Minority and Women Business Enterprise (MWBE) Buying Programs Under Review

by Linda Bailey

Arizona Women's News Begins Series of Articles on Minority and Women Business Enterprise Buying Programs
Future Editions to Have Details of Programs in Corporate Sector

Minority and women business enterprise (MWBE) buying programs have been available through state, county, city and ADOT offices for several years. They offer training for starting new businesses, assistance with finding capitalization, help with developing business plans and incentives for using MWBE businesses.

MWBE businesses must acquire certification with each government entity and then contact purchasing agents to bid on projects. The construction - subcontracting program motivates prime contractors to use minority/women owned companies as subcontractors.

There is also a procurement preference program. If a MWBE bid is 2 1/2% over the lowest bid, it is declared the lowest bid for contracts of $250,000 or less.

In the city of Phoenix, the MWBE program was implemented in 1993, as a result of a disparity study that showed that the government was not spending an appropriate amount of money with minority and women owned businesses. The city is in the process of doing a second-generation study to evaluate the effectiveness of its program.

MGT of America in Tallahassee, Florida is preparing the study. Results are expected to be available by the end of March.

Phoenix has received a formal extension to keep current ordinances in place through June 30th, 1999. According to Carol Coles Henry, Director for the City of Phoenix Equal Opportunity Department, "Once the preliminary results are in, if there is a continuing disparity, public hearings will be held to look at recommendations for improving the program."

"In my opinion, there are some good success stories. There have been businesses that started making $20-30,000 their first year and were grossing over $1 million in a year. We are in a growing economy, especially in the areas of construction and goods and services. We have a responsibility to find out who's out there and who is available to contribute to the local economy in a big way. But, we can do more to be effective."

Ms. Henry stated that there have been many improvements in the program, since 1993. "The certification process has been greatly improved. There has been an intergovernmental agreement." It used to be required that applicants fill out tedious paperwork at each individual government office to obtain certification. Now only one certification application is necessary.

Barbara Ralston Steps Out

"My Year of Risk Taking"

Barbara Ralston, President of the new Camelback Community Bank, was recently presented with the 1998 Athena Award. During a morning gathering of NAWBO (National Association of Women Business Owners) members, Barbara called 1998 "My year of risk taking."

AZWN: You intrigued me when you said "my year of risk taking." How did this year of risk taking start?

BR: Probably the first big risk was when I made the decision to leave Wells Fargo Bank, because I didn't have a job. I didn't know what I was going to do and that is very un-Barbara like. That was a big surprise to me and my husband.

AZWN: How did that happen?

BR: It was a combination of things - the job that I had changed significantly with the Wells Fargo entrance into the market. I had been the area president for First Interstate. Not only had the management changed and the philosophy changed but I had moved from managing both traditional and in-store branches to managing just in-store branches. That combined with the fact that I had an opportunity to take a two-year package and leave. And there was enough conflict between my value system and the way bank viewed its role with the community that I decided to leave.

ONE WOMAN'S STORY

by Linda Bailey

Woman Uses Resources and Experience to Grow Her Business

Susan Crinnian, President of CCI Networks, has been very pleased with the support and assistance she has received from city and state MWBE programs. She started her Phoenix based software technology firm in 1994. "CCI Networks provides services and products to organizations who want to communicate, secure and manage corporate knowledge by Web enabling applications. This includes Internet, Intranet and Extranet development, security of networks and e-mail, and integration with legacy systems and databases."

Her company offers secure delivery of information over the Internet; the ability to limit employee access to the Internet which improves productivity; and a remote user password, called SecureId.

EDITOR'S NOTE

Trailblazers

Terry Williams

I admire women that see potential. Actually, I admire women who seize potential. These are the trailblazers.

Some women see opportunity - but are blinded by risk. Others see both risk and opportunity, but find their way through the darkness to success. I often wonder why one woman takes the path through risk, while the other sets down roots in "safe" territory.

