| SHS     | 541         | Data Analysis in Auditory and Language Neuroscience                  | Common statistical analyses for the interdisciplinary field of auditory and language neuroscience. Covers fundamental topics of statistics and their applications in this specialty area of neuroscience. Various data types, experimental designs and statistical analyses that are common in the field of auditory and language neuroscience. Through several hands-on activities, students learn to implement and to apply different statistical analyses to auditory and language data.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Speech and Hearing Science graduate student  |
| SHS     | 542         | Applied Research Methods in Auditory and Language Neuroscience       | Team-taught course covering fundamental topics of experiment design and their applications in auditory and language neuroscience. Students learn about the fundamentals of experimental design, and their application in psychoacoustics, EEG, ERP and MRI. A series of hands-on activities require that students analyze existing experiments and a final project requires that students design a new experiment.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Speech and Hearing Science graduate student  |

| SHS     | 543         | Functional Neuroimaging of Language and Related Processes        | Functional neuroimaging for anyone who is interested in its application to study brain functions including language, speech and auditory psychophysics. Functional MRI is a prominent method to see into the human brain. Its use as a research tool in the field of neuroscience (and language neuroscience in particular) has grown exponentially over the past decade. Through a combination of lecture, readings and practicum exercises, this course provides a broad introduction into functional MRI research, including how MRI can generate images; how these signals relate to neuronal activity; and how to design and analyze meaningful functional MRI experiments to investigate the neural computations of language, speech, hearing and other related functions. Students also review recent functional neuroimaging literature, and gain hands-on experience collecting and analyzing fMRI datasets. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only SHS 543 or SHS 598 (Functional Neuroimaging of Cognition) |
| SHS     | 550         | Development, Assessment, Intervention: School-Age Children       | Covers development, assessment and intervention of children from 6 years to 21 years of age, with a focus on school education. Includes child development of anatomical, neurophysiology, cognitive, motor, perceptual, speech, language, reading, writing and hearing aspects. Also addresses service delivery models in different contexts in children with atypical development in the different areas.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | College of Health Solutions | College of Health Solutions | 4     |                 | Pre-requisite: SHS 540   |

| SLB     | 515         | Sports Business Strategies & Executive Decisions                      | Sports can involve a jog around campus or big business. Sports are interesting, important and a vivid context to learn about consumers, organizations, diverse stakeholders, media and entertainment, partnerships and sponsorship, highly competitive strategies in finance and marketing, managing community venues, big events, and other relevant business topics. Maintains a pragmatic, experiential, yet well-grounded focus, studying the role, nature and dynamics of sports business both in and around "sports industries" and in and around "conventional businesses." Builds and "tests" knowledge and exercise skills related to sports business analysis, decision making, communication and both strategy development and execution. Intellectually rigorous, yet fun. Develops a sophisticated, yet practical understanding of the nature, contexts and dynamics of sports business. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Law              | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 2-4   |                 | Prerequisite(s): College of Law student; Credit is allowed for only SLB 515 or MKT 591 (Sports Business Strategy and Industry Dynamics)                                   |
| SLB     | 516         | Revenue Generation in the Sports Industry                             | Develops an appreciation for and understanding of the multiple stakeholders and diverse interests in and around sports business, and of their constantly changing and interactive impact on sports business practice and performance. Gives broad exposure to the major revenue generating domains in the sports industry. Explores the fundamentals of marketing and applies those fundamentals to the domains of sponsorship, endorsement, media, ticketing, merchandising and fundraising as means to create and maintain revenue streams.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Law              | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): College of Law student; Credit is allowed for only SLB 516 or MKT 591 (Sports Business Development)  |

| SLB     | 523         | History of MLB Since World War II: MSLB                     | Examines the issues of law and economics that developed in Major League Baseball in the context of the successive waves of change that overtook American society following World War II. Rather than focusing on the themes that preoccupy most histories of professional sport--e.g., winners, losers, stars, dynasties--this seminar examines and discusses the legal and business implications of Major League Baseball's evolution in postwar America. These include Jackie Robinson's entry into the National League as a Brooklyn Dodger in 1947 and his legacy in the larger civil rights movement; the interplay of public policy and franchise relocation; the development of the MLB Players' Association and its labor relations; the legal basis for the birth of free agency in the sport; and biometric data privacy concerns that may be of significant import in future years. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law                           | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law           | 1-4   |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Sports Law and Business student; Credit is allowed for only LAW 672 or SLB 523 or SLB 598 (Baseball & Society Since WWII) or SLB 598 (History of MLB Since World War II - MSLB) or SLB 598 (History of Sports in America) |
| SLB     | 581         | U.S. Law and Legal Analysis Through Sport: MSLB             | The U.S. legal system and the types of legal reasoning used by legal professionals. Provides the necessary instruction to use legal reasoning in both academic work and professional endeavors, including reading and evaluating legal cases, statutes and public policy. Students complete written legal analysis exercises, draft case briefs and participate meaningfully in class by critically analyzing current legal issues.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | College of Law                           | Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law           | 1-4   |                 | Prerequisite(s): Master of Sports Law and Business student   |

| SLC     | 350         | Food and Culture: The Mediterranean Lifestyle in Italy     | Analyzes the Mediterranean lifestyle (food and eating practices) in Italy from a historical/cultural, scientific and sociological perspective. Students first examine the history and regional cultures of the Mediterranean diet in Italy as they analyze its rich biological diversity and history of cultural exchange. Students then gain an understanding of the critical nutrients of the Mediterranean diet and of the scientific evidence for its health benefits, especially how it can help prevent chronic diseases like obesity and type 2 diabetes, which affect more than half of all adults in the U.S. In addition, students keep a food log for one week, which they then analyze in terms of the critical nutrients of the Mediterranean diet. Finally, Italian food cannot be studied without preparing it! As UNESCO points out, the sharing of food is an important part of the Mediterranean lifestyle. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only ITA 350 or ITA 394 (Food and Culture: Mediterranean Lifestyle in Italy) or SLC 350 or SLC 394 (Food and Culture: Mediterranean Lifestyle in Italy) |

| SLC     | 423         | Italian Organized Crime in Films and History: Approaches to Genre in Italian and American Film | Through an analysis of historical, anthropological, literary, political and cinematic texts, explores representations of the Italian organized crime in Italian and American films from the early 20th century to today. Discovers different "Mafias" originating in Italy, but whose reach extends much further, such as the Cosa Nostra in Sicily, the Camorra in Naples, and the 'Ndrangheta in Calabria. Examines the fiction, stereotypes, myths and legends surrounding the mafia through a scrupulous analysis of some of the most important American and Italian films portraying mafia culture. Italians have used the medium of film to address the issue of the mafia, raising awareness about the harsh reality of life in the mafia and the ways in which it reaches into every aspect of Italian politics and society. Explores how Italian mafia films subvert international fascination with the mafioso by disrupting the glamorized myths that are mainly perpetuated by American popular cinema. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | G                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better OR min 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only ITA 423 or ITA 494 (Itn Orgnzd Crime in Flm & Hst) or ITA 494 (Mafia & Flm) or SLC 423 or SLC 494 (Itn Orgnzd Crime in Flm & Hst) or SLC 494 (Mafia & Flm) |

| SLC     | 439         | Art in Exile: Vladimir Vladimirovich Nabokov | In English. The scandalous success of Lolita (1955) allowed Vladimir Nabokov to retire from teaching at Cornell University and move to Switzerland to devote himself to fiction, translation, criticism and lepidoptery. This was only one of the many metamorphoses that Nabokov, a Russian noble, underwent while in exile, moving from Russia to the Crimea, Cambridge UK, Berlin, Paris, Cambridge MA, Ithaca, Hollywood and finally Montreux. Examines the Russian roots of Nabokov's Russian (in translation) and American novels about exile: his first novel, Mary (1926), The Defense (1929), Glory (1932), and his tribute to 19th-century Russian literature, The Gift (1938), which he considered his greatest Russian novel. These are followed by Lolita (1955), Pnin (1957) and Pale Fire (1962), his memoirs, Speak, Memory (1966), and some essays and short stories. Films include Lolita by Stanley Kubrick (1962) and Adrian Lyne (1997). | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     | HU & L          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102 or 105 or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only RUS 439 or SLC 439 or ENG/RUS/SLC 494 (Art in Exile: Vladimir Vladimirovich Nabokov)  |

| SLC     | 551         | Global Approaches to Translation           | Familiarize students with various approaches to translation practice. Examines issues related to the cultural role of translation. Students [re]prepare a translation, justification of translation choices, and discussion of the complexities posed by the translation. Readings address a broad array of translation theories, with most focused on translation as a globally theorized phenomenon in the 20th and 21st centuries. Readings and discussions focus on how one translates, and on translation as a culture-making enterprise inextricably tied to the questions of who translates, in what context, for whom, and to what ends. Students understand translation theories from different eras and cultures; understand how translation is implicated in different forms of intercultural contact (colonialism, commerce, proselytization); gain experience translating texts from a source language into English; and can explain why they translated the way they did. | N                 | RSC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| SLC     | 557         | Computer-Assisted Language Learning        | Explores the field of computer-assisted language learning. Traces the development of computer-assisted language learning (CALL) over the last three decades. Focuses on research that explores how computer technology can help facilitate second language development; relies primarily on empirical data to do so. Examine established as well as new research methods in CALL. Participants participate in one research study and apply theoretical and practical aspects of CALL in these projects.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only APL 557 or ENG 557 or LIN 591 (Intro to Computer Assisted Language Learning) or SLC 557 |

