can help navigate this emerging landscape. Topics include technological risk, sociopolitical risk, catastrophic risk, existential risk, converging technologies, perception and uncertainty, anticipation, precaution, uncertainty and risk innovation.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| FIS     | 333         | Governing Emerging Technologies    | Examines the variety of ways in which societies make collective decisions or govern science and technology. Focuses on a particular category of science and technology: the set of emerging technologies like nanotechnology, artificial intelligence and robotics, genetic modification and synthetic biology, cognitive science and neurotechnology, geoengineering, and others that pose particular problems of high stakes, high uncertainty and ambiguous novelty. Closely allied with the research agenda of numerous faculty in the School for the Future of Innovation in Society, especially those in the Center for Nanotechnology in Society, the Risk Innovation Lab, and others; exposes students to inquiry and skills directly from the research front. Students perform numerous research tasks.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| FIS     | 334         | Science, Technology and Inequality | Conceptual and theoretical frameworks; provides empirical case studies that contribute to understandings of science and technology as they are used in society. The applications of science and technology in society need to be understood as instrumental to the creation and maintenance of inequality within and between societies. Science and technology does not merely cause or alleviate inequality, but are more profoundly implicated in social relations regarding distribution and access to the benefits of different technologies as well as exposure to risks from science and technology projects in society. The more pervasive and obdurate sources of social distribution are enshrined and entrenched in these scientific and technological systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | C               | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only FIS 334 or JUS 334 |
| FIS     | 335         | Designing Knowledge                | Provides a foundational understanding of how social organizations make and use knowledge. From research laboratories to biotechnology companies to statistical agencies, many organizations are specifically designed to be knowledge enterprises, enterprises whose primary purpose is to produce knowledge. All organizations in modern societies also operate knowledge systems: systems whose purpose is to create, validate, circulate, communicate and apply knowledge in the making of decisions. Examines how these forms of organization work and contribute to modern societies.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| FIS     | 336         | Science and Technology Policy      | Science and technology are powerful forces in the modern world. They have been hailed as a way to address everything from world hunger to old age. This does not, however, happen automatically, nor does it always work out the way one presumes. Governments make numerous decisions that affect the direction and application of science and technology, and government policies are affected by a myriad of social, political, and cultural factors. This class will explore the variety of ways in which governments make these policies, how the policies shape the development of science and technology and their applications, and how policy may be shaped to create better futures. Governments around the world have coalesced around the idea that science and technology are necessary for the promotion of the good life. We will examine how they put this idea into action by looking at five interrelated topics: Food, Security/Military, Health, Economy, and Sustainability. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 |  |

| FIS     | 337         | Innovation and Global Development                      | International development, the role of technology and innovation, and the current era of globalization. Focuses primarily on socioeconomic development. The globalization of the world economy, with the end of the Cold War, and the advent of global information and communications technologies, has had significant implications for development around the globe. While wealth is rising in many countries and among certain social classes, there is still overwhelming poverty, lack of access to clean water, adequate nutrition, and health services for the majority of people in the world. This is not a new situation; however the advent of the recent era of globalization, which includes both political and technological changes, is a variable that influences development in complex ways.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     | G               | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |

Innovation allows for amazing possibilities, and within each one of us is the potential to create, apply, research and scale innovation to realize impact goals. Grounded in a use-inspired framework with a focus on transforming society, engages innovation for impact with a particular focus on what constitutes and how one achieves sustainable and scalable outcomes.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |

Grounded in a use-inspired framework with a focus on transforming society, engages innovation for impact with a particular focus on meaning making, grounded claims, and what it means to gather, analyze, construct and advance meaningful assertions and storied truths that advance productive claims about the potential of an innovation to realize impact goals.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |
| FIS     | 373         | Innovation for Impact: Innovation Journey              | Builds on the ideas, concepts and experiences engaged in earlier course work. Grounded in a use-inspired framework with a focus on transforming society, engages innovation for impact with a focus on imagining, designing, developing and optimizing a particular innovation such that it is likely to realize impact goals. Beyond product-centric perspectives that locate change within the innovation, this journey emphasizes an ecological perspective that positions innovation as a shared accomplishment distributed across the designed innovation, engaged participants, prepared facilitators and a responsive ecosystem.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |

| FIS     | 431         | Technology, Security and Insecurity in Global Politics | Focuses on the international political aspects of technological change; examines the impact of technological innovation and political change on the international political system. The overall goal is to create an awareness of and ability to analyze and synthesize world events, the particular role of technology, and consider the myriad ways that globalization and technology as a main driver could be changing the international system of nation-states. Technological innovation often takes place within a political context, including international politics, as nation-states and other entities develop technologies within the context of competition and power. There are several issues that run throughout the course as major themes. One is the role of technology in political and social change, and the impact of the latter on the former.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours   |

| FIS     | 480         | Innovation in Society Studio                           | Facilitates experiential learning and allows students to work with clients in the field of technology, innovation and sustainability. Through team projects with identified stakeholders, students engage, plan, design, implement and assess projects while learning interpersonal skills and managing client relationships. Students gain real-world experience and develop skills in project management, including planning, implementing and evaluating a complete project cycle. Allows students to manage both client-based projects and team relationships to complete projects. Students carry out project-based research, conduct interviews and meetings, make site visits, develop work plans and scope of works, negotiate clear deliverables with clients, implement projects and give public presentations. Presentations are grounded in the idea of conducting effective science communication. | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): FIS 305  |

| FIS     | 481         | Innovation for Impact: Application Journey     | As a culminating experience, course brings together the previous experiences and emerging expertise to investigate, innovate and cultivate an impact innovation to achieve impact goals. Starting with building a grounded appreciation for a particular impact outcome, participants then design an innovation to realize a better future state, grounding this work in lessons with respect to logic models, design fictions, agile startups, and rapid prototyping. Some participants simply test a component and produce a reflective analysis, while others expand credit requirements and iterate to achieve transformative outcomes.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): FIS 371; FIS 372; FIS 373  |

| FMS     | 349         | Israeli Wars in Israeli Movies                         | From its first day, the State of Israel has been in a state of war with the Arab countries. Every few years, the fighting erupted into an open war. At the beginning of the country, there was a consensus that the wars were forced on the Israelis, and therefore, the heavy toll on human life was unavoidable. Since the Six Day War, 1967, and the political change in 1977, Israeli society is split in attitude toward war. The absolute belief in the political and military leaders was shaken, and new political agendas entered the political arena. To this divided society, the Intifadas occurred with the waves of terrorism. These events added fire to the heated debates in Israel. One means of expression is through the cinema. In this course, students watch, analyze, and discuss selected movies on the Israeli wars and terrorism in the streets of Israel. Through these movies, produced by Israelis, we'll try to understand the mood and attitude of the Israelis toward war, enemies, and political and military leaders. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 105, or 107 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only FMS 349 or HEB 349 or HEB 394 (Israeli Wars in Israeli Movies)                 |

| FMS     | 507         | Crime and Violence in American Film (Online)          | This course is available online only. Focuses on historiographic and critical scholarship on three aspects of crime and violence in American film: (1) regulation and censorship; (2) representation and society; and (3) theories about the effects on audiences of viewing crime and violence in films.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): American Media and Popular Culture MAS students  |
| FMS     | 508         | Race and Gender in American Film                      | Investigates the diverse ways in which race and gender are represented in American film history and culture. In a broader context, also analyzes how the meaning of race and gender, and their intersectionality, has shifted and changed across time and space, and how cinema has contributed to these shifts. Gives attention to the relationships among visual style, narrative structure, generic convention and identity. Students become more literate about the power of film to reflect and refract ideologies of race and gender, and to analyze how these identities impact the experiences of individuals and groups in our society. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only FMS 508 or FMS 598 (Race and Gender in American Film)                                      |
| FMS     | 511         | Fundamentals of Cinema & Television Narrative Online  | Studies the creativity and the technique of screenwriting for the conventional narrative film and for television. Student writing exercises culminate in a script for micro-cinema. Seminar. | FMS     | 527         | Identity and World Film                               | Examines how films around the world represent gender, race, ethnicity, and sexual orientation through the lens of genres and their variations and how genres reinforce or critiques stereotypes.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking); Credit is allowed for only ARS 540, FMS 527 or (ARS 494, ENG 465, FMS 494 or ARS 598 Identity and World Film) |
| FMS     | 535         | Comedy as Social Discourse                            | Focuses upon the way that comedy can speak with particular clarity to the American condition from behind the microphone and, by extension, on the big and small screens. By examining how comic conventions, personae and sensibilities in stand-up respond to change in social and political sensibilities at specific historical moments, we tease out why comedy, perhaps more than any other genre, can get people to engage (and to think about) a variety of human experiences--often in spite of themselves.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only FMS 535 or FMS 598 (Comedy as Social Discourse)  |
| FMS     | 543         | Artists in Film: Artists' Biopics                     | Examines artists' "biopics," biographical films about artists, chronologically from the subgenre's first appearance in 1936 to recent films. Explores relationships between film and history and between film and myths of creativity; major directors' attraction to artists' biopics; stereotypes of artists (genius, deviant, etc.); and how notions of creativity are inflected by gender, race and national identity. Assignments include weekly readings and film viewings and one short paper; optional documentaries and films are also available.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ARS 443 or ARS 543 or FMS 430 or FMS 543 or ARS 598 (Artists in Film: Biopics)             |
| FMS     | 590         | Reading and Conference                                | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Department of English | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| FOR     | 456         | Studies in Forensic Linguistics              | Focuses on the three main aspects of that branch of applied linguistics, namely language and the law, court cases where language is the central dispute, and linguistic evidence.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only ENG 456 or ENG 494 (Studies in Forensic Linguistics) or FOR 456 or FOR 494 (Studies in Forensic Linguistics) or PAX 456    |
| FOR     | 475         | Principles of Toxicology                     | Presents the fundamental principles of toxicology and its application to both human and environmental situations. Starts with the means of defining and quantifying toxic effects through dose response curves (e.g. LD50, EC50, LOEL, NOEL). Then focuses on absorption pathways for toxicants as well as the degradation metabolism pathways for toxicants. Finally focuses on the mechanism of toxic action for common poisons and environmental pollutants. Emphasizes toxicants that students are likely to encounter in forensics and environmental fields. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BCH 361 or 371 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only FOR 475 or LSC 475 or PTX 475  |
| FOR     | 480         | Advanced Topics in Human Forensic DNA Typing | Examines the science of current forensic DNA typing methods by focusing on the technology behind STR, Y-STR and mtDNA typing, real-time PCR, serology tests, capillary electrophoresis, expert systems and statistics.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BIO 181; BIO 182; LSC 347; Credit is allowed for only FOR 480 or FOR 494 (Advanced Topics in Human Forensic DNA Typing) or LSC 480 or LSC 494 (Advanced Topics in Human Forensic DNA Typing) |

| FRE     | 414         | French and Italian Popular Culture                     | Popular culture no longer holds the ancillary role traditionally reserved for whatever does not carry the definition of high culture. That popular culture is instead able to provide us with very relevant insights on the identity of a nation and a people is now widely accepted. As a consequence, this class aims at examining popular culture-related artifacts in Italy and France in order to shed a light on crucial issues such as the culture of food and its historical and social significance; the meaning of fashion and design within an urban context, with a special attention to gender roles; the importance of the comics, given in particular the exceptional success the bande dessinée genre is currently enjoying in France throughout the whole age range of the population; the show business with a particular attention to music; and the social function and role of sport with respect to the two dominant sports in both countries (soccer and cycling). | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | (L or HU) & G   | Prerequisite(s): ENG 200 with C or better OR minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only FRE 414 or FRE 494 (French and Italian Pop Culture) or ITA 414 or ITA 494 (French and Italian Pop Culture) or SLC 414 or SLC 494 (French and Italian Pop Culture) |

| FSH     | 201         | Textiles Survey              | Offers a broad survey of textiles as they relate to art, fashion and their place in human culture. Topics explore material content, weaves and textile properties; the artistic and social history of textiles; modern textile manufacturing and consumption; and innovations in textile invention for science and industry. The goal of this semester is for you to more fully understand the underlying content and structure of textiles in order to better appreciate the overwhelming variety of textiles that have been created over time, place, gender, ethnicity, purpose and methodology. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | School of Art | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only FSH 201 or ART 294 (Textiles Survey)   |
| FSH     | 202         | Fashion Construction         | Prepares students for a career in the apparel industry or for continued study in graduate school. Introduces core concepts of fashion materials and construction: cutting, sewing and finishing techniques for creating garment prototypes. Focuses on the fashion industry as well as apparel construction and production.   | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | School of Art | 3     |                 |   |
| FSH     | 203         | Fashion Illustration         | In this studio setting, students practice drawing the fashion figure from a live model, both in leotard and in clothing, facilitating understanding of drape, shape, shadow, silhouette and how it relates to fashion design. Demonstrates and practices fundamental skills of visual communication and problem solving, including fabric rendering and proportion and how it relates to the fashion designer's sketch. Brief lectures, demos and critiques are an integral component of each class. Materials used in class include, yet are not limited to, charcoal and gouache.                 | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | School of Art | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ART 110 or ART 111; Credit is allowed for only FSH 203 or FSH 294 (Fashion Illustration) |
| FSH     | 204         | Social Aspects of Fashion    | Introduces ways of examining clothing and fashion in context. How do we read images and representations of clothing and how do they manipulate the meaning of the garment and its wearer? In what ways is this visual language used to select and produce fashion? What influences how we dress on a daily basis and over time? These are just some of the questions about appearance, clothing and culture that are used to embark on a participatory research project and as a point of departure for class discussions and related readings.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | School of Art | 3     | HU              | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 102, 105, 107, or 108; FSH 125  |