Since starting Arizona Women's News, I have had the opportunity to interview several successful risk-takers - Janet Napolitano, Joanne Carthey, Terri Bowersock, Barbara Ralston. Talking with these successful trailblazers has shown me that - for them - the greater risk would be to stay stagnant. These women enjoy the thrill of the chase, the opportunity to "go where no woman has gone before," to make the world turn around them.

Within each risk-taker is the certain belief that they will succeed. Yes, they tell us that they have doubts, fears, setbacks and often overwhelming defeats. I can relate it to a video race car game. We put our quarter in and tear off down the track. We successfully navigate a few turns then crash and burn and the game is over.

Not for these ladies. For them, it's time to put in another quarter and head on down the track. They aren't done when the quarter runs out --- they are done when they cross the finish line. Then it's time to find a whole new race track to command.

For these trailblazers, success is not an option - it is the only option. OK - so we aren't all Janet's or Joanne's or Terri's or Barbara's. But, we all have the potential.

The elements of success lie in our attitudes. I know that sounds corny. We hear about attitude at every motivational meeting we attend. My point is - that it's not about attitude ---- it's about a specific attitude of success. The attitude that says - success is not an option - it is the only option. The attitude that says - success is not one store, it's twenty.

The next time you sit down to think through where you are going, think big. Think about what you would do if there were no obstacles. Then take a step - take the first step. Take the next step and the next. Embrace the first obstacle and smile as you pass it by. The trail will begin to feel hot under your feet. This is when you'll know you have become a trailblazer, too.

Find a Good Accountant and Avoid Costly Mistakes

Interested in saving more money for retirement, a college fund or for your dreams? Do you want to keep some of the money the IRS demands? Seem impossible? It's not. And, now is the time of year to plan.

How many of you use your accountant only to do your taxes? You make one appointment each year, give him or her all the W-2's, 1099's, your mortgage interest statement and anything else you think is important, go away for several weeks, and then return to pick up your tax returns.

This is one sure way to pay too much.

You should hear the conversations in the CPA firm's lunchrooms during tax season. I call them the "if only" stories. "If only, Mrs. Jones had called me before she sold all her IBM stock on December 28th." "If only, Mr. Smith had called me before he sold his summer home in Lake Tahoe."

The amount of money people throw away from poor tax planning would shock you. This year a client called and said she had sold her winning lottery ticket and asked if she should pay off her home. After looking at her tax picture, I groaned, realizing she would pay an extra 16% in taxes on some of her winnings because of how she had structured the pay out. If only, she had called before she sold the ticket.

One success story is how we restructured a couple saving's program. The couple had been faithfully funding their children's college education but ignoring their own retirement needs. By first saving for retirement, the tax savings could then be used for their children's college fund.

Many people think they don't need to spend the money talking to their accountant. But, in the book, The Millionaire Next Door, the authors say this is one big difference between those people who become millionaires and those that don't: they use good professionals to help them obtain their dreams. These millionaires aren't sports heroes or superstars but average people with an incredible ability to save.

Many of you already have competent professionals. But you need to talk to them more often. Tell them, "I want to maximize my tax savings, can you think of anything I can do right now to change my taxes for this year?" And, now is the time to talk about tax planning.

by Jean DeKraker, CPA

Many opportunities to save on taxes evaporate December 31st.

Always call your professional before you buy or sell anything major - like a house or stock option.

Ask them about the tax ramifications and if there is a way to minimize the tax effect. If you are thinking about starting a business, call your tax professional before you begin.

■ PHOENIX YOUTH COMMISSIONER WINS NATIONAL SCHOLARSHIP

Serving on the City of Phoenix Youth and Education Commission since 1997, Claudia Camacho has been selected to receive the 1998 Yoshiyama Award for exemplary service to the community. Camacho, one of 11 selected, was recently honored at an awards ceremony at the National Press Club in Washington, D.C. and received a $5,000 scholarship. Camacho graduated in May as class salutatorian from Metro Tech Vocational Institute and currently attends Phoenix College.