| SLC     | 596         | Second Language Methodologies          | Provides a solid overview of current methodologies in foreign/second language teaching and learning, including the World-readiness standards for learning languages and the Proficiency Guidelines of the American Council on the Teaching of Foreign Languages (ACTFL). Focuses on current pedagogical trends and theories in several areas of second language acquisition, including grammar and vocabulary, reading, writing, listening and speaking, and intercultural competence. Also provides opportunities to obtain practice in creating and adapting instructional materials, preparing and implementing individual lesson plans, written and oral assignments, and exams. Focuses on discussing student diversity in today's classrooms and differences between heritage and second language learners. Students have the opportunity to research a topic of their interest. Course consists of lectures, discussion, hands-on experience to encourage meaningful and collaborative learning. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking grad stdnt; Credit only allowed for CHI 591 (Lang Teach Mthd & Prin) or CHI 596 or SLC 591 (Lang Teach Mthd & Prin) or SPA 591 (Lang Teach Mthd & Prin) or SPA 596 |

| SOC     | 455         | Human Rights and Sustainability                             | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Sanford School of Social and Family Dynamics | 3     | (L or SB) & G   | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only JUS 456 or JUS 497 (Seminar in Human Rights) or SOC 455 or SOS 456 |

| SOC     | 510         | Bayesian Analyses in the Social Sciences             | Discusses principles and practices of Bayesian approaches to statistical inference and modeling. Topics include: philosophical underpinnings of Bayesian inference; associated interpretations of probability; univariate and multivariate models prevalent in the social sciences; Markov chain Monte Carlo estimation; data-model fit; model comparisons procedures; missing data analyses. Course consists of lectures, demonstrations of software, reading assignments, homework assignments and a project. Exposes students to key concepts in Bayesian methods and gains technical foundations necessary to be consumers and contributors to applied and methodological research. Assumes previous knowledge of statistics through multiple regression, and recommends additional topics: multivariate statistics, latent variable modeling, probability theory. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Sanford School of Social and Family Dynamics | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only CDE 591 (Bayesian Analyses in the Social Sciences) or CDE 591 (Introduction to Bayesian Analyses) or FAS 510 or SOS 510 |

| SOS     | 117         | Food System Sustainability   | Food systems are particularly important for human societies to sustain and are also particularly vulnerable to multiple threats related to the interconnected sustainability challenges we face. Introduces the concepts and issues involved in food systems sustainability. Divided into four modules, the first three of which address the other systems with which food systems interact—socio-ecological, socio-cultural and socio-technical systems. The final module addresses the future of food systems. Teaches students about the main issues in food system sustainability and allows students to enhance their critical thinking skills by applying them to the many sustainability challenges associated food system activities via solutions-based learning including the social, ecological, economic and institutional dimensions. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability                 | School of Sustainability                    | 3     |                 |   |
| SOS     | 171         | The Thread of Energy   | Follows the thread of energy through every aspect of our lives. Discusses the technical, social, legal, and policy contexts of all energy resources, including present and unconventional fossil fuels, nuclear power, and renewable resources. Addresses energy use throughout history, the influence of energy on quality of life, the role it plays in political strategies and environmental quality, how it shapes our neighborhoods and cities, its contribution to our personal comfort and national security, and how its importance is reflected in the worlds of business and the humanities. Its dual role is as a stand-alone introduction to energy, and as a first step to more advanced studies of energy in the natural, technical, and social sciences.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability                 | School of Sustainability                    | 3     | SB & G          | Credit is allowed for only GCU or SOS 171   |

| SOS     | 182         | Water Planet   | Overview of the processes that control water supply to natural ecosystems and human civilizations. Part I introduces the basic science that helps us understand the water planet, including the hydrologic cycle, glaciers and ice; rivers, oceans, and natural hazards associated with water such as flooding, landsliding and tsunamis. Part II covers some of the management and resource allocation topics that face humanity today, including droughts, groundwater contamination, impacts on fisheries, conflicts over water, patterns of water use, and effects of global climate change on future water supplies. Uses water issues facing Arizona and California as examples.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability                 | School of Sustainability                    | 4     | SQ              | Credit is allowed for only GLG 108 or SOS 182   |

| SOS     | 211         | Calculus and Probability for the Life and Social Sciences     | Introduces two of the most important and useful mathematical frameworks used to study natural and social phenomena: probability and calculus. Probability is used to describe an attitude of mind toward some proposition whose truth is not certain. Calculus is the branch of mathematics used to study the behavior and dynamics of functions: calculus is the mathematical study of change. Students gain the basic competence needed for applying probability and calculus when thinking about and research problems in sustainability. Focuses on and discusses applications, the meaning of important concepts, the origins of the rules of derivation and integration, and logic behind why the methods work. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     | MA              | Prerequisite(s): AML 100 or SOS 101 with C or better   |
| SOS     | 212         | Systems, Dynamics and Sustainability                          | Introduces the evaluation and construction of mathematical models used in the life and social sciences. Includes the basic steps in developing a model, analyzing it, and testing it with actual data. Covers the first steps concerning how to use formal mathematical techniques including developing equation-based relationships, plotting graphs, linear regression, and solving equations using computer software.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): SOS 211   |
| SOS     | 220         | Systems Thinking  | Introduces systems thinking and complexity science, with an emphasis on analytical relevance for thinking about a myriad of issues involved in sustainability. Hones students' abilities to read critically, articulate their views clearly, and think about the many systems that shape their lives.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): PUP 190 or SOS 111 with C or better; SOS 110 with C or better   |
| SOS     | 230         | Professional Skills in Sustainability                         | Builds interpersonal competence, which is a key competence in sustainability. Students work on a small hands-on sustainability project in order to practice professional skills in four domains: teamwork, project management, self-directed and continuous learning, and stakeholder engagement. Students learn how to effectively collaborate in teams, use project management tools to achieve quality products in time, innovate their ways of learning, and create productive dialogue with stakeholders.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): PUP 190 or SOS 111 with C or better; SOS 110 with C or better   |
| SOS     | 231         | Careers in Sustainability                                     | Aids in career exploration and development for School of Sustainability majors. Explores values, motivations and career options. Students learn how to approach the job search and how to communicate sustainability to employers; also how to prepare a quality résumé, cover letter, and gain a better understanding of the benefits of networking.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BA or BS Sustainability major; PUP 190 or SOS 111 with C or better; SOS 110 with C or better; minimum 45 hours  |
| SOS     | 232         | Professional Skills in Sustainability Practice                | Students learn how to effectively and compassionately communicate, engage in collaborative teamwork, use project management tools to achieve quality products on time, innovate their ways of self-directed and continuous learning, engage with stakeholders on solutions, and ensure mindful self-care. Students work on a sustainability project, practicing this set of professional skills in a real-world context.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 105, or 107 with C or better; PUP 190 or SOS 111 with C or better; SOS 110 with C or better  |

| SOS     | 300         | Advanced Concepts and Integrated Approaches in Sustainability | Integrates disciplinary contributions to sustainability, teaches advanced concepts in sustainability, and explores methods for identifying sustainability challenges and generating solutions. Focuses on diversity of sustainability research, and integrates specialized approaches in sustainability. Advanced concepts in sustainability, including systems-thinking, complexity, nonlinearity, cascading effects, coupled natural-human systems, governance, future thinking, unintended consequences, normative concerns, transformation, power, participation, and equity.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Sustainability minor; SOS 100, 110, 111 or PUP 190 with C or better; 6 hours from two identified themes with C or better OR specified majors with Sustainability/Sustainable Tourism concentrations |
| SOS     | 301         | Sustainable Communities                                       | Analyzes community as concept and as an organizing system for promoting sustainability.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Pre- or corequisite(s): PRM 120 or NLM 160 with C or better if completed; Credit is allowed for only CRD, NLM, PRM, SOS or TDM 301   |
| SOS     | 309         | History and Philosophy of Sustainability                      | Examines sustainability issues in a broadly interdisciplinary way, but with a special emphasis on humanities perspectives, focusing on human ideas, values and institutions as they have evolved over time.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102 or 105 or 108 with C or better; minimum 25 hours; Credit is allowed for only HST 308 or PHI 322 or SOS 309 or BIO/HST/PHI/SOS 394 (History & Philosophy of Sustainability)                  |
| SOS     | 310         | Equity, Justice and Sustainability                            | Introduces the "social justice" aspects of sustainability science and practice. Sustainability problems are a special class of problems arising from a complex set of issues spread across time, space and institutional scales. These problems can threaten underlying social, economic and ecological systems which are highly intertwined and interdependent. Explore these issues through study of both theory and practice.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): PUP 190 or SOS 111 with C or better; SOS 110 with C or better   |

| SOS     | 328         | Sustainability and Enterprise                                     | Examines the evolving interface between sustainability and human enterprise. Explores and reviews key fundamental concepts in the sustainability arena, including economic and scientific drivers and select historical and structural aspects that create the current context for the enterprise and sustainability interface found today. Delves into more specific case studies of attempts by current businesses to become greener and more sustainable, exploring challenges and opportunities that are commonly found as well as how decisions are often made in today's business settings and by whom. Explores alternative enterprise models and examples of businesses that are using the current context to redefine the sustainability and enterprise. Given the emergent nature of this effort, uses timely and real-world examples from current events where possible. Explores and applies an integrated approach to sustainability and enterprise. Readings include popular texts, original research articles and current events. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Sustainability or Business (Sustainability) major; SOS 110 and 111 (or PUP 190) with C or better; OR Non-Sustainability major with 2 courses: SOS 100, 110, 111 (PUP 190), SOS 300 with C or better   |
| SOS     | 330         | Sustaining the Commons  | Equips students with tools to analyze the conditions in which communities can be successful in managing their common resources such as forest, water and clean air. Students learn the institutional analysis and development framework to evaluate such collective action problems. Applies this approach of analysis to various sustainability topics from irrigation systems and fisheries to climate change and energy systems in urban environments.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     | L               | Prerequisite(s): SOS 110; SOS 111; Credit is allowed for only SOS 330 or SOS 394 (Sustaining the Commons)  |