| GCU     | 171         | The Thread of Energy                              | Follows the thread of energy through every aspect of our lives. Discusses the technical, social, legal, and policy contexts of all energy resources, including present and unconventional fossil fuels, nuclear power, and renewable resources. Addresses energy use throughout history, the influence of energy on quality of life, the role it plays in political strategies and environmental quality, how it shapes our neighborhoods and cities, its contribution to our personal comfort and national security, and how its importance is reflected in the worlds of business and the humanities. Its dual role is as a stand-alone introduction to energy, and as a first step to more advanced studies of energy in the natural, technical, and social sciences. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning | 3     | SB & G          | Credit is allowed for only GCU or SOS 171   |

| GIS     | 431         | Spatial Databases  | Covers data modeling concepts, the relational data model for the storage and retrieval of spatial and nonspatial information. The data retrieval emphasizes the industry-standard query language SQL and Spatial Query Languages.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: GIS 311; GIS 322  |
| GIS     | 441         | Geographics: Interactive and Animated Cartography and Geovisualization | Advanced cartography, stressing influence and application of the computer on geographic representation. Emphasizes creation of maps for the Internet.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning | 3     | CS              | Prerequisite(s): GIS 222 with C or better  |
| GIS     | 461         | Optimization Fundamentals for Spatial Analysis                         | Covers the fundamentals of optimization for spatial analysis. Reviews elements of calculus, matrices, and basic linear algebra. Introduces linear programming, integer programming and branch and bound, and heuristics. Provides the basics for use and application of GIScience and spatial analysis methods. Objectives include: reviewing basics of math, calculus and linear algebra; introducing optimization approaches, including linear programming, integer programming and heuristics; and applying these methods to structured problems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): MAT 270, 271 or 272 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only GIS 461, 561, PUP 481, 581, GCU 494 (Optimization Fundamentals) or GCU 598 (Optimization Fundamentals) |
| GIS     | 462         | Location Analysis and Modeling   | Provides a technical overview of location theory in the context of GIScience, focusing on analysis and modeling issues. Relies upon applications associated with emergency service planning, natural resource management, retail site selection, among others, to make connections among models, spatial information, and interpretation of findings. Explores utilization and implementation considerations using GIS. Objectives include: exposing a range of location analysis and modeling approaches; applying approaches in combination with GIS and optimization software; and carrying out an application-oriented study relying on acquired skills. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GIS 211 with C or better; GIS 461 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only GIS 462 or GIS 562 or PUP 482 or PUP 582 or PUP 598 (Location Modeling)                  |
| GIS     | 470         | Advanced Statistics for Geography and Planning                         | Statistical techniques applied to the analysis of distributions and relationships. | GLG     | 327         | Earth's Critical Zone                      | The Earth's near surface environment (the "critical zone") supports most life and is the dynamic interface between the solid Earth and its fluid envelopes where much of the geologic record is produced. We now know that we face rapid climate change and the consequences of changes in land use, water resources, and ecosystems. Critical to planning a response to, or mitigation of, environmental change is understanding how the Earth surface works. Focuses on how changes to the environment manifest themselves in the critical zone--in the form and function of the Earth's surface (landforms, water resources, soils, ecosystems). Offers a quantitative introduction to the form and function of the processes impacting the Earth's critical zone to build an understanding of the interactions of physical, chemical and biotic processes in shaping the surface and determining fluid, solute and sediment fluxes.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Earth and Space Exploration | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s) with C or better: GLG 101 & 103 or SES 121 & 123; MAT 170, 171, 210, 251, 265 or 270; PHY 101, 111, 121, or 150 or CHM 101, 107, 113, or 114 or BIO 100, 181, 182, 281, or 282; Credit is allowed for only GLG 327 or SOS 374 |

| GPE     | 10          | English Verbal Skills for International Scholars | Helps international graduate students (prospective ITAs) as well as other graduate students or visiting scholars at ASU improve their spoken English (pronunciation and fluency). Helps familiarize students with American classroom culture and helps them become effective classroom teachers. Each student receives an individual pronunciation assessment to help him or her focus on areas needing improvement. There is direct instruction and practice of pronunciation (e.g., sound, stress, rhythm, intonation). By participating in and leading class discussions, by working in small groups or pairs and by preparing for videotaped presentations, students improve English fluency. | N                 | LEC               | Y               | YGB           | Office of the Provost                    | Global Launch                         | 3     |                 |  |
| GPE     | 11          | International Scholar Teacher Training           | Familiarizes international graduate students (prospective ITAs) at ASU with American classroom culture and helps them become effective classroom teachers. Exposes various methods of teaching commonly used in the American university classroom.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | YGB           | Office of the Provost                    | Global Launch                         | 3     |                 |  |
| GPE     | 90          | Business Presentation Skills                     | Develops ability to verbally persuade, inform and motivate an audience. Covers integral key competencies such as: identifying audience, researching and organizing information, preparing and delivering effective visuals, and communicating concisely in English. Coupled with activities which include impromptu business-themed presentations, evaluations by the professor and feedback from peers.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | YGB           | Office of the Provost                    | Global Launch                         | 6     |                 |  |

| GPH     | 569         | Digital Analysis of Remotely Sensed Data   | Focuses on the digital image processing of remotely sensed data for earth resource analysis and applications. Provides the skills and knowledge to apply digital remote sensing techniques for biophysical and environmental planning and problems. Through laboratory work, students have opportunities to practice concepts and techniques learned in the lecture part. Requires a reasonable background in college algebra and basic statistics. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Geographical Sciences and Urban Planning | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking); Credit is allowed for only GPH 394 (Digital Analysis of Remotely Sensed Data), 569 or 598 (Digital Analysis of Remotely Sensed Data) |

| GRA     | 521         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio I   | Students translate data, stories and references that they collect in their research into masterful visual narratives. This studio is an inquisitive environment for exploring ways to frame information and weave stories with graphic design. Students acquire new knowledge as individuals and as a group. Emphasizes studio-based research, conceptual development and articulation of process, voice and a high level of design execution.  | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Visual Communication Design major. Credit is allowed for only GRA 521 or GRA 590 (Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio I) |
| GRA     | 522         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio II  | Encourages students to develop a framework for understanding the role of design systems, tools and objects as cultural artifacts and their reflection on social diversity. In particular, students focus on the cultural experience of collaborative consumption as it is fostered through visual communication design.   | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 521. Credit is allowed for only GRA 522 or GRA 590 (Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio II)                                    |
| GRA     | 526         | Visiting Designers                              | Series of workshops (three per semester) in which students work closely with professionals and scholars in design and related disciplines.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Master of Science in Design or PhD in Environmental Design & Planning student   |
| GRA     | 561         | Methods in Visual Communication I               | Introduces methodology in visual communication.   | N                 | STO               | N               | OPT           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Master of Science in Design or PhD in Environmental Design & Planning student   |
| GRA     | 562         | Methods in Visual Communication II              | Advanced theories and methodologies in visual communication. Emphasizes visual search as the synthesis of theory and practice.  | N                 | STO               | N               | OPT           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 561 with C or better   |
| GRA     | 563         | Thesis Document Design                          | Emphasizes the construction of the final thesis document as a visual communication object and/or medium.  | N                 | STO               | N               | OPT           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Master of Science in Design student   |
| GRA     | 581         | Internship in Teaching Design                   | Develop assignments, conduct critiques, structure dialogue, make presentations, and assist in the instruction of studio and lecture courses.  | N                 | STO               | N               | OPT           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Master of Science in Design student   |

| GRA     | 590         | Reading and Conference                          | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.   | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z1            | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GRA     | 592         | Research  | Independent study in which a student, under the supervision of a faculty member, conducts research that is expected to lead to a specific project such as a thesis or dissertation, report, or publication. Assignments might include data collection, experimental work, data analysis, or preparation of a manuscript.  | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z1            | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GRA     | 593         | Applied Project                                 | Preparation of a supervised applied project that is a graduation requirement in some professional majors.   | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z1            | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GRA     | 594         | Conference and Workshop                         | Topical instruction, usually in compressed format, leading to academic credit. | GRA     | 621         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio III | Structured around the Design School traveling-studio model, this studio challenges students to work together to identify new design opportunities. For approximately one week during the semester, students travel to an off-campus location to examine a local condition there for which new design solutions are needed. Students return to ASU and continue working on the project for the semester.   | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 522  |
| GRA     | 622         | Advanced Visual Communication Design Studio IV  | As a culmination of study at the master level, the student is responsible for the development of an individually determined, semester-long project in response to defined objectives, periodic commentary by committee, and formal review. Students meet regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Final faculty review and project book containing a written as well as graphic theoretical component are the forms of final presentation for this contribution to the field of visual communication design. | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): GRA 621  |

| GSC     | 502         | Security Studies               | Continues the exploration of the rapidly changing and highly complex geopolitical, technological and strategic context within which modern conflict and war occur; the profound social, political, economic and cultural implications of the changing nature of war and conflict. Provides an overview of several fundamental themes that run through the history of war and strategy, and discusses the increasing importance of nonmilitary "soft power" in managing conflict situations. Also introduces the importance of regional knowledge in conflict as a critical operational competence (using the Russian invasion of Crimea and Ukraine as a case study), as well as the broader challenges of civilizational conflict and the importance of identity and narrative in modern conflict. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 503         | Future of War                  | Provides an overview of key issues, themes and ideas associated with the future of war. Contextualizes this discussion with a reflection on the impact of 9/11, especially within the U.S. Engages a number of core concepts, including the meaning, nature and experience of war including theories that violence is in decline. Also considers the changing impact of new wars on civilians, shifts in current and future technology and future scenarios including questions of climate change, global demographics and potential major power conflicts. Links the ideas, theories and understandings of the future of war with specific cases and concrete examples.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| GSC     | 504         | Understanding Conflict and War | Provides a critical overview of different definitions and meanings of war and armed conflict. Engages key theories used to understand conflict including realism, neorealism, liberalism and constructivism. Considers core issues in the field, linking empirical studies with explanations for what drives, sustains and resolves conflict including reviewing the fact that democratic states tend not to go to war with each other (the democratic peace); the structure and logic of arms races; escalation and alliance; and core ideas regarding peace, conflict management and conflict resolution. Many of the issues and theories reviewed in this class are linked with case studies and concrete examples.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies        | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| GSC     | 505         | Law of War  | Provides an overview of key elements of the law of war, also known as international humanitarian law (IHL) and the law of armed conflict (LOAC). Engages basic questions of international law, reviewing its history, sources and structure. Covers jus ad Bellum, the rules governing how states legally go to war as well as jus in bello, the established ideas regarding how to manage actions during armed conflict. Covers key principles within the law of war, including distinction, proportionality and necessity as well as reviewing the differences between international and noninternational armed conflicts and other key ideas. Reviews the systems through which the law of war is enforced and also considers basic theoretical and practical issues regarding compliance. In general, links the ideas, practices, rules and understandings of the law of war with specific cases and concrete examples. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| GSC     | 506         | U.S. Politics of Security                             | Builds a foundational understanding of the complex system of formal and informal actors and structural forces that shape U.S. security policy. Starts with both theoretical and case study examinations of the role domestic politics plays in the production of policy decisions. Analyzes critical institutional actors and relationships between actors, including: the President and Congress, the National Security Council and interagency, and the civilian-military relationship. Finally, investigates key structural forces placed on the policy-making process by the American society, and the relationship between policymakers and the public.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| GSC     | 507         | Global Politics of Security                           | Offers several approaches to understanding the global politics of security, including: the structure of international and multinational security institutions and actors including nongovernmental organizations (NGOs), the United Nations' Security Council, peacekeeping missions, regional organizations (NATO, EU, Inter-American System, ASEAN) and others. Also considers the roles of private military and intelligence contractors and corporations working on issues of direct and indirect relation to security issues. Through specific case studies and examples, reviews the operation of these bodies and their complex relationships.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| GSC     | 508         | Comparative Studies of Conflict                       | Provides a critical overview of key theories on the causes, justifications and structures of political conflict and the use of violence. Begins by outlining core issues within the problem of social order, that is, how to think about managing governance and power. Reviews the idea of "collective action" and its link with force and violence, ideas that are contrasted with nonviolence as a political strategy. Then considers civil wars and interstate wars, comparing these forms of organized violence, as well as the current challenges of armed nonstate actors (within an international system premised on states) and an overview of the meaning of peace. Links the issues and theories reviewed in this class with case studies and concrete examples as a means of linking key ideas with their practical and policy implications.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| GSC     | 509         | Emerging Technologies and Global Security             | Provides an introduction to the implications of accelerating changes in military and security technologies, fueled by rapid developments in five core technology systems: nanotechnology, biotechnology, information and communications technology (ICT), robotics and applied cognitive science. Also introduces the idea of revolutions in military affairs, a concept that has been used to frame discussions about the strategic implications of new technologies from drones to cyber.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| GSC     | 510         | Governance in Post-Conflict and Transitional Contexts | One of the most pressing current global security policy issues involves understanding and implementing strategies, mechanisms and processes to address post-conflict and transitional contexts. How do societies create and manage representational governance after the fall of authoritarian regimes? How can institutions be rebuilt and reconstituted? How can a social order address the justice demands of victims of brutal political violence whose suffering was often a key element of prior systems of rule? Provides a critical introduction to the field of post-conflict reconstruction and transitional justice. Reviews the tense and uncertain nature of post-conflict environments and their challenges, engages the security questions raised by peacekeeping and stability operations. Also considers the difficulties of governance and reconstruction in the aftermath of conflict.                   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| GSC     | 511         | Terrorism and Insurgency                              | Provides a critical overview of the use of terror by governments, insurgents and other nonstate actors. Engages the definition of terrorism and provides an overview of key practices and strategies. Reviews key theories as to the causes, meaning and impact of the deployment of terror as a strategy by distinct groups. This involves a consideration of state terror, insurgencies and global terror networks. Links many of the core ideas reviewed in this class with a set of case studies designed to ground the broader discussion of terror within specific situations and contexts.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Politics and Global Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