FINANCE

■ SBA LAUNCHES SMALL LOAN PROGRAMS

U.S. Small Business Administration Administrator, Aida Alvarez, announced that two streamlined small loan programs are expected to provide more than $1 billion in hard-to-get small loans that will help open the doors of opportunity in "New Markets," - start-ups, women and minority-owned firms, and those in inner cities and rural markets. The programs, SBA LowDoc and SBA Express, target a gap in the marketplace for small business loans under $150,000.

■ SBA's ONLINE WOMEN'S BUSINESS CENTER NOW AVAILABLE IN SPANISH

U.S. Small Business Administration Administrator, Aida Alvarez, announced that much of the popular Online Women's Business Center (www.onlinebc.org) is now available in Spanish. It offers beginning and existing women entrepreneurs business principles and practices, management techniques, networking, industry news, information about SBA services, market research, and technology training.

HEALTH

■ RESEARCH SUGGESTS INDUCING HEART ATTACK MAY REDUCE SYMPTOMS FOR THOSE WITH ENLARGED HEARTS

Injecting alcohol into the walls of the heart, and deliberately inducing a heart attack can ease symptoms of a genetic enlargement of the heart, report researchers in October 27 edition of Circulation: Journal of the American Heart. Hypertrophic cardiomyopathy occurs in one in 500 in the general population. People who have this condition have hearts that become thicker and stiffer than normal. Their symptoms include fainting, chest pains and shortness of breath. The reason someone would submit to this treatment is it is the alternative to open-heart surgery.

PARTNERSHIPS

■ SBA SIGNS PARTNERSHIP AGREEMENTS WITH 11 WOMEN'S BUSINESS ORGANIZATIONS

U.S. Small Business Administration Administrator, Aida Alvarez, signed formal partnership agreements with 11 major women's organizations representing more than two million business and professional women. These partnerships will work to increase the participation of women-owned businesses in the SBA's capital access, procurement, international trade, technology, women's business, welfare-to-work, business training, and advocacy programs.

POLITICS

■ CONTRACEPTION COVERED IN FEDERAL EMPLOYEES HEALTH BENEFITS PLANS

In a hard-fought battle for reproductive rights, Representative Nita Lowey (D-NY) succeeded in restoring language requiring contraceptive coverage for federal employees in the final Omnibus Appropriations bill. The measure would require Federal Employees Health Benefit plans (FEHB) to provide coverage for five Food and Drug Administration- (FDA) approved prescription contraception medications.

■ BILL DENYING TEENS' CONFIDENTIAL ACCESS TO CONTRACEPTION FAILS

The Senate defeated efforts to discourage teens from seeking reproductive health services at Title X federally-funded family planning clinics when it refused to agree to a House-passed amendment. The amendment was pushed by Rep. Ernest Istook (R-OK) and would have required parental notification or consent for minors seeking contraception services. However, this restrictive provision was not included in the final Omnibus Appropriations bill.

■ FDA FUNDS RESTORED TO APPROVE MIFEPRISTONE (RU-486)

The House- and Senate-passed amendment prohibiting the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) from approving drugs that could be used to induce medical abortion was eliminated from the FY 99 Agriculture conference report. If passed, this provision would have halted efforts to bring Mifepristone (RU-486), the early abortion medication, to market. The drug, which has undergone extensive clinical trials in the U.S., was found by the FDA in 1996 to be safe and effective. In addition, it has shown efficacy in treating several serious conditions, including breast cancer and meningioma. Mifepristone is expected to be available sometime in 1999.

■ DR. HENNEY CONFIRMED AS FDA COMMISSIONER

In early September, the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee held a hearing on the nomination of Dr. Jane Henney as Commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Eminently qualified for the position, Dr. Henney served as deputy commissioner under former FDA Commissioner Dr. David Kessler, and is currently the vice president for health sciences at the University of New Mexico. On October 21, the Senate approved the nomination of Dr. Henney, making her the first woman to hold this important position.