Data and ideas from a spectrum of disciplines are employed to examine, analyze, and criticize the prospects for redressing global inequalities in a sustainable manner.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, 105 or 107 with C or better; minimum of 45 hours; Credit is allowed for ASB 371, ASB 394 (Inequality and Sustainability), SOS 371 or SOS 394 (Inequality and Sustainability)   |
| SOS     | 372         | Earth Science in Arizona and the Southwest                        | Place-based application of geology and allied Earth system sciences to explore and interpret the landscapes, rocks, geologic history, climate, resources, and natural hazards of Arizona and the Southwest. Integrates case studies of the interactions of Southwest cultures and societies (past and present) with Earth systems, and inquiry into the future sustainability of Southwestern communities and lifeways.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101 (or ENG 105 or 107) with C or better; GLG 101 (or GLG 102 or 110 or GPH 111 or SES 121); MAT 117 or higher; Credit is allowed for only GLG 301 or GLG 394 (Earth Sci in AZ & SW) or SOS 372   |
| SOS     | 373         | Minerals, Energy, and Society                                     | Studies the science and technology of the minerals and energy industries, how these industries interact with society, and how these interactions may change in the future.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 101, ENG 105 or ENG 107 with C or better; GLG 101, GLG 102 or GLG 110 or GPH 111 or SES 121 or Junior standing; Credit is allowed for only GLG 304, GLG 394 (Minerals, Energy & Society) or SOS 373                                       |
| SOS     | 374         | Earth's Critical Zone   | The Earth's near surface environment (the "critical zone") supports most life and is the dynamic interface between the solid Earth and its fluid envelopes where much of the geologic record is produced. We now know that we face rapid climate change and the consequences of changes in land use, water resources, and ecosystems. Critical to planning a response to, or mitigation of, environmental change is understanding how the Earth surface works. Focuses on how changes to the environment manifest themselves in the critical zone--in the form and function of the Earth's surface (landforms, water resources, soils, ecosystems). Offers a quantitative introduction to the form and function of the processes impacting the Earth's critical zone to build an understanding of the interactions of physical, chemical and biotic processes in shaping the surface and determining fluid, solute and sediment fluxes.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisites with C or better: GLG 101 & 103 or SES 121 & 123; MAT 170 or 171 or 210 or 251 or 265 or 270; PHY 101 or 111 or 121 or 150 or CHM 101 or 107 or 113 or 114 or BIO 100 or 181 or 182 or 281 or 282. | SOS     | 375         | Humans and the Environment: What's the Connection?  | How do diverse human groups across global ecosystems (desert, tropics, arctic, alpine, urban) interact with and adapt to their environments and how are these relationships changing in response to globalization, climate change and other social, historical and political-economic drivers? Cultures situated in landscapes are the basis for an incredible global diversity of worldviews and behaviors that in turn affect how humans experience and "use" their environments. This course will provide an introduction to current and benchmark literature and methods in environmental and ecological anthropology that address people-environment interactions.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     | (L or SB) & G   | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only ASB 375 or SOS 375 or ASB 394 (People: Environment Connections in Anthropology) or ASB 494 (Ecological and Environmental Anthropology)  |
| SOS     | 380         | Entrepreneurship for American Indian Sustainability | Concentrates on developing a product or service idea, creating an entrepreneurial model and plan to implement the product or service in the context of an AI sustainable venture (profit and nonprofit). Begins with a review of established AI context with additional focus on tribal economic development throughout the course. The innovation process executed during the semester and the resulting product/service ideas and choices. Students are also encouraged to embark on new venture ideas as well. Students are then introduced to all aspects of venture (profit and non-profit) and entrepreneurial model creation, including strategy, product/service development planning, marketing, operations, alliances, management, finance and investment. In parallel, teams continue refinement and, where possible, further prototyping of the idea they chose from the previous semester and/or creation of new high-impact, high-potential ideas.  | N                 | LEL               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only AIS 385 or AIS 394 (Entrepreneurship for American Indian Sustainability) or SOS 380  |

| SOS     | 429         | Human Impacts on Ecosystem Functioning              | Explores our current understanding of how humans are impacting the functioning of ecosystems and how changes in ecosystems would affect provisioning of ecosystem services and ultimately human well-being. The two primary drivers of ecosystem change are growth of the human population and increased consumption per capita. These drivers affect the Earth's cycles of carbon, nitrogen and water, as well as regional and global-scale changes in biodiversity and climate. Includes an in-depth discussion of scenarios for the next 50 and 100 years, which articulate costs and benefits of alternative development pathways in terms of climate change, food production, clean water and biodiversity. Scenarios of change in biodiversity lead to the topic of the consequences of biodiversity change for the functioning of ecosystems from the point of view of their productivity and stability. Human activities have disrupted several biogeochemical cycles including nitrogen and carbon cycles. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): BIO 320 (or SOS 326); Credit is allowed for only BIO 429, BIO 528, SOS 429, SOS 528, or SOS 494/598 (Human Impacts on Ecosystem Functioning), or BIO 494/598 (Human Impacts on Ecosystem Functioning)                              |

| SOS     | 435         | U.S. Energy: Pathways to Sustainability           | Organized around four mores of energy and environmental policy: energy supply, technology for efficiency, environmental sustainability and infrastructure. Also incorporates the wider context of energy and the environment in the society in which we live, taking into account our historic past and future potential life experience with energy availability and use. Through critical examination and analysis of these mores, students apply knowledge to the creation of a comprehensive energy and environmental policy plan that addresses past conditions, present states and future possibilities.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Credit is allowed for only SOS 435 or SOS 494 (Energy and Environmental Policy) or SOS 494 (US Energy: Pathways to Sustainability) or SOS 555 or SOS 594 (Energy & Environmental Policy)  |
| SOS     | 441         | Mathematical Concepts and Tools in Sustainability | Explores various mathematical analysis and models pertinent to sustainability science drawn from both social and natural sciences and introduced in a problem-based context. Demonstrates basic concepts from game theory such as pure-strategy and mixed-strategy Nash equilibriums in such classic games as prisoner's dilemma, hawk-dove, coordination. Explores the evolutionary dynamics of these games through the replicator equations. Studies important concepts of stability and regime shift for selected problems. Also discusses some basic solution concepts in cooperative game theory (depending on interest and time).   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s) with C or better: AML 253, or SOS 210(or SOS 294 Intro to Math Tools & Modeling). | SOS     | 456         | Human Rights and Sustainability                   | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     | (L or SB) & G   | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only JUS 456 or JUS 497 (Seminar in Human Rights) or SOC 455 or SOS 456   |
| SOS     | 463         | Political Ecology of the Border                   | Examines the political ecology of the human-environment relationship in Mexico and on the U.S.-Mexican border. Through case studies, students learn about the most pressing environmental issues facing human populations and their communities on both sides of the U.S.-Mexican border and the various ways in which these issues are dealt with.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     | SB & G          | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only ASB 463 or SOS 463 or TCL 443   |

| SOS     | 467         | Art and Ecology                                   | Designed for students with advanced independent studio art practices or sustainability studies students who have an interest in the way that their lives and practices engage environments. Through readings, slide presentations, discussions, guest visits, hands-on activities and screenings, explores the work of many contemporary ecological artists engaging with environments and environmental issues from a multitude of angles. Artists engage land remediation, agriculture, socio-ecological justice, sustainable materials, landscape design and much more. As cultural workers must be informed, the course content addresses some basic literacy with regard to environmental concerns and shares examples of realized accessible sustainable solutions. In addition to learning about ecologies and artists, students complete three art or research projects, inspired by assignments.   | N                 | STO               | Y               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only ART 467 or ART 494 (Art and Ecology) or ART 567 or ART 598 (Art and Ecology) or SOS 467 or SOS 494 (Art and Ecology) or SOS 567 or SOS 598 (Art and Ecology)                                  |