| GTD     | 511         | Development Policy and Practices                    | Since the Bretton Woods Agreements in 1944, enormous energy has been devoted to generating the right tools for global development policy. Yet, little attention is given to the relationship between these tools, the practice of development and actual outcomes. At best, it is understood as a "gap" between the theory of development policy and practices. There is no reflection on what the good development policy looks like or what collective learning we have thus far. Informs students on the complexity of policy making and its relationship to development practices through time. Creates an intellectual space to discuss the practices of global development; uses case studies to enhance students' creativity and skill needed in managing and negotiating critical development challenges. Approaches development policy (models, strategies and project design) primarily as a tool to legitimize power relation rather than to orient practice for desired development outcomes. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society          | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| HCD     | 403         | Process Engineering                                      | Core concepts in process engineering, specifically related to systems improvement and patient safety. The Institute of Medicine (IOM) advocates for integrating process engineering within health care to optimize health care outcomes. The IOM addresses multiple dimensions of health, including efficiency, effectiveness, safety, equity, patient-centeredness and access. These domains provide the framework from which faculty approach course content.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| HCD     | 404         | Advanced Concepts in the Science of Health Care Delivery | Applies the themes of science, systems and leadership across the continuum of health and health care. Application and discussion of core competencies to facilitate critical thinking.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| HCD     | 405         | Health Technology  | Develops essential skills in identifying, analyzing and evaluating information technology applications in health care. Examples include electronic health records, computerized prescriber order entry, and computerized clinical decision support. Discusses the use of health technology in a variety of care settings, including outpatient and inpatient, and facilitate access to health care in resource-poor communities through the use of efficient technology.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |
| HCD     | 410         | Supporting the Health of Older Adults                    | Focuses on community and national policies and programs that affect the health of older adults, programs to improve access to healthcare as well as to improve overall health, issues related to family and professional caregiving, and future challenges related to caring for older adults.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours  |

| HCD     | 499         | Individualized Instruction              | Provides an opportunity for original study or investigation in the major or field of specialization on an individual and more autonomous basis. Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course.   | Y                 | IND               | Y               | Z1            | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 |  |
| HCD     | 501         | Biostatistics and Data Management       | Provides an understanding of the statistical tools and principles of research design and methods in health behavior research in health environments. Encompasses an overview of quantitative, qualitative and mixed designs and focuses on the interpretation and communication of health behavior research through published reports and presentations. Incorporates research approaches and methodologies utilized in an array of content areas. Helps students gain a strong conceptual understanding and application of the statistical tools and research methods used to answer research questions of interest to health and health behavior researchers; it does not focus on mathematical treatments of underlying assumptions and formulae and related statistical problems sets or exercises. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |

| HCD     | 511         | Health Economics, Policy, and Payment Models   | Economics provides a framework to understand and predict human decision making under scarcity, uncertainty and imperfect information. Examines concepts central to health care economics and their application to important decisions made by patients, families, practitioners, administrators and policy makers. Uses an individual family's scenario through a progressive case study to evaluate how incentives and information affect the health and health care of each family member. Each meeting integrates basic economic principles, existing facts and knowledge from economic research, and individual perspectives and experience regarding how these concepts apply to health care policy.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Degree- or Nondegree-seeking graduate; Credit is allowed for only BMD 511 or HCD 511 |
| HCD     | 517         | Economic Evaluation in Health Care             | This course will provide students with an introduction to economic evaluation in health care, including its use as a tool to assist with government decision making. The course will focus on the concepts and the methods involved in cost-effectiveness/utility analysis. It will facilitate the development of skills required to critically appraise economic evaluations and illustrate how to apply the concepts involved to assess health interventions.  | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student   |
| HCD     | 520         | Population Health                              | Presents population health within a framework of health care delivery, public health, health promotion and prevention, health policy, and community programs and resources. Emphasizes a solutions-based perspective consistent with the Triple Aim.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCD     | 521         | Law and Health Promotion                       | Analyzes case studies which illustrate the impact of policy and law on health promotion strategies and health outcomes. Includes discussions of the theoretical foundations supporting legal, ethical and economic decision making related to health promotion and real-world examples of the impact of current policies.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCD     | 527         | Health Care Economics and Financial Management | This course combines health economics and health care financial management. There is an introduction to double entry accounting to provide a working knowledge of cash and accrual accounting, plus an analysis of balance sheets, profit and loss statements and cash flow statements. How to construct a budget in a health care environment is a core skill in this course. The health economics component of the course introduces students to important economic concepts such as opportunity cost and supplier-induced demand and illustrates how these concepts can be applied to the health care industry.   | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student   |
| HCD     | 532         | Health Care Management and Finance             | Health care organizations are very complex institutions and require sophisticated understanding of modern management techniques. Provides a comprehensive overview of health care management concepts and principles with a focus on developing individual management skills. Centered on the management function and its unique purpose for an organization. Emphasizes planning, organizing, motivating and controlling, and how to acquire competency in these functions. Also addresses health care finance, which is an essential management competency.  | N                 | LEC               | Y               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCD     | 537         | Comparative Health Care Systems                | The first part of this course focuses on the principles and practice of health system analysis, the sources and utilisation of information relating to the development, organisation and operation of health services, and frameworks for assessing the performance of different health systems. Then, drawing on material from the health systems of affluent and developing countries, we examine the constitutional, legal, economic, social, and political environments within which health care systems operate and the various patterns that emerge. We review patterns of health service organisation and management: health policy development and planning; characteristics of personal, community and environmental health services and their activities; health service financing arrangements, including health insurance systems; and, the health workforce. The impact of some recent attempts at health system reform in different countries is assessed and proposals for future re-structuring are critically reviewed. | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student   |
| HCD     | 540         | Seminar in Science of Health Care Delivery     | Provides an introduction to the science of health care delivery, an exciting field that focuses on how to achieve the quality care that providers want to deliver and patients expect to receive. Too often quality care is compromised by inadequately designed systems of care. Provides an overview of the health care delivery system and then introduces the major components of the field.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| HCD     | 547         | Health Leadership and Workforce Management                      | This course critically examines a range of theories, models and approaches to leading and managing at different levels in health service organisations. It provides tools to identify and respond to management problems in the context of major changes in priorities and services in health and its workforce. Whether you come from a clinical, public health or other disciplinary background we consider how you can draw upon that understanding and your current organisational setting to strengthen your health leadership capacity and workforce management skills. Topics include: the shifting role of managers in health services; management and leadership theories and models; influence, power and management ethics; managing in resource constrained environments; diversity in health service settings; managing teams and motivating staff; conflict management and improving health worker performance; workforce planning and capacity building.               | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student                    |
| HCD     | 550         | Capstone  | Discusses the results from student capstone projects, done in teams, and these projects related to broad topics explored during the prior coursework in the program. Capstone projects are identified early in the master's program in conjunction with and overseen by the degree leaders and the industry partners, and often a health care organization or health agency. These projects are worked on through the year with final written and verbal reports due in the last half of the semester.  | N                 | RSC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-2   |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCD 502 with C or better  |
| HCD     | 557         | Clinical Governance and Risk Management                         | This course provides an overview of emerging health policy with particular attention to clinical governance. The course consists of three components. The first component targets the main constituents of clinical governance, including practice design, analysis and improvement, error reporting and investigation, public accountability and open disclosure, multi-disciplinary teamwork and clinical leadership. The second component introduces the tools of clinical process redesign. These tools can help managers make practical improvements to practices in their units. The third component targets risk management by providing an overview of the kinds of risks faced by health service managers, and by outlining different views of risk (adverse effect versus opportunity capital). The course is comprised of three case studies that engage students in addressing specific but generalisable manifestations of the three components that make up the course. | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student                    |
| HCD     | 560         | Systems Metabolic Physiology                                    | Studies vertebrate energy metabolism in the context of systems physiology. With a particular focus on mammals and especially humans, discusses macronutrient storage, mobilization and utilization at the whole organism level. Presents theory and practice of several methodologies used to measure metabolic turnover, including indirect calorimetry, mass balance, isotopic tracers and doubly labeled water. Topics include metabolic rate and fuel selection during rest, locomotion and environmental stress such as energy scarcity or oversupply.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 3.00 GPA; degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| HCD     | 561         | Cellular Energetics and Metabolism                              | Focuses on the thermodynamics and kinetics of energetic processes at the cellular level. Discusses the metabolism of macronutrients by cells, principally skeletal muscle, cardiac muscle, adipose and liver. Presents membrane transport, energy storage and mobilization, non-oxidative/oxidative pathways of ATP synthesis and energy dissipation processes. Develops and uses concepts of metabolic control, energetic efficiency, metabolic scope and signaling to explore classic and current biomedical literature. Particularly emphasizes mitochondrial metabolism, including the chemiosmotic theory, proton leak, superoxide (free radical) production, interactions between the glycolytic and oxidative pathways, and the central role mitochondria play in health, disease and mortality. Describes the theory and practice of several methodologies central to the study of energy metabolism.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 3.00 GPA; degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| HCD     | 562         | Emerging Bioethical Issues in Translational Biomedical Research | Discusses ethics and policy issues related to translational biomedical sciences research. Emphasizes research involving human subjects. Topics include: genomics and biospecimen research, especially related to biobanks, including confidentiality issues, genetic testing, ownership of genetic information, community advisory boards and return of results questions; regulation of research and proposals including human research oversight by the Institutional Review Board (IRB); relationship between medical research and medical treatment; and communication with patients, within and between institutions and with the general public.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 3.00 GPA; degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| HCD     | 563         | The Metabolic Syndrome  | Provides a comprehensive understanding of the metabolic syndrome from an environmental, genetic and molecular perspective. Also discusses the treatment of this complex disease including lifestyle changes, pharmacological interventions and surgical procedures. Evidenced-based course where research guides class lectures and discussions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |

| HCD     | 567         | Current Challenges in Infectious Disease                | Throughout history new pathogens such as HIV, SARS and pandemic influenza have emerged to challenge human populations. This course will introduce you to the challenges of controlling or managing infectious diseases through an appreciation of key factors such as differing modes of transmission, the impact of travel and behavior on transmission, the importance of surveillance in achieving disease prevention and control, key steps in outbreak investigation and current disease control and management strategies. Dengue fever, hepatitis A virus, HIV, influenza, measles, meningococcal meningitis, rota virus, SARS and TB will be used to learn about preparing for and containing diseases with potentially catastrophic impact to the health and economic stability. This course supports you achieving a range of capabilities that you will need if you are planning to have a career in epidemiology and infectious disease control.   | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student                    |

The current health care system cannot deliver the necessary quality to ensure safety or consistent outcomes in predictable and controllable ways. It is essential to understand the impact of process engineering to improve the performance of health care delivery, and to understand the steps to performing a Lean Six Sigma process improvement project. This course builds on the quality improvement techniques introduced in earlier course work. Also enables students to obtain their Green Belt Certification in Lean Six Sigma.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |

Identifies characteristics of successful leaders in health and health care, develops competence and confidence in creativity and innovation, and identifies ways to implement meaningful change in the dynamic health care environment. Applies theories to case studies in health and health systems to promote critical analysis, discussion and reflection on topics that provide the framework for future coursework.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                   |
| HCD     | 577         | Infection Prevention Control in the Health Care Setting | Antimicrobial resistance is an urgent global health priority. In the near future common treatable infections may become untreatable. Currently 1 out of 20 hospitalised patients contracts a health care associated infection, of which around 50% are preventable. These infections add to the functional disability and emotional stress of the patient and in some cases, lead to disabling conditions that reduce their quality of life. In addition, they contribute to increased hospital stays and added expense to the health care system. Infection prevention and control in health care settings is now of national priority endorsed by the Australian Government, Ministries of Health, the Australian Commission of Quality and Safety in Health Care, health care facility accreditation organisations, as well as internationally by the World Health Organization.  | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student                    |

| HCD     | 587         | Infectious Diseases Intelligence                        | The course will provide a grounding in epidemiological pattern recognition (epidemic, endemic, sporadic) in infectious diseases for first-outbreak responders, surveillance officers, or policy makers from medicine, allied health, public health, emergency management, law enforcement, military or others from relevant backgrounds. Case studies in risk assessment, risk mitigation, response and prevention will be studied. These will cover Ebola virus disease, MERS-CoV, avian influenza and salmonellosis; distinguishing natural from unnatural epidemics, surveillance tools, rapid intelligence and analysis methods. Data quality in resource limited settings and implications for risk assessment will be examined. Understanding of modelling and forecasting of infectious diseases based on known transmission dynamics and patterns will also be explored. Preparation of first line responders to optimise usage of infectious diseases intelligence techniques will be covered, including prioritisation of data sourcing/mining, strengthening, mapping disease transmission patterns to modes of transmission, and ultimately epidemic control measures. | N                 | LEC               | Y               | NSW           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): International Health Management MIHM student                    |

| HCI     | 313         | Philosophy of Science in Health Care: Understanding Paradigms of Health and Healing | Philosophy of science and its application to health and healing paradigms. Employs selected schools of thought and individual philosophers within philosophy of science to closely examine health and healing paradigms. Discusses concepts such as "life" and "death". Explores questions: What is science? What is health? Examines the way in which philosophy of science informs perceptions and definitions of health and healing in individuals and populations.                         | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 45 hours  |