■ TITLE X FAMILY PLANNING GETS A $12 MILLION INCREASE

The Senate Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS) and Education Appropriations Subcommittee approved a $12 million increase for the Title X family planning program and this was included in the final appropriations bill. In addition, no anti-family planning amendments were attached.

■ SENATE REFUSES TO CONSIDER VAWA II

In the closing days of the 105th Congress, the Senate refused to take up the Violence Against Women Act of 1998 (VAWA II, S. 2110) and the House-passed Conyers' Amendment which approved and funded a number of programs in the House VAWA II bill (H.R. 3514). The refusal was a setback for efforts by anti-violence advocates to expand upon successful programs combating domestic violence, rape and sexual assault and to extend the focus to underserved groups like lesbians, rural, older and disabled women.

MARKETING

by Lynette Zang

Not Too Much and Not Too Little...Ahh, Just Right!

That's just the amount you should spend to convert prospects to clients and clients to bigger, happier & more loyal clients. Let's examine the immediate and long-term value of your clients and create an ongoing marketing budget based upon your company's current and desired growth.

Remember, in order to thrive in today's market, companies of all shapes and sizes must consistently bring in new prospects, convert current prospects into clients, and grow the number of products or services used by current clients.

The initiation phase of a marketing plan is always the most expensive (outlay vs. income), because you are building the foundation. Your general marketing budget should be based on a percentage of gross sales, normally 8% to 18%.

If you have no gross sales to base your budget on, use your projected sales forecast from your business plan. If you don't have a business plan, get one. Your accountant, bank, bookstore, marketing agency or Small Business Development Center (a free service) are great places to start. Your local library is also a wonderful resource.

The Value of a Client

Spend money where you can expect a return by looking more closely at your best clients. Arrive at a real number for your marketing budget by determining who you want as a client. Examine which category of client is most profitable, sends you the most referrals and requires the least amount of time and effort. These are your top clients. Focus here.

The average annual values of a client -

Pick your top 5 - 10 clients. Determine your total sales volume and your total profit from them over the previous year? Divide your total sales and then your total profits by the number of clients you used for this study.

This tells you the annual value of a client and what income/profit you can expect over a twelve-month period of time for every new client you grow that resembles your client profile. Set your sales and spending goals accordingly.

The average initial values of a client -

Again look at your top 5 - 10 clients. What was their sum total of initial orders? What was your total profit? Divide your initial order total and then your profits by the number of clients you used for this study.

This tells you what income/profits you can expect on a first sale. It also enables you to determine how much it's worth to you to close the deal.

Most importantly you have to be comfortable with your budget. Now that you know how much an initial order and a current client are worth, you can make an educated spending decision. By using a percentage system, you will see your budget change as you company and profits grow. In the fifth article in the series we will explore prospecting levels, tiered spending and marketing strategies.

INTERNET SITE-SISTER

by Ruth Owens

The Road to Recognition: Myriad Links

The most important places to list your site are on the main search engines, but there are hundreds of small directories and search engines where you can add a link to your site. You can manually do this yourself, but it's a laborious process. You can pay a nominal fee to some of these and they will submit your site using an automated process, which is more practical.

I have listed below a number of these sites. Some will list your site for you and others are lists of search or links sites where you can add yourself.

It's a good idea to think of a descriptive title and some keywords that would help the people conducting a search find you. The smaller directories don't have "spiders" and instead rely on you to tell them this information.

In addition to the search engines and directories, you can trade links with other sites that supply similar information to yours. Look around on the Internet for these sites, check to see whether they have a links page, then email them and suggest trading links. If they agree, I like to add the link, then email them with the URL containing the link to their page. This cuts down on the back and forth that can get tiresome.

This list should keep you busy for a while and lead to others:

HUMAN RESOURCES

by Anne Caldwell

MANAGEMENT
TECHNIQUES FOR A CHANGING WORLD

Managing for success in this age of information and technology involves balancing the personal and the professional. How many people have spent the last decade working to succeed, only to find that the experience is not satisfying. We feel stressed with no time to recharge. How did this happen in a world where technology is supposed to save us time?