| SOS     | 503         | Operationalizing Sustainability                  | Sustainability is a means to addressing the significant physical, statutory, and regulatory requirements that affect and can encumber the Army's ability to train Soldiers at ranges and maneuver areas across the United States. With hundreds of imperiled species proposed for federal protection in the next few years, threatened and endangered species and sensitive habitat will continue to be a concern. Participants in Operationalizing Sustainability will explore how innovative training practices, improved land and natural resource management practices, and enhanced community relationships can ensure continued access to the land and water assets needed to maintain readiness and can help to 'win hearts and minds.' Proactive approaches to promoting well-being for soldiers, families, civilians, neighbors, and communities, both at installations and downrange, are stressed.     | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Sustainability Leadership certificate student; SOS 501; SOS 502   |
| SOS     | 504         | Energy and the Built Environment                 | Provides practical approaches to applying sustainability principles and practices to public works activities, housing, facilities operations and management, military construction, master planning, and energy management. Presents approaches to implement high-performance sustainable building design, construction, operation and management, maintenance, and deconstruction. Also covers cost-effective, innovative strategies, such as highly reflective and vegetated roofs, to minimize consumption of energy, water, and materials.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Sustainability Leadership certificate student; SOS 501; SOS 502   |
| SOS     | 505         | Sustainable Military Acquisition and Logistics   | Sustainable Military Acquisition and Logistics provides practical approaches to applying sustainability principles and practices to all areas of procurement, acquisition, and logistics. Through weapon systems acquisition or procurement of installation goods and services, the Army hopes to drive innovation and promote sustainability while reducing costs. The inclusions of energy and resource efficiency and other sustainability criteria in acquisition and procurement decisions can reduce long-term operation and maintenance costs, conserve resources, and continue to expand innovation throughout the supply chain. This course introduces the application of sustainability principles to procurement and acquisition, transportation, and materiel. The use of life cycle analysis and multicriteria assessment for all 10 classes of supply is also featured significantly in the course. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Sustainability Leadership certificate student; SOS 501; SOS 502   |
| SOS     | 510         | Perspectives on Sustainability                   | University-wide course covering basic perspectives on sustainability. Uses case studies; faculty and students from engineering, architecture, social sciences, and natural sciences exchange ideas on the major challenges faced in forming a sustainable future at the local, national, and global levels.   | N                 | SEM               | Y               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): School of Sustainability graduate students  |
| SOS     | 511         | Advanced Sustainability Problem Solving          | Conveys advanced procedures of how to identify and analyze sustainability problems and how to develop solution visions and strategies that can solve and mitigate sustainability problems. Introduces and facilitates training in how to use an integrated framework for sustainability problem solving, which is applicable to all sustainability-related professions. Prepares students for their applied projects on sustainability solutions.   | N                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): School of Sustainability graduate students  |
| SOS     | 512         | Environmental and Resource Economics             | Microeconomic theory applied to problems of the environment and natural resources, principles of nonmarket valuation of the environment, market failures in the provision of environmental goods and services, dynamic management of natural capital stocks, the economics of sustainable development.  | N                 | SEM               | Y               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| SOS     | 517         | Sustainability and Enterprise                                      | Examines the evolving interface between sustainability and human enterprise. Explores and reviews key fundamental concepts in the sustainability arena, including economic and scientific drivers and select historical and structural aspects that create the current context for the enterprise and sustainability interface found today.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only SOS 517 or SOS 591 (Sustainability and Enterprise)   |
| SOS     | 518         | Uncertainty and Decision Making                                    | Knowledge is always incomplete, yet decisions must be made. Explores uncertainty and its relation to decision making, with a particular focus on the ways that science and science-derived information is applied with the intent of improving decisions. Explores the many meanings and origins of uncertainty, using theoretical and case-based approaches. A central theme is the relation among uncertainty, scientific prediction, and decision making, especially in politically charged issues, for example as related to management of the environment. Ultimately understands how effective decisions can be made in the face of inevitable uncertainties and contested knowledge.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ASB 517 or BIO 517 or BIO 591 (Uncertainty & Decision Making) or HSD 517 or POS 527 or SOS 518   |
| SOS     | 520         | Research Design and Methods for Sustainability                     | Provides skills and knowledge that help students design their own research and place it in the context of other disciplines or bodies of work. Not a "methods" class because no specific method is taught in-depth. Instead, it is an initial introduction to the research design process and is intended as a platform through which students develop the skills to appreciate and contextualize the approaches taken (and methods used) by others, and during which they can identify the types of specific training they require as they define their own research.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Pre- or corequisite(s): SOS 510; Credit is allowed for only SOS 520 or SOS 598 (Intro Design/Mthds)   |
| SOS     | 521         | Landscape Ecology  | Discusses how landscape heterogeneity interacts with ecological processes, and implications for biodiversity conservation, resource management, and landscape and urban planning.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only BIO 421 or BIO 521 or SOS 421 or SOS 521   |
| SOS     | 522         | Qualitative Methods for Sustainability Problems                    | Theory and application of qualitative methods to sustainability research and practice. Students define and frame a sustainability problem and apply a range of qualitative methods to it, articulate the strengths and weaknesses of these methods, and have a framework for assessing the appropriate use and evaluation of qualitative methods.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only SOS 522 or SOS 591 (Qualitative Methods for Sustainability Problems)   |
| SOS     | 525         | Social-Ecological-Technical Systems (SETS): Domains and interfaces | Guide students in developing an integrated approach and framework for thinking about complex systems in a sustainability context. Presents overviews of content, theories and methods from each of the SETS domains (Social, Ecological and Technical Systems); primarily focuses on how to bring these domains together. Explores the SETS interfaces (intersections) from an integrated perspective and equips students to make those linkages in their research and in subsequent elective courses. Each semester students use a sustainability problem or theme to explore the concepts presented in the course.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| SOS     | 527         | Environmental Ethics and Policy Goals                              | Advanced seminar in applied environmental ethics, focusing on the most influential and policy-relevant approaches in the field of environmental ethics. Core topics include the historical and philosophical foundations of alternative understandings of environmental responsibility; the debate over utility and preservation in environmental policy argument; and the interplay of ethical principles, scientific knowledge and societal priorities in environmental decision making. Consideration of the ethical and value dimensions of biodiversity conservation, wilderness protection, environmental valuation, environmental activism, climate change and sustainability, among other challenges.   | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only BIO 527 or SOS 527 or BIO 591 (Environ Ethics & Policy Goals)  |
| SOS     | 528         | Human Impacts on Ecosystem Functioning                             | Explores our current understanding of how humans are impacting the functioning of ecosystems and how changes in ecosystems would affect provisioning of ecosystem services and ultimately human well-being. The two primary drivers of ecosystem change are growth of the human population and increased consumption per capita. These drivers affect the Earth's cycles of carbon, nitrogen and water, as well as regional and global-scale changes in biodiversity and climate. Includes an in-depth discussion of scenarios for the next 50 and 100 years, which articulate costs and benefits of alternative development pathways in terms of climate change, food production, clean water and biodiversity. Scenarios of change in biodiversity lead to the topic of the consequences of biodiversity change for the functioning of ecosystems from the point of view of their productivity and stability. Human activities have disrupted several biogeochemical cycles including nitrogen and carbon cycles. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Degree- or Nondegree-seeking graduate; Credit is allowed for only BIO 429, BIO 528, SOS 429, SOS 528, or SOS 494/598 (Human Impacts on Ecosystem Functioning), or BIO 494/598 (Human Impacts on Ecosystem Functioning) |

| SOS     | 545         | Organizations, Sustainability & Public Policy            | Sustainability concerns are fast becoming a strategic issue for organizations in all sectors. In the last ten years, numerous organizations have completely redefined their business strategies in line with principles of sustainability by balancing the requirements for economic development, environmental quality and social justice, and governments worldwide are developing programs and policies that encourage these activities. Explores the connections between organization strategy--especially within the private sector, sustainability and public policy. Through a combination of practical cases, readings and lectures, class sessions engage students in discussions aimed at developing sustainability assessment models. Additionally, students apply new strategy tools that incorporate principles of proactive environmental management and social responsibility designed to enhance the public good.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate; Credit is allowed for only PAF or SOS 545   |
| SOS     | 546         | Life Cycle Assessment for Civil Systems                  | Covers fundamental and advanced concepts of the life cycle assessment framework exploring products, services, activities and infrastructure systems. Examines key concepts for system boundary selection, functional unit selection, inventorying, impact assessment and interpretation stages with a focus on energy and environmental assessment. Advanced concepts include allocation of effects, problem formulation for assessing footprints versus decisions or policies, and assessment of infrastructure interdependencies and supply chains. Exposes tools and data sources and presents approaches for evaluation of sensitivity and uncertainty of results. Encourages students with broad sustainability interests to enroll and explore how life cycle assessment can aid their work by shifting their views from direct to cradle-to-grave effects.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | SOS     | 547         | Urban Infrastructure Anatomy and Sustainable Development | Understanding how built environment infrastructure systems interact with ecosystem services is critical for policies and decisions directing urban sustainability. Brings together students from several disciplines to develop a semester-long research project focused on a particular urban sustainability problem in Phoenix. During the semester, students are given background on how infrastructure systems work and are interdependent, and explore tools and methods for urban sustainability assessment with peers from several disciplines. As a class, students evaluate a particular urban sustainability problem for Phoenix, interact with local policy and decision makers in developing solutions, and present their findings at the end of the semester to the ASU community.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree-or nondegree-seeking graduate. | SOS     | 553         | Changing Human-Nature Relationships                      | Explores key concepts in Western and non-Western thinking now intersecting in the Anthropocene to influence human interactions with and descriptions of Nature. Humans may protect Nature, but simultaneously use/overuse resources and drive change in social-ecological systems. Examines evolving assumptions about Nature, values/world views, progress, change, uncertainty, rationality, knowledge, tradeoffs and control/management, using a range of theoretical lenses (e.g., environmental/ecological/historical anthropology, culture, geography, ecology, economics, institutions, economic development, complex systems and sustainability science). Also studies a set of iconic Human-Environmental challenges and examines how theories and assumptions explain behaviors and human, ecological and policy outcomes. In turn, focuses on lessons that emerge for interdisciplinary scholarship. Encourages students to apply methods, concepts and theories to their evolving research questions. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ASB 530 or SOS 553   |

Also incorporates the wider context of energy and the environment in the society in which we live, taking into account our historic past and future potential life experience with energy availability and use. Through critical examination and analysis of these mores, students apply knowledge to the creation of a comprehensive energy and environmental policy plan that addresses past conditions, present states and future possibilities.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | SOS     | 559         | Global Sustainability Science Perspectives Seminar                   | Seminar fulfills four functions: (1) students get familiar with sustainability research areas and faculty across ASU, based on the collective interest of the GSS cohort; (2) students receive training on scientific writing; (3) students have the opportunity to participate in a community of sustainability students that supports exchange, bonding and peer-teaching; and (4) students reflect on and provide feedback on the GSS program and their academic development, as well as receive feedback on their pathway through the program and beyond (career opportunities).  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 1     |                 | Prerequisite(s): SOS 557   |
| SOS     | 567         | Art and Ecology  | Designed for students with advanced independent studio art practices or sustainability studies students who have an interest in the way that their lives and practices engage environments. Through readings, slide presentations, discussions, guest visits, hands-on activities and screenings, explores the work of many contemporary ecological artists engaging with environments and environmental issues from a multitude of angles. Artists engage land remediation, agriculture, socio-ecological justice, sustainable materials, landscape design and much more. As cultural workers must be informed, the course content addresses some basic literacy with regard to environmental concerns and shares examples of realized accessible sustainable solutions. In addition to learning about ecologies and artists, students complete three art or research projects, inspired by assignments. | N                 | STO               | Y               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ART 467 or ART 494 (Art and Ecology) or ART 567 or ART 598 (Art and Ecology) or SOS 467 or SOS 494 (Art and Ecology) or SOS 567 or SOS 598 (Art and Ecology)Pre-req for SOS 567 |
| SOS     | 570         | Fundamentals of CAS Science  | Many phenomena of critical relevance to human society are dynamic systems that change over individual and evolutionary time scales, and are highly interactive, both within and between systems. That is, they are complex adaptive systems (CAS), and thus share isomorphic properties like near-decomposability, hierarchical organization, scale-free networks, self-organized criticality, and emergence. Fundamentals of CAS science explores the diverse, interdisciplinary applications of a complex adaptive systems across the social, behavioral, and life sciences.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only ASM, BIO, or SOS 570  |
| SOS     | 571         | Sustainable Energy I: Technologies and Systems                       | Provides a primer on the scientific, technological and social aspects of energy. Three core modules: (1) primer on the physics of energy, (2) a review of power systems and electricity generation technologies, and (3) a review of transportation systems and fuel/vehicle technologies. Although the class focuses on energy technology, it also incorporates discussions of the human dimensions of energy systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| SOS     | 572         | Sustainable Energy II: Transitions                                   | Follows the thread of energy transitions through every aspect of our lives. Stresses the technological, economic, social and political contexts of energy transitions. Addresses energy use throughout history, the influence of energy on quality of life, how energy use has influenced the process of urbanization, and how considerations of access to and control of energy sources shapes geopolitical strategies. Draws on insights garnered by research in human ecology, anthropology, archaeology, economics, historiography, natural science and engineering as to the role energy use, and technological change involving the use of technology, has played in human development.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): SOS 571   |