This perspective views policy-making as a fluctuating, dynamic and evolving process as seen through a lens of innovation principles. Explores the relationship between politics and policy and discusses factors influencing policy development. Identifies methods to formulate and implement policy and presents models to evaluate, analyze and modify health care policy.                                 | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 311 with C or better                                 |
| HCI     | 425         | Facilitating Innovation to Achieve Outcomes   | Principles of facilitation that promote and enable the implementation of innovation to achieve outcomes. This approach identifies facilitation as requiring input seeking, ongoing evaluation, and emergent correction of an existing plan of action. Discusses characteristics of effective teams, innovation leadership behaviors that impact change, and involvement of end-users. Compares and contrasts traditional project management processes with innovative facilitation techniques. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 311 with C or better                                 |

| HCI     | 538         | Innovation and the Individual   | Introduces the role of the innovator, including the essential behaviors of risk taking, managing workload, and addressing the challenges of innovation.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCI     | 540         | Understanding and Applying Principles of Evidence-Based Practice                      | Understanding how application of evidence-based practice principles assists health care professionals to provide the best care.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 538 with C or better   |
| HCI     | 542         | Systems Thinking in a Complex Environment   | Examines basic and advanced systems principles as they relate to national and international health and healing systems. Specific emphasis is given to systems thinking from a complexity science perspective and the implications for innovation.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 538 with C or better   |
| HCI     | 543         | Approaches to Health Care Innovation  | Theory-based survey course introduces approaches to lead innovation in an organization. Many change initiatives are designed by those not completing the work, leaving workers isolated, restricted and powerless. Teaches health care leaders to value collaboration with and seeking input from those who will carry out the work. Analyzes approaches to planned change: positive deviance, appreciative inquiry and creation of a learning organization. Students construct a change plan using an appropriate approach to address a health care problem.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCI     | 544         | IT for Health Care Innovation   | Focuses on the information technology (IT) trends and their strategic application in health care. Students develop an IT strategy that addresses a specific health care area of concern. Students gain an understanding of the role of IT in health care innovation and develop skills in business process improvement, change management, strategy definition, value proposition, responding to feedback and managing resistance.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 538 with C or better   |
| HCI     | 545         | Public Speaking for Innovation: Building Your Presence and Making the Case for Change | New ideas take a lot of explaining, and innovation often involves persuasion. Builds presence as a speaker and a leader--and gains expertise in public speaking for innovation. Public speaking for innovation is a combination of finding and building one's presence as a speaker and a leader--and translating that to an ability to explain and persuade, making the case for change. Students build their presence and gain the foundational knowledge necessary to successfully explain and persuade in innovation contexts.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCI     | 546         | Communication, Technology, and Innovation   | Overview of traditional, contemporary and innovative communication strategies in the 21st century.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCI     | 548         | Advanced Principles and Concepts of Innovation  | Explores and analyzes the innovation in complex systems, focusing on developing specific skills for successful innovations.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HCI 538 with C or better   |
| HCI     | 550         | Health Care Policy and Innovation   | Introduces the political, organizational, and economic dimensions of health care policy, emphasizing strategies for innovative policy and practice.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HCI     | 552         | Financing for Innovation  | Provides an overview of healthcare economics; develops budgeting, planning, and management skills; and culminates in financial analysis skills necessary to facilitate management decision making or writing business plans or grant proposals.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Nursing & Health Innovation | Edson College of Nursing and Health Innovation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| HEB     | 131         | Biblical Hebrew I               | Offers an introduction to Biblical Hebrew, the language in which most of the books of the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament have been written. Provides the basic tools to understand and translate Biblical Hebrew texts. Covers the Hebrew alphabet, basic vocabulary, morphology and syntax. Students learn idiomatic expressions, basic literary techniques in narratives and poetry, as well as specificities of Semitic languages. Emphasizes a critical approach to the ancient text. Also introduces the evolution of the biblical text, from ancient manuscripts to contemporary editions and translations. Includes an introduction to the development of writing and to the evolution of Hebrew, from earliest inscriptions to its revival in modern Israel. The texts translated in class are situated in the history of Israel, but also in their Jewish and Christian cultural and religious contexts. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures      | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only HEB, JST, REL 131 or HEB 194 (Biblical Hebrew I)  |

| HEB     | 347         | Modern Israeli Literature in Translation   | Modern Hebrew, or Israeli Hebrew, started at the end of the 19th century in Europe and today it is the language of the State of Israel. During this short period modern Hebrew developed literature with its unique local characteristic, as well as universal ideas. Reads and examines four books against their social and historical background.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 105, or 107 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only ENG 347 or HEB 347 or JST 347 or SLC 347 or ENG/HEB/JST/SLC 394 (Modern Hebrew Literature in Translation)   |
| HEB     | 348         | Israeli Society and Culture                | Different partitions of the Israeli society, based on ethnic origin, by religious affiliation or by political association. Depicts how Israel is an absorbing immigration state. Israel is a welfare state and the course covers aspects of a welfare state, such as health, retirement, public transportation, art, higher education and more.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, ENG 105 or ENG 107 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only HEB 348, HEB 394 (Israeli Culture and Society), JST 348, REL 311, or SLC 348   |
| HEB     | 349         | Israeli Wars in Israeli Movies             | From its first day, the State of Israel has been in a state of war with the Arab countries. Every few years, the fighting erupted into an open war. At the beginning of the country, there was a consensus that the wars were forced on the Israelis, and therefore, the heavy toll on human life was unavoidable. Since the Six Day War, 1967, and the political change in 1977, Israeli society is split in attitude toward war. The absolute belief in the political and military leaders was shaken, and new political agendas entered the political arena. To this divided society, the Intifadas occurred with the waves of terrorism. These events added fire to the heated debates in Israel. One means of expression is through the cinema. In this course, students watch, analyze, and discuss selected movies on the Israeli wars and terrorism in the streets of Israel. Through these movies, produced by Israelis, we'll try to understand the mood and attitude of the Israelis toward war, enemies, and political and military leaders. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | HU & G          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 105, or 107 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only FMS 349 or HEB 349 or HEB 394 (Israeli Wars in Israeli Movies)  |

| HEB     | 411         | Judaism and the Beginnings of Christianity | Studies the beginnings of Christianity in relation to Judaism: their common context, the process of their distinction and their mutual influence. Through a historical and thematic approach, explores the parallel construction of Jewish and Christian identities. Combines readings from primary sources (Hellenistic Judaism, Qumran, New Testament, Early Christianity, Rabbinic Judaism) and up-to-date scholarly literature.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | HU & H          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101 or 105 or 107 or 108 or HST 100 or 102 or REL 100 or SLC 142 or 202 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only HEB/JST/REL 411 or HEB 394 (Judaism and the Origins of Christianity) or HEB 494 (Judeo-Hellenistic Literature) |

| HEB     | 499         | Individualized Instruction                              | Provides an opportunity for original study or investigation in the major or field of specialization on an individual and more autonomous basis. Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course.  | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures  | 1-3   |                 |  |

| HSC     | 499         | Individualized Instruction                          | Provides an opportunity for original study or investigation in the major or field of specialization on an individual and more autonomous basis. Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course. This course may be taken only by outstanding senior students who have completed at least one semester in residence and who have a cumulative GPA of 3.00 or higher in the major or field of specialization. A special class fee may be required.  | Y                 | IND               | Y               | Z1            | College of Health Solutions     | College of Health Solutions                    | 1-3   |                 |   |

| HSD     | 501         | Science and Technology Policy                       | Provides an in-depth introduction to theoretical perspectives on the role and place of science in democratic societies and democratic governance. Emphasizes how the ideas, ideologies, and practices of science are integrated into the design and implementation of government decision making, as well as how science both shapes and is shaped by the political organization and ordering of society. Pursues such questions in the context of U.S. politics, comparatively between the U.S. and Europe, and in emerging regimes of international governance.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only HSD 501 or POS 571   |
| HSD     | 502         | Advanced Science and Technology Policy              | Focuses on the role of knowledge and expertise in political and policy decision making. Particular emphasis is placed on the analysis of knowledge systems (formalized institutional approaches to the production, validation, and use of knowledge and expertise in policy decision making), their modes of failure, and the design of approaches that may be able to prevent, avoid, or reduce the frequency of such failures.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): HSD 501 or POS 571 with B or better; Credit is allowed for only HSD 502 or POS 572   |
| HSD     | 503         | Governing Emerging Technologies                     | Examines the governance of science and technology through a focus on emerging technologies whose potential consequences in society are apparent only in anticipation and whose manifestations are still being shaped by local, domestic, and international institutions. These emerging technologies include nanotechnologies, synthetic biology, and other technologies associated with genetic modification, and information and cognitive science and neuro-technologies.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only PAF 550 or HSD 503 or POS 573  |
| HSD     | 504         | Analysis of Large-Scale Socio-Technological Systems | Provide skills and methods to analyze the design and management of large-scale socio-technological systems and the societal impacts of large-scale technological systems change. Emphasizes assessing the intertwining of lives and livelihoods in large-scale technological systems and the risks and vulnerabilities associated with large-scale systems failures, including the effects of both technological failures and natural hazards.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HSD     | 505         | Science and Technology Policy Workshop              | Provides the capstone experience for the Professional Science Master's in Science and Technology Policy. Builds on theoretical and analytical work carried out in the program's required courses, providing an integrative experience that requires students to synthesize knowledge gained in prior coursework and apply it to real-world policy problems and settings. By blending exposure to national science and technology policy officials and nationally recognized academic experts, the workshop both advances student learning beyond that possible in the classroom while encouraging students to expand their abilities to connect theoretical and practical insights. At the same time, the workshop provides a natural transition from the student's formal classroom learning to their required applied policy internships, which commences upon the end of the workshop. | N                 | SEM               | N               | YGB           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| HSD     | 515         | Science, Technology and Public Affairs              | Explores the political, economic, cultural, and moral foundations of science and technology policy and governance in democratic society.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only BIO 515 or GLG 547 or HSD 515 or PAF 547 or SOS 516  |
| HSD     | 517         | Uncertainty and Decision Making                     | Knowledge is always incomplete, yet decisions must be made. Explores uncertainty and its relation to decision making, with a particular focus on the ways that science and science-derived information is applied with the intent of improving decisions. Explores the many meanings and origins of uncertainty, using theoretical and case-based approaches. A central theme is the relation among uncertainty, scientific prediction, and decision making, especially in politically charged issues, for example as related to management of the environment. Ultimately understands how effective decisions can be made in the face of inevitable uncertainties and contested knowledge.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ASB 517 or BIO 517 or BIO 591 (Uncertainty & Decision Making) or HSD 517 or POS 527 or SOS 518 |

| HSE     | 101         | Introduction to Human Systems Engineering       | Introduces basic principles, methods and theories of psychology and applications to engineering problems relevant to human systems. Gives particular attention to the intersection of psychology and engineering. Students learn brain anatomy and physiology, sensation and perception, cognition, social systems and research methods so that they are able to design systems consistent with human capabilities and limitations.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering       | Human Systems Engineering                      | 3     | SB              |  |
| HSE     | 223         | Applied Biology of Human Behavior               | Introduces the biological basis of human behavior and implications for human systems engineering. Structure and function of the nervous system as well as the behavioral effects of the physiological processes outside the brain (for example, hormones secreted by glands). Biological processes involved in many aspects of our behavior such as eating, sleeping, sexual behavior, emotional responses, sensory perception, learning and memory, language and cognitive functions, mental illness and drug abuses. Introduces a wide range of techniques and methods used to investigate the biological foundations of behavior. Prepares students for advanced courses in neuroscience, psychology or related fields. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 225         | Human Systems Integration                       | Reviews human systems integration (HSI), which is basically systems engineering from a human-centered perspective. Research, theory and methodological approach as applied to a variety of systems ranging from transportation systems to medical and military systems. Discusses handbook chapters and specific examples of human systems integration.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 290         | Experimental Methods for Human Systems Research | Introduces the basics of research methodology as applied in human systems engineering. Quantitative and experimental design from an applied perspective. Guided study of the process of conducting research within human systems engineering. Project topics range from research question generation and literature review to reporting of results.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering       | Human Systems Engineering                      | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): HSE 101 or PSY 101 with C or better; HSE 230 or PSY 230                 |
| HSE     | 323         | Perceptual Systems                              | In-depth exploration of methods by which humans receive and interpret information from the world by vision, audition, taste, smell, touch and movement. Emphasizes the integration of behavioral and neural research with potential applications to engineering practice. Topics cover a wide range from the biological basis of sensory information processing to the behavioral aspects of perception, and to the applications of perceptual theories to disciplines like computer vision, display technologies, graphic design and sound processing. Solid foundation for further coursework and research in neuroscience or psychology; students also gain knowledge that could be useful in various professions.      | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 324         | Applied Cognitive Science                       | Human cognition and how it bears on the design of technological and social systems. Although focuses on applications, requires student to delve into the basic literature that informs these applications and produce a literature review that draws on both applied and theoretical work. Many weeks involve a hands-on experience with a method or technique, and weekly quizzes emphasize critical thinking about these examples.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HSE     | 430         | Statistics for Human Systems Research II      | Statistical methods commonly used in human systems engineering research. Emphasizes (1) connecting research designs and statistical analysis, (2) interpreting and breaking down significant effects, (3) addressing practical problems associated with doing research in applied contexts, (4) using statistical methods to understand the connection between variables in a complex system, and (5) the use of statistical software. Primarily focuses on analysis of variance (ANOVA) but introduces other techniques (including mediation analysis, structural equation modeling and cluster analysis). Recommended for preparation for both graduate study and careers in related industry. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | HST     | 377         | Sports in United States History                     | Focuses on major themes in American sports history, organized topically around fall sports. Themes encourage students to think critically about relationships among sport and society, identity, community, media, capitalism and education. Lectures, discussions, readings and films explore race, gender, class and sexuality as categories of analysis, and the role of sport in constructing ideas about the body along gender and racial lines. Also highlights social justice issues in sport as well as athlete activism throughout the twentieth century. Explores the ways in which the participation of Black, Latino/a and Native American athletes has both mirrored and diverged from Black, Latino/a and Native American citizens' participation in society throughout United States history. Also studies the process through which the equal opportunity to participate in school sports became defined as a civil right and, more recently, a human right. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 30 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 377 or HST 306 (Sports in U.S. History)                           |