One factor is that, although technology has created more time for us, the sense of what is necessary in our lives has increased. Activities our parents might have considered frivolous are integral to our frenzied schedules - working out, taking our children to soccer or dance. We now find ourselves scheduling quality time.

While we're working hard at our jobs, we search for meaning for ourselves. We look for techniques to improve our lives. Often we find our work environment does not reflect our values. We may see questionable ethics, rampant incompetence, and a universal lack of responsibility. This adds to our sense of alienation and impotence, and therefore, to our stress.

How do we combat this feeling that impacts our jobs, our organizations and our relationships? It is possible to improve your working experience by employing some empowerment techniques, and by refusing to compromise your own commitment to joy, in the workplace and elsewhere. Remember, only you are responsible for your behavior and responses, and you are responsible only for your behavior and responses.

DO

Take responsibility for your own behavior. Implement what you've learned. Use new information to challenge yourself.

Check your facts before basing a decision or conclusion on them.

Communicate expectations, and check to see if they're reasonable.

Be flexible. Realize everybody is juggling multiple tasks.

Follow through; take the steps you need to do so.

Demonstrate respect for yourself.

Balance the four main areas of your life: work, intimacy/social, spiritual, community.

Be open, even excited, about dialogue and new ideas.

Maintain integrity to make authentic connections with yourself and others.

Mentor others in growing and believing in themselves, and partner with them.

Be open to constructive input and new ways to approach old tasks.

DON'T

Continually deflect responsibility for your actions onto others. Blaming others provides no power to change the situation.

Make assumptions.

Expect team members to read your mind.

Assume that in a sea of activity, yours is the only priority.

Drop the ball.

Gossip and pass on bad news.

Bankrupt your personal life to be successful professionally.

Stay stuck on old beliefs.

Violate your personal integrity.

Believe that you are alone in this or that you have nothing to teach.

Believe that you have nothing to learn.

Employing these techniques can enhance your own experience each day, and will make you a valuable partner to whom others will be drawn. This will make your job easier and more essential to the organization. In addition, you will be modeling behavior for others that could make the entire working environment better for everybody. Creating a positive work environment will bring balance to your life overall.

Economic Development on the Little Colorado River

A recent meeting of Little Colorado watershed stakeholders highlighted a business opportunity which would have positive social and environmental outcomes.

The Little Colorado River (LCR) Watershed Project is a multi-objective management process involving local, state and federal agency representatives, and private stakeholders cooperating to improve the cultural, economic and environmental well-being of the Little Colorado River Basin. On October 27, LCR hosted a tour of the Blue Ridge Demonstration Project in the Apache/Sitgreaves National Forest.

The management plan for the demonstration project is intended to help restore the forest's health and sustainability. In the late 1800's, the Mogollon Rim ponderosa forest was a mosaic of densely-wooded expanses and park-like areas where clumps of trees were interspersed with grassy openings. This diversity was maintained naturally by floods and fires. During the first half of this century, the U.S. Forest Service removed large trees to control catastrophic fires, disease and insect outbreaks. Since most fires were lightning ignited, and dead snags house insects and disease, "top-down" thinning was the accepted practice.

The demonstration area will showcase the benefits of "bottom-up" thinning, clump creation and prescribed burns. In dry climate forests, ground fire removes litter, allowing grasses, forbs and young pines to germinate. Ground fire recycles nutrients, a function bacteria carry out in wetter areas. Another feature of the demonstration is creating "fuel breaks," where trees are thinned so fire crews can assemble and bring a crown fire down to the ground where it can be controlled.

The USFS cannot afford to thin and remove trees with its own crew and equipment, and so it sells timber rights so companies who follow the instructions in the plan to cut and remove the trees. This also provides local jobs and wood products. Different sized trees are used for different products. Trees less than five inches at breast height (d.b.h.) are mostly gathered under salvage permits for firewood or mulch. Trees more than about nine inches d.b.h. are most economical for lumber. Trees between five and nine inches d.b.h. are used by pulp mills.