Provides a basis for understanding the intersection of social, political, cultural, economic and technical dynamics of existing and emerging energy system possibilities, emphasizing the roles of human decision making as well as new scientific and technological developments. Emphasizes the development of sophisticated competency in several broad thematic capacities that are required to understand, engage with and provide thought leadership in the ongoing challenge of creating and cultivating sustainable energy systems.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): SOS 572   |
| SOS     | 574         | Sustainable Energy Analytics in Context                              | Addresses the primary metrics, data sources and methodologies used to measure sustainable energy, including how they are used to track progress toward sustainability goals and shape public policies. Covers the metrics for comparing the cost, efficiency, social equity and environmental impacts of various energy sources, and issues pertaining to product life cycle evaluation. These metrics provide the foundation for assessing the relative merits of various energy and production options based a variety of possible criteria. In addition to imparting factual knowledge for quantitatively evaluating a multiplicity of energy sources and systems and their impact on the environment, builds skills in research, comparative analysis and critical thinking that catalyze a lifetime of engagement with the complex and evolving issues surrounding sustainability.                   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability | School of Sustainability | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): SOS 571   |

| SOS     | 656         | Human Rights and Sustainability | Addresses the connections between human rights and environmental sustainability. Legal and scholarly approaches linking these areas present new perspectives for addressing some of the greatest challenges of our time, given the important resource dimensions of economic and social rights and the human dimensions of sustainability. Yet human rights demands and environmental concerns are not always in harmony. Explores these tensions and opportunities by examining three substantive areas: urban ecology and human rights, the human right to food, and the human rights implications of extractive industries such as oil and mining. Following an introduction to the key concepts of human rights and sustainability, explores the substantive areas through theoretical and empirical readings on each; grassroots accounts of struggles over environment-related human rights; and selections from literature and film that illustrate the environmental justice issues at stake. | N                 | SEM               | N               | GNA           | School of Sustainability                 | School of Sustainability                         | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate. | SPA     | 431         | Prose of Golden Age   | Focuses on a number of books of canonical prose of 16th- and 17th-century Spain. Spanish Golden Age prose is considered one of the most important bodies of literature both in the Spanish-speaking world and in early modern studies. An astonishing number of works of fiction and nonfiction were written in the period, inspiring artists and intellectuals all over Europe. All readings are representative of genres that, in addition to enjoying popularity in Spain, were extensively translated into other languages throughout Europe. Through a wide readership, Carcel de Amor, el Lazarillo, La Celestina, El Abencerraje, the Novelas ejemplares, and Desenganos amorosos, influenced the system of literary genres. They established a model for successful genres such as the sentimental novel, the picaresque and the Moorish novel, and promoted the reacceptance of the Italian novella in Spain. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OP6           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures     | 3     | L or HU         | Prerequisite(s): SPA 325   |

| SPA     | 459         | Latin American Jewish Culture   | Focuses on forms of cultural production in Latin America marked by or under the aegis of Jewish diasporic identity from the late nineteenth century to the present. While Jewish immigrants and Latin Americans of Jewish descent may be found in all Latin American societies, cultural production is found concentrated in countries like Argentina, Brazil, Mexico and Chile. Investigates essentially cultural versions of a sociohistorical consciousness, and ranges across a broad spectrum of Latin American Jewish texts in an investigation of what forms of production have emerged to represent this important immigrant component of Latin American national societies. Examines novels and other literary works, along with photography and films, and looks at theme, motifs, characters that can be identified with what might be called a Jewish consciousness or Jewish sensitivity.                 | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of International Letters and Cultures     | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only JST 459 or JST 494 (Jewish Latin American Culture) or SLC 459 or SLC 498 (Jewish Latin American Culture) or SPA 459 or SPA 498 (Jewish Latin American Culture) |

| SPE     | 506         | Advanced Methods Assessment, Curriculum Planning and Instructional Strategies in Moderate/Severe | Prepares teachers with the skills to effectively work with children and young adults with moderate to severe/profound disabilities (i.e., intensive support needs). Topics focus on assessment, curriculum planning and instructional strategies using evidence-based practices. Activities include direct observation and assessment techniques in inclusive environments; designing curriculum within multiple contexts with a focus on access to the general education in inclusive environments; selecting and implementing behavioral, communicative and instructional strategies; collaborative practices; and supporting across the educational lifespan of students. Students participate in class sessions two hours per week and engage in field experiences 6 to 8 hours per week in educational environments with students with intensive support needs. Emphasizes current research-based evidence to support students with intensive support needs. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | MaryLouFulton Teachers College | Educational Leadership & Innovation, Division | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| SPE     | 507         | Augmentative and Alternative Communication for Students with Intensive Support Needs             | Focuses on issues and strategies for teaching communication to individuals with intensive support needs (i.e., students with moderate to severe/profound disabilities such as intellectual disability, autism or multiple disabilities). This terminology is reflective of a support-based model of disability rather than a deficits-based model. Discusses specific assessment and intervention strategies as they relate to augmentative and alternative communication systems.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | MaryLouFulton Teachers College | Educational Leadership & Innovation, Division | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| SPE     | 508         | Educational Foundations of Serving Students with Severe Disabilities                             | Provides an overview of the etiological nature of individuals with moderate to severe disabilities (intellectual disabilities, multiple disabilities, sensory impairment and physical disabilities); characteristics of this population; and the associated support needs across the lifespan. Topics focus on the historical and legal contexts that influence services for this population; supports-based assessment and instruction; and key issues related to self-determination, person-centered planning in school contexts for children, youth and adults with moderate to severe disabilities.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | MaryLouFulton Teachers College | Educational Leadership & Innovation, Division | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| SPE     | 509         | Individualized Positive Behavior Supports for Students with Intensive Support Needs              | Knowledge and skills to assess, implement and evaluate positive behavior supports for students with intensive support needs (moderate to severe/profound intellectual disability, autism spectrum disorder, multiple disabilities), terminology reflective of a support-based model of disability rather than a deficits-based model. Students learn and apply the foundations of positive behavior supports, understanding the function of behavior and developing replacement behaviors, and implementing plans from a person-centered perspective that reflects the cultural needs of individuals and their families while drawing on interdisciplinary team members' expertise.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | MaryLouFulton Teachers College | Educational Leadership & Innovation, Division | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| SPE     | 510         | Assistive Technology Supports for Students with Intensive Support Needs                          | Focuses on specialized health care needs, policies and procedures for working with students with intensive support needs (i.e., students with moderate to severe/profound disabilities such as intellectual disability, autism or multiple disabilities). This terminology is reflective of a support-based model of disability rather than a deficits-based model. Provides an overview of methods for accommodating students including task or environmental modifications, assistive technology and adaptive equipment options.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | MaryLouFulton Teachers College | Educational Leadership & Innovation, Division | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| SST     | 510         | Social and Cultural Pedagogy: Theoretical and Practical Issues | Engages students with the academic literature and scholarly debates on social and cultural pedagogy, reviews practical lessons from the field, and provides an overview of different areas of intervention and professional practice. Considers the historical, local, and international dimensions of social and cultural pedagogy, illustrating them with selected case studies. Encourages the study of social and cultural pedagogy using a critical and interdisciplinary perspective.  | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| SST     | 520         | Learning Technologies in Native Education                      | As the Internet and digital devices become more accessible in Indian country, educators are increasingly developing digital systems for formal and informal learning environments. From distance learning systems to digital language learning and apps for informal learning, this course reviews types of educational technologies in different American Indian and Indigenous educational settings, highlighting the relationship among technical affordances, pedagogical approaches, and social impacts. Students (1) understand how technical affordances shape learning in face-to-face and online environments; (2) describe the relationship between digital learning tools and curricular and programmatic objectives; and (3) describe and propose the basic limitations and possibilities of types of educational technologies for specific American Indian and Indigenous educational settings. | N                 | SEM               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student  |
| SST     | 530         | Culture and Education  | Examines the relationship between local cultures, local knowledge and education. Drawing from comparative and international education and paying particular attention to the world's most marginalized populations--Indigenous peoples. Additionally, explores historical trajectories of education, the global expansion of schooling, state and international education and language policies, as well as notions of local/Indigenous resistance, agency, response and educational innovation. Three major sections comprise the course: (1) patterns in education and language policy for historically underrepresented and underserved populations; (2) the role of families, communities and local and place-based pedagogies; and (3) alternative models of education toward social transformation.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only SST 530 or SST 591 (Culture and Education) |