| HST     | 379         | History of College Sports                           | Student-controlled intercollegiate contests quickly transformed into big-time college sports by the early twentieth century, revolutionizing the sports industry in the United States as well as the landscape of higher education. The American college sports enterprise is unique; nowhere else in the world does a large, amateur, revenue-generating system of school sports exist. After an exploration of the origins of intercollegiate athletics and the creation of the modern National Collegiate Athletic Association, topics include integration, women's intercollegiate athletics, the big business of amateurism, and scandal. Video lectures, readings and films introduce students to these often controversial topics, grounding them in the historical record. Many of the current debates concerning college sports have been taking place for more than a century.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 30 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 379 or HST 306 (History of College Sports)                        |

| HST     | 404         | Conquest and Encounters in Colonial Latin America | How did Hernan Cortés and Francisco Pizarro defeat the Aztec and Inca Empires? Despite numeric inferiority, limited provisions, and little knowledge about the Americas, Cortés and Pizarro defeated advanced civilizations that had experienced warriors and millions of inhabitants. Possible explanations include the conquistador's valor, advanced weaponry, superior military strategy, Indian allies, and biological attacks. In their encounters with native peoples of the Americas, Europeans were not always conquerors. Álvar Núñez Cabeza de Vaca and Lope de Aguirre failed both in their attempt to conquer a large Indian civilization and in their effort to find mineral wealth. A few Europeans such as Bartolomé de Las Casas spoke out against the abuses committed against the Indians during the conquest. Explores these issues from the perspective of both Europeans and native peoples and looks at the long-term impact for Latin America and its peoples. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies   | 3     | L & G           | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 55 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 404 or HST 494 (Conquest & Encounters)          |

| HST     | 441         | Latin America and the World Economy              | Globalization did not begin in the late twentieth century, but rather global trade has linked Latin America with the rest of the world for over five hundred years. The region has been an active and important participant in the world economy since Columbus's first voyage in 1492. This course explores the social, cultural, economic, and environmental impact of such participation on both Latin America and the rest of the world. It is organized both chronologically and thematically. We will study both colonial and post-colonial trade. The commodities studied include sugar, rubber, bananas, and cocaine. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies   | 3     | L & G & H         | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102 or 105 or 108 with C or better; minimum 55 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 441 or HST 305 (Latin America and the World Economy) or HST 494 (Latin America and the World Economy) |

| HST     | 504         | Digital Humanities: Critical Theory and Methods | Digital technologies are now intricately woven into our lives--whether it's in terms of authoring a paper in a text editor, sending texts and emails, or doing data analysis. Popular narratives of the "big" and the "new" celebrate and sometimes bemoan the ways that these tools shape our communication, access to information, habits and even our physical bodies. Focuses on the histories of these technologies, their operations, popular conceptions about such tools, and their affordances and limits for humanities scholarship. Students learn how to leverage digital technologies, but also how to critically read them. Broad ranging; in addition to surveying the "big tent," students are encouraged to utilize their final projects to engage with specific disciplinary digital tools and methods relevant to their scholarly work. | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only CDH 501 or HST 504 or REL 504                  |

| IBC     | 430         | Medical Pathophysiology, Terminology and Behavioral Health                        | Provides an overview of pathophysiology and medical treatment of common medical conditions in primary care (e.g., diabetes, coronary heart disease, hypertension, asthma, cancer). Emphasizes medical terminology, pathophysiology, common medical treatments and behavioral health issues associated with those conditions that students can expect to see in integrated medical settings, especially integrated primary care. Students learn appropriate medical terminology for symptoms, diseases, treatments and medical tests so they can communicate effectively with inter-professional medical teams. Discusses the role of the behavioral health provider as it relates to these conditions as well.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours                              |
| IBC     | 520         | Integrated Health: The Patient-Centered Medical Home (PCMH)                       | Provides an introduction to the Patient-Centered Medical Home (PCMH); alignment of PCMH within primary care systems; and the importance of PCMH within integrated health care design, implementation and relevancy to the triple aim.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

| IBC     | 540         | Integrated Health Care Process Improvement  | Help students evaluate, measure, analyze, change and lead improvement in health care systems. Students learn how to apply principles of quality improvement based on Lean Six Sigma health care to effectively shape and create sustainable health care systems that meet "triple aim" of improved patient experience of care, improved population health, and reduced utilization and cost of care. Based on principles of value-based health care delivery in which achieving high value for patients is the overarching goal of health care delivery, defined as health outcome achieved per dollars spent.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

| IBC     | 560         | Strategic Business Planning and Big Data  | Provides a survey of emerging use of "big data" in health care, a term used to describe data sets that contain massive amounts of health care information that are beyond the capacity of commonly used software programs that can be analyzed for the purpose of health care analytics. Covers analytical tools that can be used to leverage health information technology (HIT) from health care systems and applies quality improvement methodologies such as Lean and Six Sigma to make strategic improvement in health care. Covers approaches to big data business intelligence and health care analytics to design, implement and evaluate sustainable health care systems that meet the "triple aim" of improved patient experience of care, improved population health, and reduced utilization and cost of care. Based on principles of value-based health care delivery in which achieving high value for patients is the overarching goal of health care delivery, defined as health outcomes achieved per dollar. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

| IBC     | 585         | Interprofessional Consultation, Leadership and Teamwork in Integrated Health Care | Integrates the closely related topics of consultation, leadership and teamwork in integrated health care. Integrated care settings are characterized by interprofessional teams representing diverse stakeholders such as clinical (e.g., PCP, nurse); management (CEO, CFO, Quality) and administrative. External stakeholders such as health plans, specialty care providers and community resources may also need to participate in the integrated care strategic plan. The integrated care consultant must effectively consult with and engage these stakeholders to develop integrated care teams committed to achieving the "Triple Aim" of improved patient experience of care, improved population health and decreased cost. Emphasizes consultation skills designed to engage stakeholders such as networking, marketing and negotiation. Teamwork emphasizes strategies and techniques of building effective and efficient teams across multiple systems of care.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| IBC     | 590         | Reading and Conference  | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

Develops proficiency in using Excel to manage data analyses as an ongoing tool to collect and analyze clinical and cost-effectiveness data in primary care and related healthcare settings.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 603         | Brief Interventions in Primary Care                     | Provides an overview of evidence-based care for the integrated primary care environment. In particular, reviews and applies the most common approaches to addressing co-morbid behavioral and medical conditions, including but not limited to brief psychotherapy, adherence enhancement, lifestyle medicine, and others, using cognitive-behavioral, acceptance and commitment therapy, solution-focused, and motivational interviewing approaches.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 603 or IBC 691 (Brief Interventions in Primary Care) or IBC 702 |
| IBC     | 604         | Clinical Medicine/Pathophysiology                       | Overview of each of the main systems within the human body. Addresses the major diseases (symptoms, diagnosis, and medical treatments) within each system. Students learn appropriate medical terminology for symptoms, diseases, treatments, and medical tests so they can communicate effectively with medical practitioners (nurses and physicians). Content is equivalent to pathophysiology training in an RN program. Also addresses the role of behavioral care providers in medical settings; design and implementation of psychoeducational programs in primary care; stress management techniques for use in medical settings; chronic pain management; identification and treatment of somatization disorder; increasing compliance in noncompliant patients; alternative/complementary medicine; overview of nutrition; and the effects of exercise and nutrition on prevention and treatment of diseases. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 608         | Psychopharmacology for the Behavioral Care Provider     | Provides overview of psychopharmacology to equip the behavioral care provider with the understanding of psychotropic medications necessary to make prescription recommendations to primary care physicians and to participate in medication management for patients being prescribed psychotropics. Basic principles of pharmacology in general, including pharmacokinetics, pharmacodynamics, medication development and the FDA approval process, interaction effects, drug company marketing strategies, appropriate and inappropriate medication usage, over-medication, and off-label medication use. Reviews pharmacokinetics and pharmacodynamics in special populations (children, the elderly, and patients with co-morbid medical and psychological conditions).   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 609         | Clinical Neuropathophysiology                           | Presents overview of each of the basic neuroanatomy, neurophysiology, and a focus on the manifestations of neurophysiological dysfunction across the life span for Doctor of Behavioral Health (DBH) program behavioral clinicians. Covers the basic human brain anatomy, neurophysiological processes, development, and maturation. Using case studies, presents and discusses evidence-based support for theories of psychiatric disorders and neuropsychopathology. Incorporates evidence-based research findings on the role of genetics, neurophysiological adaptation, epidemiological and societal influences in order to develop understanding of disruptions in normal neurophysiological functioning.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| IBC     | 610         | Behavioral and Psychological Assessment in Primary Care | Presents a comprehensive model of behavioral and psychological assessment for behavioral health clinicians in primary care and related medical settings. Provides behavioral health consultants with the necessary knowledge base and skills to develop an appropriate assessment and treatment plan for a variety of commonly seen complaints in primary care. Places attention on the assessment of both psychiatric and behavioral complaints across the lifespan. Students become familiar with both structured interview and empirically support quantitative measures consistently utilized to enhance our understanding of the presenting complaint.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| IBC     | 611         | Population-Based Behavioral Health Management                                   | Overview epidemiology for health care followed by population-based approaches to behavioral intervention. Epidemiology includes concept of populations; descriptions and definitions of health and disease; measurement of health (measures, morbidity, mortality and health); designs for studying the health of populations and standardization of population health measures. Population-based management includes definitions of medical management; planning health care for populations and population health outcomes; quality of care and economic analysis of population-based interventions; adjunctive treatments as a core component of population-based interventions. Also, advanced application of population-based behavioral interventions with a focus on design, measures, analysis, results and discussion of current approaches. Includes predictive modeling methods for defining populations; interventions focusing on stepped-care approaches; engagement strategies, interventions, measurement, and follow-up. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 612         | Introduction to Behavioral Interventions  | Provides a foundational understanding of behavioral health interventions for primary care settings for those students intending to work in administrative, management or allied health positions. Provides a theoretical basis for various psychological schools of thought, as well as an overview of the empirical evidence for those approaches. Reviews models of therapy including: psychodynamic, brief strategic, cognitive-behavioral and solution-focused. Also reviews two intervention strategies typically used in integrated settings: Acceptance and Commitment Therapy (ACT) and Motivational Interviewing (MI). Explores the ways that these approaches serve as the theoretical framework of the Biodyne model.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | IBC     | 614         | Quality and Performance Measurement, Improvement, and Incentives in Health Care | Overview of health care quality management, emerging models of health care performance measurement, and models of pay for performance incentives in health care designed to reward providers for attaining quality of care goals. Prepares behavioral clinicians to provide services that are consistent with best practices in quality management and performance measurement in health care and to provide care that is consistent with performance incentive programs that are present or on the horizon. A key characteristic of health care reform is increased focus on provider quality of care, accountability for quality via performance measurement, and aligning provider incentives to meet national and regional quality of care performance targets.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 615         | Innovative Technologies in Behavioral Health                                    | Provides a quick overview and answers to basic questions related to both online therapy and telemental health. Gives a downloadable audio recording (MP3) and access to the accompanying video clips that augment a rich sampling of pages extracted from our other coursework. As a composite, this experience introduces our multi-modal learning environment and, more importantly, gives an idea of the issues involved with establishing an online or otherwise remote practice.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | IBC     | 620         | Psychosomatic Illness: Diagnosis & Treatment                                    | Teaches how to successfully diagnose and treat physical illness caused by various forms of psychosocial stress (psychophysiological disorders, PPD). Because patients are often unaware of the nature or degree of stresses that are responsible for their illness, places emphasis on learning how to detect and use clues that patients provide to develop a more complete understanding of the struggles than they are able to perceive for themselves. Focuses on selecting, assessing and treating a patient known to the student who has medically unexplained physical symptoms.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | IBC     | 624         | Integrated Behavioral Health Care for Children and Adolescents                  | Integrates developmental psychology with pediatric psychology in order to prepare behavioral clinicians to provide screening, assessment, and intervention for children and adolescents in primary care and other medical settings. Presents an overview of developmental stages with an emphasis on critical tasks, while contrasting normal versus abnormal development. Develops societal, familial, and cultural influences.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| IBC     | 626         | Behavioral Health Management  | Presents an introduction to the roles and responsibilities of supervisor/manager in a health care organization. Provides behavioral health professionals moving into management with the necessary knowledge base and skills to be an entry-level manager and focuses on the further knowledge acquisition needed to become an experienced, effective manager and leader. In addition, discusses the larger context in which healthcare businesses operate—health care reform, regulations and technological changes. Participants take time to look at personal characteristics, interpersonal styles and presentation that affect how one is perceived and responded to in an organization. Too often we have observed individuals with high-level clinical skills moving into management without the requisite skills and understanding of issues, restricting their ability to be successful.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 626 (or IBC 724) or IBC 780 (Behavioral Health Management)     |