Recycled paper can substitute for pulp timber, saving labor, energy and water. The benefits are so great that Stone Container in Snowflake now uses eighty percent recycled pulp. Many are speculating that the mill will soon begin using exclusively recycled pulp.

If the mill stops using pulp timber, a gap in the forest management plan will result. Only a limited number of industries can use pulp-sized timber economically. Further, the recently-ended moratorium on cutting timber in the National Forest may make it difficult to attract investors for a new plant that relies on local pulp timber. On the other hand, if no business steps in, local jobs will be lost, and bottom-up thinning will be difficult.

The business that brings a low-capital plant or process to the area to use the pulp timber may be eligible for economic development grants and assistance. To learn more about business opportunities in the Pinetop-Lakeside area, call Vice-Mayor Ginny Handorf at (520) 367-3671.

POWER HOUR

Special Guest

Joanne Carthey

President, CEO of NetPro Computing, Inc.

Thursday, December 3rd, 5:30 - 7:00 pm

Join us for our first ever POWER HOUR as we focus on the Power of Partnering in business.

Each POWER HOUR will provide women in business with the increasing networking, knowledge and expertise needed to take their businesses to the next level of growth and prosperity.

Joanne Carthey has used the power of partnering to help propel the growth of NetPro Computing. NetPro has been on the Inc. 500 list of the fastest-growing, private companies in America for the past three years.

Join us as we talk about partnering and experience the benefits through practice. Each participant will have the opportunity to network and discover potential profit making partnerships.

Location: Arizona Club, 201 N. Central, 37th Floor (parking available at Bank One parking garage).

Cost: $14 ($10 for subscribers) includes hors d'oeuvres and no host bar.

RSVP: no later than 12/2/98 to 274-8473

Future Power Hour dates include:

January 28, February 25, March 25, April 27 and May 27.

Series Sponsors Include:

201 N. Central
37th Floor
Phoenix

Also look for our upcoming seminars including:

Cash Management Strategies for Business (January 14th), Taking Your Business to the Next Level (March 11th) and Sales, Marketing, PR & Advertising: Working Together for Growth (May 14th). Call 274-8473 for informational brochure on all events.

Habitat for Humanity Sponsors Third Women's Build Home

In January 1999 Habitat for Humanity, Valley of the Sun, will sponsor its third Women's Build, a home built by women for a low income family who has met Habitat's qualifications for home ownership. With the exception of the foundation, electrical, plumbing and stucco, yes, we women can and do build Habitat homes!

Before construction begins $50,000 must be raised to make this event a reality. At press time we are $16,000 short and are looking for groups, organizations and individuals who can make this build happen. Could you or your organization donate monies that will help in the following areas: permits/fees $253; concrete $5,503; electric $1,300; insulation $787; stucco $4,329; appliances $650; landscape $800; storage $750; fencing $1,950?

Mother's Day morning is home dedication time for the family who has contributed a total of 300 hours of sweat equity labor at their home and other homes in the development. It is a gala affair. Last year the ever-elegant Rose Moffert was our guest speaker.

Habitat for Humanity's 39-acre development at Southern Avenue and 16th Street is called South Ranch. The farm land was donated several years ago by Bank One and is the largest single Habitat for Humanity project in the world. When the site is fully developed 197 homes will grace the area; at present there are approximately 100 completed. The Phoenix Suns are proud of their donated basketball court at the park/playground where much activity takes place.

For all you avid golfers there will be a benefit tournament for the Women's Build at the Wigwam Resort on Sunday, January 17, 1999. For more information contact the Mundus Institute School of Golf Management at 248-8548.

The excitement is building! If you can help make this dream come true, or know of someone who can, please call Pam Kreiling, volunteer coordinator, at 268-9022."

Career

by Tammie M. Chestnut

Ready...set...promote!

As a dedicated employee, you have contributed years of expertise, commitment and even followed all of the office politics accordingly. To your surprise you will not be simply handed a promotion, you have to actually apply for the job.