| STP     | 501         | Theory of Statistics I: Distribution Theory 3 | Introduces rigorous probability theory, including distributions and expectations of random variables, transformations of random variables and order statistics, generating functions and basic limit concepts. Supplements the understanding of applied statistics with a firm grasp of the probabilistic underpinnings of theoretical statistics.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate student (degree seeking or nondegree seeking); Credit is allowed for only STP 501 or STP 598, Theory of Statistics I |
| STP     | 502         | Theory of Statistics II: Inference            | Presents techniques and basic results of mathematical statistics at a rigorous level. Develops the structure of statistical inference procedures, including the principles of data reduction, theory of estimation, confidence sets, hypothesis testing, and prediction for common parametric models.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): STP 501 with B- or better; Credit is allowed for only STP 502 or STP 598, Theory of Statistics II                             |
| STP     | 505         | Bayesian Statistics                           | Provides knowledge of Bayesian statistical methods. Covers the essential conceptual ideas for Bayesian analysis and discusses a variety of computational ideas that facilitate a Bayesian analysis in real-world applications. Assumes a mathematical and statistical maturity that is required for admission as a graduate student in statistics, including exposure to mathematical proof, linear algebra, multiple semesters of calculus, exposure to coding and a basic course in statistical concepts and methods.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only STP 505 or STP 598 (Bayesian Statistics)            |
| STP     | 526         | Theory of Statistical Linear Models           | Multinormal distribution, distribution of quadratic forms, full and nonfull rank models, generalized inverses, unbalanced data, variance components, and the large sample theory.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 527         | Statistical Large Sample Theory               | Types of convergence, central limit theorems, theory of maximum likelihood estimation, efficiency, robustness, influence functions, theory of bootstrap methods.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 530         | Applied Regression Analysis                   | Method of least squares, simple and multiple linear regression, polynomial regression, analysis of residuals, dummy variables, and model building.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 531         | Applied Analysis of Variance                  | Factorial designs, balanced and unbalanced data, fixed and random effects, randomized blocks, Latin squares, analysis of covariance, and multiple comparisons.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 532         | Applied Nonparametric Statistics              | One-sample test, tests of 2 or more related or independent samples, measures of correlation, and tests of trend and dependence.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

| STP     | 535         | Applied Sampling Methodology                  | Simple random, stratified, cluster sampling; variance estimation in complex surveys; nonparametric superpopulation approaches; nonresponse models; computational methods.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 540         | Computational Statistics                      | Presents computational tools for statistical inference and data analysis. Uses R software (the lingua franca of statistics) in a wide variety of examples. Emphasizes simulation of random variables, Monte Carlo experiments, evaluation of statistical models via cross-validation, construction of confidence intervals via bootstrap and hypothesis testing via permutations. Focuses on the numerical solution of least squares problems, on stepwise methods for model building and on estimation of regression models for high-dimensional data. Presents computational tools for maximum likelihood estimation with an emphasis on estimation of logistic regression models. Assumes a mathematical and statistical maturity that is required for admission as a graduate student in statistics, including mathematical proofs, linear algebra, multiple semesters of calculus, coding and statistical concepts. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only STP 540 or STP 598 (Computational Statistics)       |
| STP     | 581         | Statistical Consulting Clinic                 | Provides practical experience in the application of statistical theory and methods to problems from a wide variety of disciplines, exposing students to a diverse range of data types and clients. Develops nontechnical consulting skills, for example explaining statistical concepts to non-statisticians, writing reports, and making oral presentations.  | N                 | PRA               | Y               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s) with B or better: STP 530, 531; Credit is allowed for only STP 581 or 598 (Statistical Consulting)                             |
| STP     | 584         | Internship                                    | Structured practical experience following a contract or plan, supervised by faculty and practitioners.   | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 590         | Reading and Conference                        | Independent study in which a student meets regularly with a faculty member to discuss assignments. Course may include such assignments as intensive reading in a specialized area, writing a synthesis of literature on a specified topic, or writing a literature review of a topic.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| STP     | 591         | Seminar                                       | A small class emphasizing discussion, presentations by students, and written research papers.  | Y                 | LEC               | Y               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Mathematical and Statistical Sciences | 1-12  |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |

Neither a substitute for a catalog course nor a means of taking a catalog course on an individual basis. Requires application well in advance of regular registration with the student's advisor, the advisor's signature, and approval by both the instructor with whom the student will work and the chair of the department offering the course.   | Y                 | IND               | Y               | Z1            | Watts Col of Pub Ser & Com Sol | School of Social Work                   | 1-3   |                 | Pre-requisite: Bachelor of Social Work student   |
| TAM     | 511         | Accounting for Business Leaders                     | Focuses on external financial reporting to financial statement users outside the enterprise in both the United States and internationally. Topics include the history and role of financial accounting standards and financial statements in an economy, the preparation of financial accounting records and statements, and the financial accounting standards that govern the measurement of the underlying financial activity in an enterprise. Our study of the methods and measures mandated in financial accounting standards includes both U.S. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP) and International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS). Also covers an analysis of costs and cost behavior, which naturally leads to our being able to estimate future costs of products or activities, and then to cost planning at different levels of activity and cost inputs. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| TAM     | 521         | Financial Analysis and Management                   | Covers fundamental theories and practices of modern financial management within a market-oriented framework. Develops analytical skills for sound decision making and management. Emphasizes practical applications and equips learners with tools necessary for making investment and financing decisions and corporate valuation. Learning is achieved via problem solving, lectures, case analysis and discussions.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| TAM     | 530         | Data Analysis and Decision Making                   | Covers concepts, techniques and applications of commonly applied quantitative tools to large data sets that are now ubiquitous in everyday business. Understands and applies statistical techniques in order to improve the quality of managerial decisions. Starts with elementary statistics (measures of dispersion, location, random variables) and moves on to cover frequently used managerial models (Regression, ANOVA). Emphasizes the application of these techniques in a wide variety of data sets across industries--to that extent students use Excel (still the language of office math) and SPSS (more advanced software) to help pick the needles in the haystack. Once mere data is transformed into information, students evaluate its adequacy and glean insights for decision making.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| TAM     | 531         | Project and Operations Leadership                   | Strategies and challenges associated with leading projects and designing and improving service and manufacturing processes. Topics include project management, value-chain structures, supplier partnerships, logistics, risk management and value-stream mapping.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student   |
| TAM     | 534         | Entrepreneurship and Business Plan Development      | Emphasizes the development, process and tools required to create a business or acquire a business in an emerging market. Builds a business plan utilizing the business model canvass as well as the startup map. Also dives into term sheets, letters of intent.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TAM 511; TAM 541; TGM 505; TGM 540; TGM 551; TGM 579  |

| TAM     | 541         | Strategy in a Competitive World  | Focuses on choices that have an impact on the performance of the entire organization or business start up. Includes the problems faced by, and the decisions made by, executive leaders who have to balance the needs and expectations of stakeholders including customers, shareholders and employees with the requirements of local country practices and government regulations. Analyzes problems and decisions from the point of view of the founder, general manager or chief executive who has responsibility for the welfare of the entire organization. By focusing on policy decisions, concerns the choice of goals as well as the organization; management and deployment of scarce resources to pursue these goals within the context of an imperfect, changing and competitive world. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt           | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                     | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student                                       |
| TAM     | 542         | Leadership and Personal Leadership Development                                       | Personal leadership development is optimized by grounded reflection, self knowledge and continuous learning as we interact with others. Therefore, the personal development part of this course cultivates introspective and skill-building competencies that include conceptual grounding that is based in an experiential learning focus. Discusses self- and other-awareness and engages in group/team interaction, as well as conducts individual self-assessments and individual feedback. In addition to developing ourselves at the personal level, developing ourselves as leaders at the organizational level is imperative to sustainability of the company   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt           | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                     | Prerequisite(s): TGM 540   |

| TGM     | 204         | Principles of Marketing for Global Organizations     | Explores the ways in which global marketing strategies reflect a deep understanding of markets and create valuable offerings for customers globally. Broadly speaking, marketing strategy making is comprised of segmentation, targeting and positioning. Segmentation is the process by which we segregate a relatively heterogeneous mass market into relatively homogeneous market segments. Targeting is the process by which we analyze opportunities and identify those customers where our business has the greatest prospects for success. Positioning is the process of assembling the "total offering" (product, service, distribution and price) and communicating the benefits of this "total offering" to the members of our target market. Challenges students to think critically about global competition. As such, rote learning of terms and concepts is not sufficient to prepare students to manage a business in global markets. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Thunderbird School of Global Management undergraduate student  |
| TGM     | 268         | Intercultural Communication for Global Management    | In a dynamic and interactive format, this course presents a framework of models and skills for building communication performance in competitive global business settings. Assists in implementing strategies for mastering interpersonal encounters, including conflict resolution, in multicultural environments. Examines theories of communication (the basic concepts, principles and skills vital for understanding and improving communication across racial, ethnic and cultural differences). Places students in experiential situations in order to develop valuable global management skills. Using cases, self-assessment questionnaires, multicultural team exercises and simulations, equips the global manager with the ability to solve problems and take advantage of opportunities in a multicultural world. Explores in depth intercultural theories from the TGM three regional areas--China, Latin America and the Middle East.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): Thunderbird School of Global Management undergraduate student  |

| TGM     | 501         | Global Accounting                              | Focuses on two aspects of accounting: financial and managerial accounting. Financial accounting is about how outsiders view and evaluate an organization such as a business, a not-for-profit entity or a governmental operation. It focuses on how economic events are reflected in a firm's financial statements including a balance sheet, an income statement and a statement of cash flows. It also focuses on how financial statement information is used by various stakeholders such as shareholders, creditors, employees and customers in making decisions with regard to the firm, including credit decisions and/or valuing a firm's equity securities. Analysis and equity management accounting involves providing information, both financial and non-financial, to management and employees to aid in planning, organizing activities, and monitoring and controlling business performance. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student      |