Organizational behavior theories and concepts related to leadership. Uniqueness of structures, processes and interactions in integrated care programs and how to adapt these to medical settings. Communication skills, teamwork and collaboration. Current challenges to leadership in health care reform.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only IBC 732 or IBC 691 (Leadership in Healthcare)                    |
| IBC     | 740         | Integrated Behavioral Interventions, Cost Savings, Medical Cost Offset and Return on Investment | Research has demonstrated that many integrated behavioral interventions designed to prevent or improve chronic disease outcomes result in cost savings by reducing overuse of health services and associated costs. Reviews research on conditions such as depression and anxiety co-morbid with chronic disease, somatizers, cardiovascular risk factors underlying chronic disease, substance use disorder, pain and opioid misuse, cigarette smoking and insomnia that show evidence for cost savings. The interventions are typically delivered in integrated settings such as primary care and based on the population health management model. Interventions include therapeutic lifestyle change, medication adherence, cognitive behavioral treatment and emerging eHealth and mHealth interventions.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |

| IED     | 497         | Honors Colloquium                                   | A class emphasizing discussion, written and/or oral presentation by students, and active participation.   | N                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-6   |                 | Prerequisite(s): Barrett Honors student   |
| IED     | 498         | Pro-Seminar   | Small-group study and research for advanced students within their majors. Major status in the department or instructor approval is required.  | Y                 | SEM               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-7   |                 |   |
| IED     | 499         | Individualized Instruction                          | Provides an opportunity for original study or investigation in the major or field of specialization on an individual and more autonomous basis. Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course.                                 | Y                 | IND               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-3   |                 |   |
| IED     | 500         | Research Methods                                    | Course on research methods in a specific discipline.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student  |
| IED     | 501         | Critical Indigenous Research Methodologies          | Examines research, its methods and methodologies through an indigenous framework. Presents different methods, their connections to various research questions, and thoughts of ways to analyze extant educational data. Additionally, examines traditional methodologies, methodological clashes, and the insertion of critical indigenous research methodologies into the framing of the conversation. Offers an historical overview of research in indigenous communities.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student OR postbaccalaureate student; Credit is allowed for only IED 501 or JUS 691 (Decolonizing Indigenous Research Methods) |
| IED     | 502         | Indigenous Knowledges in Education                  | Provides an overview of the literature on indigenous knowledge systems as they tie into education as broadly defined. Specifically focuses on indigenous knowledge systems and how it encapsulates relationships (between people and each other, humans and their environment, and humans and written and oral learning); responsibility; reciprocity; and respect. Covers both historical understandings of indigenous knowledge systems and the ways that these knowledge systems are currently being taken up by tribal peoples. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student or postbaccalaureate student; Credit is allowed for only IED 502 or JUS 691 (Indigenous Knowledges in Education)       |
| IED     | 503         | Current Issues in American Indian Education         | Examines current issues facing American Indian student academic achievement and their path to higher education in the United States. Focuses on how structural and systematic dynamics influence American Indian education. Exposes students to literature and engages in discussions that allow them to analyze how policy, practice and lived-experiences shape American Indian education.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student OR postbaccalaureate student   |

| IED     | 535         | Community-Based Participatory Action Research | Examines the basic structures of what comprises the research paradigm called Community-Based Participatory Action Research (CBPR). CBPR is research that connects "research experts" with community members with an explicit focus on sharing power, knowledge and ownership of data and its concomitant resources and products. Offers a "how-to" for students in constructing research projects utilizing this lens/framework. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student OR postbaccalaureate student                      |
| IED     | 580         | Practicum                                     | Structured practical experience in a professional program, supervised by a practitioner and/or faculty member with whom the student works closely.   | Y                 | PRA               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 583         | Fieldwork                                     | Structured, supervised field experience in a field science or other discipline requiring experience in field techniques.   | Y                 | PRA               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 584         | Internship                                    | Structured practical experience following a contract or plan, supervised by faculty and practitioners.   | Y                 | PRA               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 585         | Capstone                                      | Allows students to build a culminating experience that reflects the breadth and depth of their MA experience and allows each student to explore a research area, interest, theme or question within Indigenous education. Develops final written products individually based on consultation with faculty. Each student has a two-faculty member committee to support the capstone project.                                      | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student OR postbaccalaureate student                      |
| IED     | 590         | Reading and Conference                        | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.  | Y                 | IND               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 591         | Seminar                                       | A small class emphasizing discussion, presentations by students, and written research papers.  | Y                 | SEM               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 592         | Research                                      | Independent study in which a student, under the supervision of a faculty member, conducts research that is expected to lead to a specific project such as a thesis or dissertation, report, or publication. Assignments might include data collection, experimental work, data analysis, or preparation of a manuscript.   | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 593         | Applied Project                               | Preparation of a supervised applied project that is a graduation requirement in some professional majors.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 594         | Conference and Workshop                       | Topical instruction, usually in compressed format, leading to academic credit. Often offered off campus to groups of professionals.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1-12  |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |
| IED     | 595         | Continuing Registration                       | Used in situations where registration is necessary but where credit is not needed. Replaces arbitrary enrollment in reading and conference, research, thesis, dissertation, etc. Used by students when taking comprehensive examinations, defending theses or dissertations, or fulfilling the continuous enrollment requirement in doctoral programs. Credit is not awarded, and no grade is assigned.                          | Y                 | RSC               | Y               | Z3            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 1     |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking) or Undergraduate Postbaccalaureate student |

| IFT     | 443         | Analyzing Big Data                                      | Data mining and statistical techniques that arise in data analytic applications. Students learn and practice working with big data using data analytic techniques presented in earlier coursework. Discusses one or more applications associated with data analytic techniques. Practices using advanced techniques that build on the knowledge provided in earlier coursework and knowledge gained from a statistical methods course. Familiarity with databases and statistics are essential.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | IFT     | 458         | Middleware Programming and Database Security            | Covers the main concepts of middleware technologies. Includes the various methodologies used to integrate applications, databases and Web services. Students develop multilevel applications using programming/scripting languages (such as PHP, Java, Python, Perl) which access data stored in a database. Middleware programs typically control database access and protect database SQL programs from security breaches. Students access the data from applications and other Web technologies such as XML, as well as protecting the data from unauthorized access. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | IFT     | 510         | Principles of Computer and Information Technology                 | Comprehensive introduction to computer and information technology (IT). Provides a detailed understanding of computer architecture, system software and important related issues in an IT context. Forms a technical foundation for understanding current technologies and how they work. Topics include principles of systems' physical architecture, operating systems and application software, storage and systems management as well as current developments in cloud computing, green IT, social networking systems, and Internet search.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | IFT     | 520         | Principles of Telecommunication Technology                        | Basic communication technology concepts from an information technology perspective. Addresses signals, spectra and bandwidth; attenuation, distortion and noise; filtering, equalizing, modulation and multiplexing; information measurement, source and channel coding, channel capacity, baseband data transmission, digital modulation and spread-spectrum systems; local area networks and architecture and performance; layered network architecture, protocols, switching techniques, TCP/IP, traffic engineering and basic capacity analysis. Focuses not on detailed component design but on understanding the interrelationships of these concepts and telecommunication systems to support broad system design and management. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. Fulton Engineering | Information Technology | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student             |
| IFT     | 530         | Information Analysis, Modeling, Representation, and Communication | Teaches proven techniques for modeling information requirements and organizational data resources with a strong focus on gleaned information from data. Students learn how to discover and document database requirements, functional system requirements, and user interface requirements at a level appropriate for advanced information technology practitioner. Covers techniques including entity-relationship modeling for data analysis, functional dependency and normalization for the logical design of the database, Structured Query Language (SQL) for data management, and use cases for learning the process of requirement specification.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Ira A. | IGD     | 601         | Re-Thinking Global Development                  | Traces and analyzes the origins of international or global development as theory, concept, policy and practice. Studies the key theories that have been influential in development conceptualization and policy, within the context of the history in which they arose; evaluates the results; and considers future trends and scenarios considering the critiques of such mainstream approaches.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 4     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| IGD     | 602         | Innovation for Inclusive Development            | Clear advances in economic, social and political development and wealth generation have been uneven, and have resulted, as well, in an increasing gap between wealth and poverty. Continuing in the same direction could exacerbate existing problems, and in this course, we imagine different future outcomes and how to make policy today for a better future.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 4     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| IGD     | 603         | Methods for Research in Global Development      | Provides a practical introduction to research methods and methodologies in global development. Through hands-on exercises, exposes students to issues around quantitative and qualitative data collection and management, analysis and interpretation of results, and research ethics and practice in development as well as application of research to policy development and its implications.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 4     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| IGD     | 604         | Colloquium in Innovation in Global Development  | This student-centered and faculty-mentored colloquium provides critical opportunities for leadership, organization, planning and implementation of events related to global development studies. Encourages students to propose and plan their own events, focused on issues and topics of importance to them, and utilizing the resources on the ASU campus and Phoenix area.   | N                 | SEM               | Y               | GNA           | Future of Innovation in Society | School for the Future of Innovation in Society | 2     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

| IND     | 521         | Advanced Industrial Design Studio I         | Design language, motivation and inspiration, form exploration sketching, rough form study mock-ups, form development, and presentation. Product redesign. Students create new design language proposals for an existing product and redesign the product based on one of these languages. Provides instruction and opportunities to understand product design language and how to redesign existing products with different design guidelines. Results include evidence of concept development (sketches, drawings, models); functional development; human factors and ergonomic considerations; materials and process specifications; sustainability recommendations; and appearance visual materials and models (virtual and physical). Project-based course includes readings, presentations, critical analysis, discussion and the public exhibition and presentation of design work. | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Industrial Design major. | IND     | 522         | Advanced Industrial Design Studio II        | New product development with emphasis on design research, problem solving and functional/aesthetic development. Preliminary research about human behavior and health promotion. Based on the research findings, students conduct design research in teams and work on individual design projects. Student project results include evidence of concept development (sketches, drawings, models); functional development; human factors and ergonomic considerations; materials and process specifications; sustainability recommendations; and final appearance visual materials and models (virtual and physical). Project-based course includes readings, presentations, critical analysis, discussion, and the public exhibition and presentation of design work.   | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): IND 521. | IND     | 532         | Solving Problems with Life Cycle Assessment | Teaches the method known as Life Cycle Assessment (LCA), which quantitatively estimates the environmental health and human health performance of materials, energy sources and processes. This science-based method informs design teams how to reduce or eliminate complex environmental problems caused by the production, use and disposal of physical products and related services. Teaches attributional LCA that conforms to ISO 14040-series LCA guidelines.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Industrial Design student; IND 522 OR Master of Science in Design (Industrial Design) student; Credit is allowed for only IND 532 or IND 598 (Solving Problems with LCA) |

| IND     | 621         | Advanced Industrial Design Studio III       | Structured around the Design School traveling-studio model, this studio challenges students to identify new design concepts that improve society and the natural environment while also delighting users and creating value for business. For approximately one week, students travel to an off-campus location to examine a local condition there for which new design solutions are needed. Students return to ASU and continue working on the project for the semester. Project-based course includes readings, presentations, critical analysis, discussion and the public exhibition and presentation of design work.  | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): IND 522  |

| ITA     | 350         | Food and Culture: The Mediterranean Lifestyle in Italy   | Analyzes the Mediterranean lifestyle (food and eating practices) in Italy from a historical/cultural, scientific and sociological perspective. Students first examine the history and regional cultures of the Mediterranean diet in Italy as they analyze its rich biological diversity and history of cultural exchange. Students then gain an understanding of the critical nutrients of the Mediterranean diet and of the scientific evidence for its health benefits, especially how it can help prevent chronic diseases like obesity and type 2 diabetes, which affect more than half of all adults in the U.S. In addition, students keep a food log for one week, which they then analyze in terms of the critical nutrients of the Mediterranean diet. Finally, Italian food cannot be studied without preparing it! As UNESCO points out, the sharing of food is an important part of the Mediterranean lifestyle.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only ITA 350 or ITA 394 (Food and Culture: Mediterranean Lifestyle in Italy) or SLC 350 or SLC 394 (Food and Culture: Mediterranean Lifestyle in Italy)                         |

| ITA     | 414         | French and Italian Popular Culture   | Popular culture no longer holds the ancillary role traditionally reserved for whatever does not carry the definition of high culture. That popular culture is instead able to provide us with very relevant insights on the identity of a nation and a people is now widely accepted. As a consequence, this class aims at examining popular culture-related artifacts in Italy and France in order to shed a light on crucial issues such as the culture of food and its historical and social significance; the meaning of fashion and design within an urban context, with a special attention to gender roles; the importance of the comics, given in particular the exceptional success the bande dessinée genre is currently enjoying in France throughout the whole age range of the population; the show business with a particular attention to music; and the social function and role of sport with respect to the two dominant sports in both countries (soccer and cycling).                           | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | (L or HU) & G   | Prerequisite(s): ENG 200 with C or better OR minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only FRE 414 or FRE 494 (French and Italian Pop Culture) or ITA 414 or ITA 494 (French and Italian Pop Culture) or SLC 414 or SLC 494 (French and Italian Pop Culture)   |

| ITA     | 423         | Italian Organized Crime in Films and History: Approaches to Genre in Italian and American Film | Through an analysis of historical, anthropological, literary, political and cinematic texts, explores representations of the Italian organized crime in Italian and American films from the early 20th century to today. Discovers different "Mafias" originating in Italy, but whose reach extends much further, such as the Cosa Nostra in Sicily, the Camorra in Naples, and the 'Ndrangheta in Calabria. Examines the fiction, stereotypes, myths and legends surrounding the mafia through a scrupulous analysis of some of the most important American and Italian films portraying mafia culture. Italians have used the medium of film to address the issue of the mafia, raising awareness about the harsh reality of life in the mafia and the ways in which it reaches into every aspect of Italian politics and society. Explores how Italian mafia films subvert international fascination with the mafioso by disrupting the glamorized myths that are mainly perpetuated by American popular cinema. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | G               | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better OR min 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only ITA 423 or ITA 494 (Itn Orgnzd Crime in Flm & Hst) or ITA 494 (Mafia & Flm) or SLC 423 or SLC 494 (Itn Orgnzd Crime in Flm & Hst) or SLC 494 (Mafia & Flm) |

| JST     | 131         | Biblical Hebrew I                     | Offers an introduction to Biblical Hebrew, the language in which most of the books of the Hebrew Bible/Old Testament have been written. Provides the basic tools to understand and translate Biblical Hebrew texts. Covers the Hebrew alphabet, basic vocabulary, morphology and syntax. Students learn idiomatic expressions, basic literary techniques in narratives and poetry, as well as specificities of Semitic languages. Emphasizes a critical approach to the ancient text. Also introduces the evolution of the biblical text, from ancient manuscripts to contemporary editions and translations. Includes an introduction to the development of writing and to the evolution of Hebrew, from earliest inscriptions to its revival in modern Israel. The texts translated in class are situated in the history of Israel, but also in their Jewish and Christian cultural and religious contexts. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                    | Credit is allowed for only HEB, JST, REL 131 or HEB 194 (Biblical Hebrew I)  |

| JST     | 459         | Latin American Jewish Culture              | Focuses on forms of cultural production in Latin America marked by or under the aegis of Jewish diasporic identity from the late nineteenth century to the present. While Jewish immigrants and Latin Americans of Jewish descent may be found in all Latin American societies, cultural production is found concentrated in countries like Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Chile. Investigates essentially cultural versions of a sociohistorical consciousness, and ranges across a broad spectrum of Latin American Jewish texts in an investigation of what forms of production have emerged to represent this important immigrant component of Latin American national societies. Examines novels and other literary works, along with photography and films, and looks at theme, motifs, characters that can be identified with what might be called a Jewish consciousness or Jewish sensitivity. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only JST 459 or JST 494 (Jewish Latin American Culture) or SLC 459 or SLC 498 (Jewish Latin American Culture) or SPA 459 or SPA 498 (Jewish Latin American Culture)                                  |

| JST     | 495         | Judaism, Science and World Religions       | Studies the correlation between science and religion as an interdisciplinary study from a historical perspective. Session topics fall into three distinct units. The first correlates the physical sciences with Western religious theology; the second explores the consequences of the life sciences on religious psychology; and the third examines the impact of the interconnection between sciences and religions in society. Each unit is studied through specific readings, film, lectures, and discussion.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105 or 108 with C or better; JST 210, 230 with C or better or REL 210 with C or better; Minimum 87 hours  |
| JST     | 496         | Biblical Narratives: Literary Approaches   | Presents different trends in synchronic approaches applied to the Bible such as narrative criticism, semiotics, reader-response criticism, and situates them both in the postmodern cultural context and in the history of biblical exegesis. Explores various literary devices in biblical narratives, such as repetition, type-scenes, characterization, the change of points of view, the use of metaphors. Studies each technique on particular biblical texts, literally translated into English, with a special emphasis on how these techniques guide the interpretation and create meaning. Questions the significance of literary approaches for religious or ideological texts, such as the Hebrew Bible. Also considers criticisms raised against these approaches, assesses their limits, and envisions their future.          | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105 or 108 with C or better; JST 210, 230 with C or better or REL 210 with C or better; Minimum 87 hours  |

| JUS     | 456         | Human Rights and Sustainability             | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     | (L or SB) & G   | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only JUS 456 or JUS 497 (Seminar in Human Rights) or SOC 455 or SOS 456  |
| JUS     | 460         | Feminism and Justice                        | Explores feminist thought and critiques traditional political theories. | JUS     | 468         | Protest, Justice, Law and the Media         | Examines research on protests, political deviance, trials/law and justice, and critiques some of the media representations of related ideas. Investigates global social movements, political protests and nascent political trials. Analyzes varied justifications for defining action as diversity, deviance or crime and the reasons for using criminal, civil or alternative (positive) sanctions (especially via indigenous peoples). Explores the encompassing meaning of a political trial. Many people throughout the world find everyday life to be a trial, especially those placed on the margins of globalization. Expands the research on media and trials that usually have been examined narrowly by legal institutions in North America and reinforced by hegemony.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only JUS 468 or JUS 494 (Protest, Justice and the Media)   |

| JUS     | 565         | Critical and Comparative Issues in Disability | Examines the construction of disability as a social, cultural and political phenomenon. Focuses on how disability is defined and represented in society as well as the implications/consequences of such definitions. Hegemonic understandings of disability typically have employed narrow medical and therapeutic explanations. From such deterministic perspectives, the disabled individual often has been defined as deviant, stigmatized, incompetent and marginal. This class rejects the perception of disability as a functional impairment that limits a person's activities. Instead, disability is a construct that finds its meaning and representation within a social and cultural context. Accordingly, examines the ideologies that such representations can conceal in order to crack the hegemonic façade, challenging the ways in which disability is perceived and treated by the dominant society. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only JUS 565 or JUS 598 (The Social Construction of Disability) |

| JUS     | 656         | Human Rights and Sustainability         | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | KIN     | 345         | Motor and Developmental Learning             | Principles of motor skill acquisition across the life span, focusing on the learner and the learning environment.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 101 with B or better; PSY 101 with C or better; BIO 201 with C or better  |
| KIN     | 348         | Psychological Skills for Optimal Performance | Applies psychological techniques and their use to improve effectiveness and performance in sport and related areas.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     | SB              |  |
| KIN     | 352         | Psychosocial Aspects of Physical Activity    | Interrelationships between physical activity and psychosocial variables, including socialization, cultural values, aggression, and motivation. Includes the psychological benefits of physical activity and exercise adherence.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     | SB & C          | Prerequisite(s): KIN 101 with B or better; PSY 101 with C or better  |
| KIN     | 394         | Special Topics                               | Covers topics of immediate or special interest to a faculty member and students.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 1-4   |                 |  |
| KIN     | 400         | Topics in Neuroscience                       | Covers in-depth important and emerging developments in neuroscience, emphasizing lectures that include readings of recent reviews and contemporary publications in peer-reviewed journals. Includes a significant writing component; students learn skills for writing scientific publications and grant applications.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BIO 360 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only BIO 400 or KIN 400 or PSY 400 or SHS 400   |
| KIN     | 412         | Biomechanics of the Skeletal System          | Biomechanics of tissues, structures, and major joints of the musculoskeletal system. Discussion of injury mechanisms.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 335 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only KIN 412 or 512   |
| KIN     | 413         | Qualitative Analysis in Sport Biomechanics   | Develops systematic approach for detecting and correcting errors in human performance using anatomical and mechanical principles.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 335 (EPE 335) with C or better  |
| KIN     | 414         | Electromyographic Kinesiology                | Muscular contributions to human movement, muscle mechanics, electrophysiological basis, and practical application of electromyography.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): KIN 335 (EPE 335 or PED 335) with C or better; KIN 340 (EPE 340 or PED 340) with C or better  |
| KIN     | 415         | Theory of Corrective Exercise                | The philosophic approach of assessing whole body movement. Expands the student's understanding of the basic movement patterns needed to reduce injury and how the body compensates for movement impairments. Students gain practice screening movement to identify imbalances and dysfunction and learn how to apply corrective exercise techniques.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): EXW 330 or KIN 334; Credit is allowed for only KIN 415 or KIN 515 or KIN 494 (Theory of Corrective Exercise)  |
| KIN     | 418         | Experimental Neuromechanics                  | Students experience different quantitative techniques to analyze human movement from a motor control and biomechanical perspective.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 290; KIN 335; KIN 345; Credit is allowed for only KIN 418 or KIN 494 (Experimental Neuromechanics)  |
| KIN     | 421         | Human Motor Control                          | Focuses on understanding how the human central nervous system controls, regulates, and learns movements.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): KIN 345 (EPE 345) with C or better  |
| KIN     | 422         | Motor Control in Special Populations         | Discusses principles of motor control theories and related practical applications for certain special developmental populations.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions              | College of Health Solutions     | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): KIN 345 (EPE 345) with C or better  |

| KIN     | 423         | Motor Control and Aging                                      | Functional and behavioral changes to the motor control system as humans age, how specifically it impacts motor control and learning.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): KIN 345 (EPE 345) with C or better   |
| KIN     | 437         | Comparative Biomechanics and Motor Control                   | Guides students to critically evaluate how the physical and mechanical properties of organisms and their environment affect biological tissues, structures, and motor control.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BIO 181 with C or better; MAT 170 with C or better; PHY 111 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only BIO 537 or KIN 437 or KIN 537 or KIN 494/598 (Comparative Biomechanics and Motor Control) |
| KIN     | 440         | Exercise Biochemistry  | Study of bioenergetics and metabolism of cellular (skeletal muscle, heart, and liver) organelles and proteins during exercise.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: KIN 340 (EPE 340 or PED 340); Credit is allowed for only KIN 440 or 532  |
| KIN     | 441         | Physiology of Women in Sport                                 | Physiological aspects of women engaging in physical activity. Emphasizes factors affecting performance and health throughout life.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     | L               | Pre-requisite: KIN 340 (EPE 340 or PED 340); Credit is allowed for only KIN 441 or 531  |
| KIN     | 442         | Fuel Metabolism  | Discusses current research concerning the metabolism of carbohydrate, fat, and protein during exercise.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 340 with C or better OR Exercise and Wellness major: EXW 315 with B or better; Credit is allowed for only KIN 442 or KIN 536   |
| KIN     | 443         | Exercise Endocrinology                                       | Discusses current research and theory concerning hormonal changes during exercise.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): KIN 340 (EPE 340 or PED 340) with C or better; Credit is allowed for only KIN 443 or 533   |
| KIN     | 444         | Metabolic Adaptations to Exercise Training                   | Examines physiologic adaptations to exercise training as they relate to metabolism and tissue functions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 340 (EPE 340 or PED 340) with C or better  |
| KIN     | 446         | Pediatric Obesity  | Covers a variety of aspects related to pediatric obesity including the causes and consequences in terms of physiologic, genetic, psychosocial, environmental and economic. Also discusses potential interventions such as behavioral, pharmacologic, surgical and public health and policy. Evidenced-based course where research guides class lectures and discussions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): EXW 315 or KIN 340; Credit is allowed for only EXW 412 or KIN 446 or EXW 494 (Pediatric Obesity) or KIN 494 (Pediatric Obesity)  |
| KIN     | 447         | ECG Interpretation   | Using ECG data, this course comprehensively investigates cardiac arrhythmias and interactions with therapeutic drugs and exercise.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 340 with C or better OR Exercise and Wellness major: EXW 315 with B or better; Credit is allowed for only KIN 447 or KIN 547 or KIN 598 (ECG Interpretation)                                   |
| KIN     | 450         | Biopsychosocial Perspectives on Physical Activity and Health | Uses a biopsychosocial perspective to examine the interrelationships on physical activity and health (physical and mental).   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 352 (EPE 352) with C or better   |
| KIN     | 452         | Exercise Psychology  | Contemporary research and theory as related to human behavior and health in an exercise setting.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     | SB              | Prerequisite(s): KIN 352 (EPE 352 or PED 352) with C or better; Credit is allowed for only KIN 452 or 522   |
| KIN     | 454         | Motivational Theory in Exercise and Health                   | Assesses motivational theories relevant to the field of exercise and health psychology. Evaluates research and utilizes the findings to create applied public service announcements targeted toward a specific health issue (e.g., exercise, nutrition, smoking) and a specific population. Assesses students on four group public service announcements and "mini exams" for each unit. Taught in class, online and in a hybrid format.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 352 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only KIN 454 or KIN 494 (Motivational Theory in Exercise & Health)   |
| KIN     | 460         | Theory of Strength Training                                  | Research and theories on developing muscular strength; programs for developing muscular strength.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): KIN 340 (EPE 340 or PED 340) with C or better  |

| KIN     | 545         | Movement Assessment and Evaluation       | Students perform different laboratory and clinical techniques to analyze human movement for biomechanical applications. Delivered as two components: lecture and laboratory. The lecture component serves to discuss the theory behind quantitative analysis techniques, proper equipment usage, data processing techniques and the connection to biomechanical principles. During the laboratory component students gain hands-on experience with the equipment by performing assigned experiments and clinical assessments. Follows with practice in analyzing, reporting, interpreting and presenting data. Additionally, students make recommendations and assign exercises to correct impaired movement when appropriate. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): KIN 515  |