| TGM     | 504         | Managing Organizations from a Global Perspective                  | Covers two key aspects of successfully managing an organization in a global environment. The first component covers the strategic direction of the organization, and the second component discusses how to harness the power of people in the organization to build teams and lead people to execute the strategy.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student                 |
| TGM     | 505         | States and Markets in a Global Economy                            | Global managers operate in an international economy that presents tremendous opportunities as well as risks. Globalization has dramatically expanded opportunities for international trade, investment and economic development. At the same time, global managers have to deal with the prospect of trade wars, international financial crises and intensified competition over markets and resources. In addition, international organizations such as the International Monetary Fund, World Trade Organization and World Bank Group have a direct impact on international business operations. Develops analytical tools for understanding the rapidly changing and dynamic global political. With these tools, managers are better prepared to anticipate the risks and take advantage of the opportunities they will encounter in the global economy. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 2-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student                 |
| TGM     | 506         | Communicating and Negotiating Across Cultures                     | This dynamic and interactive course provides managers with an effective framework for achieving their goals in global management settings. Assists students to prepare for and execute time-tested strategies for achieving communication competence with persons from different cultures. Also covers negotiating in the global context. Not only examines theories of culture and communications, but also places students in an experiential situation to gain valuable skills for overcoming obstacles in global management environments. Through use of cases, multicultural team exercises, student negotiation exercises and simulations, equips the global manager with tools to solve problems and take advantage of opportunities in a multicultural world.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student                 |

| TGM     | 541         | Competitive Strategy from a Global Perspective            | Focuses on choices that impact the performance of the entire organization. Examines central questions: Why are some industries and firms more profitable than others? How do firms create competitive advantage? How does the choice of strategy drive organizational performance? How do firms manage scarce resources in the pursuit of strategic objectives? How do firms create unique and sustainable industry positions?   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 1-2   |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student                 |
| TGM     | 545         | Advanced Perspectives on Global Leadership and Strategy   | Covers the entire spectrum of foreign venture management, ranging from the definition of multinationals, the rationale behind foreign expansion, the alternative modes of market entry, understanding foreign environments and cultures, and analyzing and designing global strategies. Continues with the concept of effective leadership within and across a variety of organizations and global contexts focusing on the demands of and competencies associated with excellent leadership and how leaders sense the need for and then manage organizational change.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 504, OR TGM 540 and 541  |
| TGM     | 546         | Regional Industrial Analysis                              | Builds on concepts introduced in competitive strategy, global strategy and regional business environment. Focuses on the analysis of the strategies adopted by competing players and their impact on the global strategies pursued by the parent organization in the context of regional industry dynamics. Covers a spectrum of topics ranging from industry cluster formation, country-specific advantage, industry versus industry ecosystem analysis, the government's role in industry and regional development including national innovation systems, demand and supply chains in regions, and emerging market challengers. Applies multiple decision-making tools and frameworks to understand the Information and Communications Technology (ICT) industry in Asia Pacific--the fastest growing region in the world. Tools and frameworks learned in this course are applicable to other regions and other industries. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 2-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 540 and 541 OR TGM 504   |
| TGM     | 547         | Leading Change and Transformation in a Global Environment | Increases understanding of the nature of organizational change (through conceptual frameworks, readings and discussions). Specifies skills needed for managing change. Enhances sensitivity to the contribution and consequences of the human element as related to change. Helps student's own capacity to "thrive on change."  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student; TGM 540        |
| TGM     | 548         | Global Strategy   | Focuses on how global firms create value. Covers topics ranging from country-specific competitive advantage and the notion of distance to alternative global strategy archetypes and sources of competitive advantage for emerging market multinationals. The approach applies multiple decision-making tools and frameworks to untangle the complexities of managing in a global corporation.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 504 OR TGM 540 and 541   |
| TGM     | 549         | Global Leadership   | Explores the concept of effective leadership within and across a variety of organizations and global contexts. Definitions of "leadership" and strategies for becoming an accomplished leader abound. Rather than attempt to narrowly focus our attention on definitions, leadership styles, and supposedly "definitive" theories of leadership, focuses on the demands of and competencies associated with excellent leadership. Most importantly, examines how leaders sense the need for and then manage organizational change. Given the increasingly complex world we live in and the ongoing and rapid rate of change, change management has become one of the most critical of leadership skills.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 1-3   |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student; TGM 504 or 540 |
| TGM     | 551         | Global Marketing Strategy                                 | Covers the major concepts involved in creating and sustaining customer value, analyzing the firm's macro environment, choosing whether or not to enter a foreign market, how to evaluate different foreign markets, the best methods for entering different markets, the market research design process, understanding consumer and B2B customer behavior, and ethical issues encountered in global marketing.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 2     |                 | Prerequisite(s): graduate Thunderbird School of Global Management student                 |

| TGM     | 553         | Global Customer Decision Making              | Both theoretical and applied, the backbone and foundation of the course draws heavily from behavioral economics, consumer psychology and consumer information processing. Equips students with a comprehensive understanding of how and why consumers make decisions the way they do in the market (B2C). Although consumers desire to make rational decisions that maximize their utility, in reality, more often than not, they tend to make irrational and suboptimal choices. Offers why such phenomena occur and how consumers can improve their quality of decision making. Offers a richer appreciation of the heuristics and decision-making rules that consumers use and biases that affect consumer decision making.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 503 OR TGM 551 and 552                    |
| TGM     | 554         | Global Marketing Research                    | Focuses on the use of marketing research techniques for competitive advantage in a global business context. Develops the necessary skills to plan a research project, collect data, analyze the data and report findings.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 503 OR TGM 551 and 552                    |
| TGM     | 555         | Global Product Development and Pricing       | Combines global product development (GPD) and global pricing (GP). GPD examines how an organization can identify, develop and manage products for global markets. Pays special attention to issues such as the product development cycle, innovation charter, barriers to product development and effectively organizing for product development. GP provides in-depth knowledge of the field of global pricing, covering the psychology, economics and tactics of pricing for a business enterprise, product or service. Better pricing knowledge usually converts to better bottom-line results. Students learn pricing theory and tactics as well as develop hands-on pricing skills, all aimed at improving profitability. These skills can be applied across the full range of professional contexts--as entrepreneurs, brand managers, business unit managers, management and M&A consultants. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 503 OR TGM 551 and 552                    |
| TGM     | 556         | Global Strategic Services Marketing          | Services have come to dominate our economy. Yet there remains a naive belief that service production, marketing and management is a simple adaptation of goods production, marketing and management. Unlike physical goods, services are co-produced with customers at a time, and in a place, of the customer's choosing. This co-production directly involves an organization's front-line employees. As a result, it is more difficult for services to be inventoried and checked for quality assurance. Provides a thorough understanding of the management and continuous improvement of service operations, including a thorough understanding of the role of customers in service operations such that service firms can design effective service experience so as to minimize service failure.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 503 OR TGM 551 and 552                    |
| TGM     | 558         | Global Data Analysis for Strategic Marketing | Provides an understanding of the key marketing issues through an examination of various marketing decisions. Course complements other marketing courses by adopting a more hands-on and practical approach to strategic market planning. A combination of lectures and discussions, analyses of cases, software demonstrations, and a simulation game facilitate understanding of the material. Requires a solid understanding of marketing planning, statistics and quantitative methods.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 503 OR TGM 551 and TGM 552                |
| TGM     | 559         | Global Brand Management                      | Provides a managerial orientation to the topic of global brand management. Prepares participants for a career either in the role of the "traditional brand manager" or in the role of a "manager with brand-related responsibilities." A major portion of the course is working on a global brand field project to develop a brand management/marketing plan for a brand and brand challenge of student (and team) choosing. Emphasizes the ethical dimension of global brand management; focuses on an individual brand ethics project.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): TGM 503 or 552                                |
| TGM     | 572         | Global Import Export Management              | Requires understanding theoretic, strategic, finance and practical business principles complicated by the differences in business practices, culture, laws and currency regulations of multiple countries and regions. Focuses on important pragmatic aspects of selling and acquiring goods and services to and from trading partners in foreign markets. Today's global marketplace, while dynamic with opportunity, contains rapidly changing physical, fiscal, technological and regulatory considerations for those who manage such activities. Important concepts to be learned include establishing strategic direction, identifying and managing a multitude of risks, protecting company assets, lowering the cost of finance, building winning business relationships and profitably expanding business into new markets.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | Thunderbird Sch of Global Mgmt | Thunderbird School of Global Management | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

Focuses on the period from pre-contact times to the Mexican American War.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| TSS     | 502         | Foundations of Transborder Studies   | Using a comparative and relational approach, explores various layers of development starting with economic structures and culture and their impact on various aspects of transborder society including politics, social organization, demography, and cultural practice. Focuses on the period from the Mexican American War to the recent past. Centers on comparative economic growth and development of Mexico and the United States, the impact of unequal development on the border region and its people, and the development of a transnational society in the U.S./Mexico borderlands.            | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| TSS     | 503         | Epistemologies and Transborder Thought   | Examines different approaches to the production and critique of knowledge relevant to transborder social, political, economic, cultural, and institutional structures and processes. The complexity of these structures and processes require transdisciplinary methods of inquiry that go beyond a single set of disciplinary assumptions. Explores the transdisciplinary articulation of theory and method, and considers the strengths and limitations of various approaches and critiques.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| TSS     | 504         | Tools for Transborder Research   | Focuses on the selection of methods appropriate for transborder research. Considers the pitfalls of conducting monodisciplinary research in a stratified, differentiated and multicausal world; the most robust methods used in various approaches; the main methodological obstacles to transdisciplinary research; and the challenges of using mixed methodology.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| TSS     | 505         | Theories and Methods of Migration, Health & Applied Social Policy in a Transborder Context | Divided conceptually in three broad analytical areas: (1) migration with an emphasis on demography, (2) health with an emphasis on epidemiology, and (3) public policy analysis. Provides basic training in the application and interpretation of quantitative and qualitative methods and techniques commonly used in researching these areas. Applies these techniques to issues that are specific to the reality of transborder and/or transnational contexts. Students are required to apply and present an analysis in their field of interest which demonstrates their grasp of theory and method.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| TSS     | 506         | Theory and Methods of Transborder Media and Expressive Culture                             | Overview of the interdisciplinary theories and methods employed to research and analyze media and creative cultural production. Objects of analysis include literature, film, live performance, theater, Web-based media, popular culture production, and visual arts. Required readings elucidate strengths, limitations, and applicability of particular theories and methods to different types of creative expression and media production as well as to their historical and political contexts. Students engage with, critique, and contribute to the theories and methods presented in the course. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |
| TSS     | 507         | Theory and Methods of Transborder Cultural Acquisition, Language Development, and Learning | This course familiarizes graduate students with literature on relationship between culture, language, and learning, and their theoretical and methodological underpinnings within a transborder context.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | Z1            | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Transborder Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student |