Provides a broad exposure to different types of reading and writing. Because the Latin American Studies program is flexible, students must be able to engage with many different types of texts across disciplines. Covers Latin American cultural history from pre-Colombian to the post-modern by exploring different formats and genres around major central themes.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     | HU              | Prerequisite(s): SPA 313 and 314 with C or better OR SPA 315 and 316 with C or better OR SPA 325 with C or better   |
| LAS     | 340         | Latin American Women Writers                                 | In the 20th and 21st centuries, Latin America has seen a proliferation of literature published by women authors. While this explosion of the written word owes in part to changing socioeconomic factors and the opening of the international markets, Latin American women's literary history is often ignored in the canon. Examines the concepts of feminism through a Mexican framework, starting from the point of view of Mexican women theorizing about their own. This is not a history of feminism, but it does aim to highlight certain fundamental texts and key concepts of Mexico's history from the position of women writers, including feminism's critique of social structures beyond the bounds of gender relations. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LAS 340 or WST 341   |
| LAS     | 350         | The Construction of a Nation: Chile in the 20th/21st Century | Examines Chilean history, politics and cultural production through its historical development and explores a multiplicity of cultural issues. Develops knowledge and appreciation of cultural and visual production of Chile and Latin America as well as acquired skills for critically analyzing texts in their applicability to modern-day society. Considers the variety of cultural and artistic productions (novel, poetry, short story, film, music, pop culture, presidential speeches) as sources of social commentary in which observations of national identities are constructed.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102 (or ENG 105 or 108) with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LAS 350, ENG 494 (Construction/Nation:Chile in the 20th/21st Cen) or SPA 494 (Construction/Nation:Chile in the 20th/21st Cen) |
| LAS     | 351         | Cityscapes: Urban Mexican Literature and Culture             | Examines major developments in contemporary Mexican literature. Begins at mid-20th century as the novel turns away from the rural novel of the Revolution, toward a more urban setting. Mexico City serves as a cultural and political center, and the novels mark social and political changes across different literary currents.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better  |

| LAW     | 105         | The Structure and Methodology of the American Legal System | What is law? What is the structure of the American legal system? What does it mean to understand law in the context of that system? How is this system effective and problematic and how does its evolution over time change our perceptions of and relationships with those who are part of it? Provides answers to these and other questions while simultaneously developing a working understanding of American law, its practicalities, and externalities. Takes the form of a comprehensive inquiry into the legal system, its origins, structures, applications, success, failure, and decision-making processes. In asking probing questions about the system and its nature, explores the values and philosophies that inform our American conception of the law and its role in society. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | College of Law | College of Law Dean's Office       | 3     |                 |  |

| LAW     | 210         | Introduction to American Legal System and Business Law     | Introduces the American legal system and an overview of laws that impact business in the United States. Initially examines the questions: What is law? What is the source, nature, and scope of laws; and how is law shaped by our culture and political institutions? How is the American legal system structured and operated? The majority of substantive content examines the role of law in business.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 3     |                 |  |
| LAW     | 215         | Business, Law and Society                                  | What would a legal system that is pro-business look like? Explores the role law plays in American business. Considers what it means to have business relations generally governed by the rule of law, and specifically in the U.S. legal system. Draws on legal theory, political theory and American legal history to guide us. Examines some of the legal tools of the trade from property law and contract law that are fundamental to the conduct of American business. Discovers that the development of legal doctrines promoting free enterprise are at times tempered by social justice concerns rooted in conceptions of equality and fairness. Considers how the current legal regulatory climate promoting corporate social responsibility impacts business decision making.           | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): undergraduate student   |

| LAW     | 662         | Alternative Dispute Resolution and Employment Law     | The use of alternative dispute resolution has been most extensive in the area of employment law. Mediation and arbitration are widely used not only in the collective bargaining setting, but also in virtually every aspect of the employment relationship. Offers a comprehensive review of the subject with special emphasis on the extensive body of law that has developed in regulating employer-imposed arbitration. Discussion of mediation includes use of simulations to enable the students to understand how mediation can effectively resolve employment disputes. Opportunities to observe real mediations of employment disputes. Experienced attorneys discuss the "real world" use of employment ADR from a plaintiff's and a defendant's perspective.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-3   |                 |  |
| LAW     | 664         | Intellectual Property                                 | Surveys the laws conventionally grouped as intellectual property, with a focus on patents, copyrights, and trademarks. Explores the policy rationales for each body of law. Particularly relevant for two types of students: (a) those who are unsure they want to specialize in IP and want a general introduction, and (b) those who do not have room in the schedules to take all of the upper-level offerings here at ASU. Not appropriate for students who have already taken the upper-level courses in copyright, trademark, and patents; students who have taken these offerings may be withdrawn.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-4   |                 |  |

| LAW     | 725         | Critical Race Theory                   | Focuses on the idea of "race" as a social/political construct and examines the impact of American law on the construction of race. Provide historical and legal background necessary to understand the significance of race within American law and policy. Evaluate a number of legal frameworks that address issues of race and ethnicity in various contexts (e.g. segregation laws, civil rights law, federal Indian law, international human rights law). Assesses various jurisprudential accounts evaluating the ethical and moral underpinnings of the law. Critical race theory is known as a jurisprudential framework that is often critical of standard liberal approaches. Evaluates the critiques of liberalism and the scholarship of both liberal and critical theorists.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-3   |                 |   |

| LAW     | 737         | Cults and Alternative Religions        | Provides opportunity to study laws and policies governing cults. While the definition of a "cult" will be a topic of initial study in the seminar, it may be conceived of loosely as a group with a charismatic leader whose members are persuaded to relinquish their self-identities and material possessions in furtherance of the group's goals. In addition to analyzing the definition of a cult, the first part of the seminar discusses the various types of cults, studying particular cults, and learning about cultic activities. The remainder covers domestic and foreign legal and policy issues generated by cults, including the legal rights of cultic organizations, anti-cult organizations, cult members, and cult members' families. Covers conventional religions that are conceptually similar to cults, to the degree that religious movements fall outside the mainstream. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-4   |                 |   |

| LDE     | 499         | Individualized Instruction                 | Provides an opportunity for original study or investigation in the major or field of specialization on an individual and more autonomous basis. Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course. This course may be taken only by outstanding senior students who have completed at least one semester in residence and who have a cumulative GPA of 3.00 or higher in the major or field of specialization. A special class fee may be required. | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | Herberger Inst Design & Arts | The Design School | 1-3   |                 |   |

| LDE     | 621         | Advanced Landscape Architectural Studio III | Structured around the Design School's "traveling studio" model and provides an opportunity for graduate-level students to refine their talents while also contributing to a better future. Challenges students to work in a multidisciplinary environment to identify new design concepts that improve society and the natural environment. For approximately one week during the semester, students travel to an off-campus location (either in the U.S. or abroad) to examine a local condition there for which new design solutions are needed. Students return to ASU and continue working on the project for the semester. Studio-based course includes reading, presentations by faculty and students, discussion, design research, conceptual design practice, and the public exhibition/presentation of this work in multiple formats. | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts  | The Design School                             | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): LDE 522 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LDE 621 or LDE 690 (Advanced Landscape Architecture Studio III)  |
| LDE     | 622         | Advanced Landscape Architectural Studio IV  | Capstone course. Students complete a design project that demonstrates mastery of landscape architecture skills and knowledge. Requires some independent direction. The instructor determines deadlines and expectations for deliverables. Requires cooperation and collaboration between students. Design performance is the themed topic and focus. Students develop a complex design project that addresses a significant professional issue. The project explores and demonstrates how advanced design resolves that issue in a performative manner using evidence-based practices and performance-based metrics. Studio-based course includes reading, presentations by faculty and students, discussion, design research, conceptual design practice, and the public exhibition/presentation of this work in multiple formats.            | N                 | STO               | N               | GNA           | Herberger Inst Design & Arts  | The Design School                             | 5     |                 | Prerequisite(s): LDE 621 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LDE 622 or LDE 693 (Advanced Landscape Architectural Studio IV)  |

| MAS     | 550         | Philosophical and Spiritual Issues in Death and Dying | From Plato to Maimonides to Heidegger to Kubler-Ross, scholars, clinicians, and spiritual writers have recognized that attitudes about death and dying contribute to understandings of human existence. Recalling the ancient Socratic, biblical, and other spiritual traditions of the cura animarum (care for and cure of the soul) and joining contemporary post/secular conversations relevant to integration of body-mind-spirit, this course introduces basic concepts and practices of care ethics and spirituality. Focuses on relations among existential (ontological), therapeutic (psychosomatic), and spiritual (religious) dimensions of care. Theoretically, the course is inter-faith in approach, holistic in scope, and specialized in content. Practically, students examine real-life issues in care ethics and spirituality from multiple perspectives | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences | Dean, New Interdisciplinary Arts and Sciences    | 3-9   |                 | Prerequisite: Graduate (degree or nondegree) student; Credit is allowed for only MAS, PHI 550 or REL 585  |

| MAT     | 171         | Precalculus: Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics (STEM) | Robust treatment of advanced algebraic skills and trigonometry that are vital in calculus. Algebra topics include functions, compositions, inverses, transformations, complex numbers, roots of polynomial functions, rational functions, exponential and logarithmic functions and their properties. Trigonometry is approached via the unit circle as well as the right triangle. Topics include the trigonometric functions, their graphs and identities, inverse trigonometry, the laws of sine and cosine, vectors and the dot product with an application toward work, and polar coordinates and roots of complex numbers (deMoivre's theorem).  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 4     | MA              | Prerequisite(s): MAT 117 with C or better, or Mathematics Placement Test with a score of 50% or higher, or ALEKS score of 61 or higher; Credit is allowed for only MAT 170 or MAT 171 |

| MAT     | 207         | Algebra and Geometry in the High School                              | Provides a conceptually rigorous treatment of the central ideas of algebra and geometry in high school. Explores and develops familiar mathematical content from a very different perspective. Focuses squarely on creating meaning for concepts and on building coherence of meaning across concepts and various representations of them. As such, course activities and assessments (class/lab activities, homework assignments, and exams) reflect these expectations, focusing on both doing high school mathematics with meaning and on expressing and communicating that meaning accurately and coherently in verbal and written form. Prior to enrolling in this course, students should have experience with algebra/geometry to at least the high school level. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Co-requisite: MTE 210   |

| MAT     | 208         | Discrete Mathematics for Secondary Teachers | Potential secondary teachers of mathematics should master the Math Standards proposed by the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics for college-intending students. Focuses on those aspects of these standards that apply to discrete mathematics with particular emphasis on: mathematical problem solving, mathematics as communication, mathematical reasoning, and discrete mathematics. Taking a broader view, introduces mathematics as a discipline that uses known methods to discover and verify new conclusions through the study of discrete mathematics. | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 |   |

| MAT     | 412         | Differential Geometry                 | Rigorous treatment to the concepts and methods of differential geometry via the classical theory of curves and surfaces in Euclidean space. Devotes the bulk of the class (approximately 13 weeks) to a study of the local geometry of surfaces, with an eye toward intrinsic and global applications. This material, which culminates in a discussion of the Gauss-Bonnet theorem and its applications, comprises roughly the first four chapters of the text. Time permitting (and depending on the specific interests of the class), pursues further results in the global theory of surfaces and/or concludes with a primer on abstract Riemannian geometry. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): MAT 342 with C or better; MAT 371 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only MAT 412 or MAT 494 (Introduction to Differential Geometry) |

Same topics as MAT 415; mastery at much higher level required. Students with MAT 415 (even as undergraduates) may not enroll.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Graduate student; Credit is allowed for only MAT 415 or 512  |
| MAT     | 513         | Graph Theory                          | Rigorous introduction to graph theory. High-level mastery in topics such as trees, cycles, matchings, planarity, connectivity, hamiltonicity, chromatic number, Ramsey theory with emphasis on proof techniques.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Pre-requisites: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking); Credit is allowed for only MAT 416 or 513                                  |
| MAT     | 514         | Enumerative Combinatorics I           | First semester of a systematic development of enumerative combinatorics, including elementary counting techniques, sieve methods, and partially ordered sets.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| MAT     | 515         | Enumerative Combinatorics II          | Second semester of a systematic development of enumerative combinatorics, including lattices, exponential structures, symmetric functions, and selected special topics.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| MAT     | 516         | Graph Theory I                        | First semester of a systematic development of graph theory, including matchings, connectivity, arboricity, planarity, coloring, network flows.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| MAT     | 517         | Graph Theory II                       | Second semester of a systematic development of graph theory, including dense and sparse graphs, Ramsey theory, hamiltonicity, random graphs, minors.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| MAT     | 541         | "p"-Adic Numbers        | Introduces "p"-Adic numbers and analysis. Topics include valuations, completions of number fields, extensions of the field of "p"-adic numbers and "p"-adic analysis. Students should have previously taken courses in analysis and algebra.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 542         | Elliptic Curves         | Geometry and arithmetic of elliptic curves, points of finite order, the group of rational points, curves over finite fields, complex multiplication. Students should have previously taken a senior-level course in abstract algebra.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 543         | Abstract Algebra I      | Groups, modules, rings and fields, Galois theory, homological algebra, and the representation theory.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 544         | Abstract Algebra II     | Continuation of groups, modules, rings and fields, Galois theory, homological algebra, and the representation theory   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): MAT 543  |
| MAT     | 545         | Abstract Algebra III    | Covers modules, Galois theory, and preparation for advanced study in algebraic parts of mathematics.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: MAT 544  |
| MAT     | 547         | Algebraic Number Theory | Algebraic properties of number fields and their completions. Topics include rings of integers, ramification, finiteness of the class group, and Dirichlet's unit theorem.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: MAT 544  |
| MAT     | 561         | Ecological Modeling     | Mathematical modeling of animal populations, food-web structural and ecological processes in space and time. May use modeling tools on computer clusters.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: Graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking); Credit is allowed for only ABS, BIO 560 or MAT 561 |
| MAT     | 570         | Real Analysis I         | Lebesgue integration, selected function spaces, differentiation, abstract measure theory, and elements of functional analysis.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 571         | Real Analysis II        | Continuation of Lebesgue integration, selected function spaces, differentiation, abstract measure theory, and elements of functional analysis.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): MAT 570  |
| MAT     | 572         | Complex Analysis I      | Analytic functions, series and product representations, entire and meromorphic functions, normal families, Riemann mapping theorem, harmonic functions, and Riemann surfaces.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 573         | Complex Analysis II     | Continuation of analytic functions, series and product representations, entire and meromorphic functions, normal families, Riemann mapping theorem, harmonic functions, and Riemann surfaces.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): MAT 572  |
| MAT     | 578         | Functional Analysis I   | Locally convex, normed, and Hilbert spaces. Linear operators, spectral theory, and application to classical analysis.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 579         | Functional Analysis II  | Continuation of locally convex, normed, and Hilbert spaces. Linear operators, spectral theory, and application to classical analysis.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Pre-requisite: MAT 578  |
| MAT     | 580         | Practicum               | Structured practical experience in a professional program, supervised by a practitioner and/or faculty member with whom the student works closely.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences     | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 583         | Fieldwork               | Structured, supervised field experience in a field science or other discipline requiring experience in field techniques.   | Y                 | PRA               | Y               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Mathematical and Natural Sciences     | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| MAT     | 584         | Internship              | Structured practical experience following a contract or plan, supervised by faculty and practitioners.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