| TWC     | 435         | Global Issues in Technical Communication                      | Helps students understand issues that shape workplace communication in a global environment. Technical communicators are expected to be specialists who interact effectively with a broad range of audiences. Given the global nature of today's workplace, those audiences typically include people from many cultures and countries. Through readings, written assignments, and analysis of case studies, documents, and websites, explores ways in which culture and language shape professional interactions. Also examines other critical issues such as translation, localization, technology and distributed work teams that impact writing and designing documents in a globalized work environment. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Integrative Sciences and Arts | College of Integrative Sciences and Arts | 3     | G               | Prerequisite(s): minimum 45 hours; Credit is allowed for only TWC 435 or TWC 494 (Global Issues in Technical Communication) or TWC 535 |

| TWC     | 535         | Global Issues in Technical Communication                      | Helps students understand issues that shape workplace communication in a global environment. Technical communicators are expected to be specialists who interact effectively with a broad range of audiences. Given the global nature of today's workplace, those audiences typically include people from many cultures and countries. Through readings, written assignments, and analysis of case studies, documents and Websites, explores ways in which culture and language shape professional interactions. Also examines other critical issues such as translation, localization, technology and distributed work teams that impact writing and designing documents in a globalized work environment. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | College of Integrative Sciences and Arts | College of Integrative Sciences and Arts | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only TWC 435 or TWC 535 or TWC 598 (Global Issues in Technical Communication)   |

| VTS     | 301         | Veterans, Society and Service: Experience of America's Modern Wars             | Be part of this new field in veteran studies to create bridges among military, veteran and civilian cultures. Who are veterans? How and why do citizens become military service members and what is the experience of recruitment, training, service and transition to civilian life? How do we "read" a military uniform and differentiate the language and cultures of the five branches? How does military service lead or follow the nation in issues of class, gender, civil rights and LGBTQ? What are society's obligations to veterans and families as they transition through health care, higher education, employment and continued service? | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Dean, The College of The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only HST 394 (Veterans, Society and Service: Core I) or VTS 301            |

| WPC     | 470         | Business Administration Capstone             | Develops a general manager's or business owner's perspective on how organizations can create value. Creating long-run value by repeatedly producing goods and services that customers buy at prices that cover the costs of producing them is the key to success for business organizations. The starting point for thinking about how an organization might create value and gain sustainable competitive advantage is analyzing current and future environments to understand threats and opportunities in various institutional settings around the world. Evaluates the impact of institutional settings in different countries and ethical values on decision making. Students learn how to successfully manage relations with key stakeholders including customers, employees, suppliers of capital as well as other component goods and services, and stakeholders from various levels of government in different countries.      | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | W.P. | WPC     | 585         | Future Forward Leadership                              | Today organizations operate in a world that is globally and economically connected, complex and rapidly changing. Rapid technological change and start-up disrupting companies are changing the speed and nature of work. The evolving nature of work requires leaders who know how to contextualize and understand ambiguous, uncertain problems, to discover innovative and creative solutions. Future Forward Leadership develops the cognitive and leadership capabilities for this changing arena. The course builds on the knowledge gained in all of the prior courses in the MBA curriculum and applies it to ambiguous and volatile problems and issues. Team taught by faculty from across ASU and WP Carey using simulations and scenarios and hot evolving cases covering the following topics: design thinking, improvisation, super-flexibility, uncertainty, sense-making, execution through experimentation and recalibration. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | W.P. Examines how and why alcohol and drug use have been identified as social problems and the role of gender in shaping this process. Reviews multiple social and cultural aspects of gender, drug and alcohol use, as well as the emergence of gender-based health disparities within this context. Fulfills a science and society requirement. Basic scientific principles such as the formulation of research questions, data collection and analysis, have been used to develop our understanding of gender, drugs and alcohol. How society influences the nature of those questions, the perceived value attached to particular scientific studies over others, and how to critically evaluate law and policy around drugs and alcohol in light of those studies. | N                 | LEC               | N               | GNA           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): WST 100 or WST 300 or minimum 30 hours; Credit is allowed for only WST 320 or WST 394 (Gender, Drugs and Alcohol)  |

| WST     | 341         | Latin American Women Writers                                  | In the 20th and 21st centuries, Latin America has seen a proliferation of literature published by women authors. While this explosion of the written word owes in part to changing socioeconomic factors and the opening of the international markets, Latin American women's literary history is often ignored in the canon. Examines the concepts of feminism through a Mexican framework, starting from the point of view of Mexican women theorizing about their own. This is not a history of feminism, but it does aim to highlight certain fundamental texts and key concepts of Mexico's history from the position of women writers, including feminism's critique of social structures beyond the bounds of gender relations.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; Credit is allowed for only LAS 340 or WST 341   |

| WST     | 449         | Hate Speech, Manifestos, and Radical Writings | Examines writings, speeches and texts that provoke radical or even revolutionary social change. At its core, this course asks: What is the radical and what does it do? How do radical writings function as texts, speech acts, inspirational documents, testimonies, accounts of madness, frightening moments, calls to arms, peacekeeping entities or speaking truth to power? Examines injurious speech and provocative writings that span a range of social movements and topics, including radical feminism, radical queer, Black power, indigenous rights, art and performance, anti-technology, animal rights, violence, madness and revolutionary resistance.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     | SB & C          | Prerequisite(s): minimum 35 hours; minimum 2.50 GPA; Credit is allowed for only AMS 449 or ETH 449 or WST 449 or WST 394 (Hate Speech and Manifestos)  |

| WST     | 469         | Abject Bodies and the Politics of Trash       | Examines the possibilities inherent in "theorizing from the gutter"; looking at the world not from a lofty "Ivory Tower" but from the slime, the muck, the dumpster, the trash heap, the wasteland, the discarded and the downtrodden. Takes its theoretical framework from a radical 1960s manifesto called SCUM Manifesto by Valerie Solanas and from the French feminist philosophies of Julia Kristeva, who theorized the abject as a relationship with the grotesque that reveals the deep-seated fear of death. Uses these theoretical positions to examine trash, both abstractly and literally. Works through a variety of concepts ranging from actual trash, garbage, waste, toxic sludge, pollution and dirt, and tackles more abstract notions of trash such as the knowledge produced on the fringe in circuses, amusement parks, "trailer trash" zones, freak shows and the bodies of those marked as "Other" or different. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | New Interdis Arts & Sciences             | School of Humanities, Arts, and Cultural Studies | 3     | SB & C          | Prerequisite(s): ENG 102, 105, or 108 with C or better; minimum 36 hours; Credit is allowed for only AMS 469 or ETH 469 or WST 469 or WST 494 (Trash, Freaks and SCUM) or JHR 598 (Trash, Freaks and SCUM) or MAS 598 (Trash, Freaks and SCUM) |

| WST     | 615         | Masculinities                                       | Explores the theoretical concepts, frameworks and disciplinary and interdisciplinary approaches that have accompanied the emerging analysis of masculinity studies as a field. Interrogates the ways in which masculinities have been defined in relation to femininities and other institutionalized constructions of difference, and how these definitions have contributed to material conditions and specific socio-historical contexts in which gendered bodies are included or excluded, privileged or disadvantaged, taken for granted or contested. Considers the articulations and contestations of diverse masculinities as expressed through gender, race, sex, ethnicity, sexuality, kinship, politics, popular culture, economics, nationalism, science and medicine, and violence.  | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | School of Social Transformation                  | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): degree- or nondegree-seeking graduate student; Credit is allowed for only WST 615 or WST 691 (Masculinities)                                |
| WST     | 620         | Advanced Feminist Theory in a Transnational Context | Concentrates on transnational feminist theory and its intersections with queer theory, postcolonial theory, and critical race theory. Also looks at the ways in which (or indeed, whether) academic discourses have anything useful to say about the worlds in which we live. Among the questions we'll need to have constantly in our minds are: In what ways has feminist theorizing changed over time? Does transnational feminist theory challenge or even undermine previous feminist theoretical discussions or the perspectives you might be familiar with from your undergraduate days? What kinds of engagements do our authors have with theorists in other areas (queer studies, postcolonial studies, critical race theory)? Can you discern any sort of new feminist grand narrative emerging from these works? | WWS     | 563         | The Lived Experience of World War II                       | Using the vast oral history collection of the National World War II Museum in New Orleans, Louisiana, this course examines how individuals experienced the war. A number of factors shaped how people experienced the war--whether one was a soldier, non-combatant, resistor or collaborator. Focuses on how ordinary people made sense of their experiences during the war. In addition, students explore the theory and practice of collecting and using oral histories.   | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): WWS 561; WWS 562                              |

| WWS     | 566         | World War II Today   | Analyzes the impact and legacy of World War II, with an emphasis on the roots of contemporary problems and issues. A global conflict that impacted millions of people, World War II fundamentally reshaped the political and cultural landscape of our planet. Explores the new global order that emerged after the end of World War II in 1945. While the war had immediate impacts in the postwar era, the legacy of the war continues to inform current conflicts across the globe and resonates in the current social and political order. This is especially apparent in how contemporary narratives situate, remember and memorialize the war. Uses themes to help us think historically and uncover the historical roots of the present order. | N                 | LEC               | N               | OPT           | The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences | Historical, Philosophical & Religious Studies, Sch | 3     |                 | Prerequisite(s): WWS 561; WWS 562                              |