You put aside your bruised ego and begin to prepare your resume, cover letter and reference sheet as if you were actually hitting the pavement in search of a position with another company. When in fact, you're just going right down to the personnel department.

So now what? You ask yourself is it worth it and do you really want the job? It could mean great things for your career and a few more pennies in your pocket. How do you prepare for an internal interview? Isn't everything on file? Isn't your progress evident?

Well, not all the time. Some companies really need to be resold on your value as an employee, no matter how many awards they've given you.

Over the years I've had a total of seven "real-life" positions, three promotions, and several bonuses and raises. Each one has taught me a very valuable lesson and I grew from each. I'll share a couple with you.

Lesson Number One:

If you keep doing what you've been doing, you're going to keep getting what you've been getting. If all you are looking for is money—that's all it will be "is a job that pays the bills." Just do your time and go home. Do no more or less than what is asked and that is all you will get...no more and no less. And less could be no promotion for you.

Lesson Number Two:

Whatever success you achieved yesterday will not make you successful today. It's like being in school—everyone is excited and proud when a child can recite his or her ABC's in kindergarten. But in the first grade that same child is expected to know how to form words with those letters - just being able to recite the letters is no longer enough.

The same is true in the workplace. Yes it's great when you're new to the workforce, maybe as a clerk typist, and can type a letter accurately.

But as you continue up the career ladder just knowing how to type and file is not enough. The professional is expected to type, proofread, and oftentimes edit the manager's letters. You will always have to reach higher and farther than you did the day before.

Lesson Number Three:

Life is not fair. It's life. There may be setbacks and disappointments. But this is no excuse to give up on yourself, on your career or your goals. It just means you have to try harder.

Lesson Number Four:

"Plan your work. Then work your plan." You've heard it before. Now it's time to live it. If you don't know where you are going, any road will take you there...usually in a circle. Planning for an education, buying a new home or car... Everything requires some sort of planning. Begin each day with a plan in mind on things you want to accomplish both personally and professionally.

All in all, be persistent in your endeavors. If you are seeking a promotion, make it known.

Treat the internal position exactly as you would a new position that you have to apply for officially. Don't try to eliminate the red tape nor should you assume "it's in the bag." The procedure is there for a reason. And when you get your promotion, give me a call, I want to hear all about it!

Finally, someone you can talk to about money.
 And someone who listens to you.

Unique financial coaching, and advocacy.
 Just for women.

FEATURE

"The process has been streamlined and made uniform, so that now each department can share information, releasing it at the request of the business owner."

According to Carol Coles Henry, "Over the past five years, the city's database of certified businesses has grown 450% and the number of available firms is steadily growing." Anglo women represent 54%, African/ Native American and Hispanic women represent 10% of the database. City utilization of minority and women owned businesses in the area of construction has grown 9% in five years. Out of that, 3% are women owned businesses. In goods and services, there is 7% utilization of minority and women businesses."

Currently, 785 companies are certified to do business with the city; 677 are Maricopa County certified. Out of that 677, 54% are Anglo women, 6% are Hispanic women and 1% are Native American women. "We are in the process of expanding our database for our sub-contracting program." Ms. Henry said.

The majority of certified women owned firms are in the area of goods and services. The city prints a monthly directory listing all certified businesses. Phoenix is ranked in the top 5 nationally in terms of small business growth, according to the Equal Opportunity office.

While early indications are that there is still room for improvement of utilization of MWBEs, there are a number of beneficial services available to MWBEs to grow their business and compete in the corporate arena. "Outreach into the community is considerable. We offer mini certification workshops, mentoring programs, and networking opportunities." Ms. Henry said.

There is still room for improvement of utilization of MWBEs.

Ann Chase is a project manager for the Small Business Assistance department for the City of Phoenix. "Three times a year, we offer a procurement seminar that is open to the public. This gives an opportunity for MWBEs to meet with financing representatives and learn what is available to them. It's a great opportunity for networking." According to Ms. Chase, in the past 5 years, the city has given out $10 million in small business loans, and over $1 1/2 million in collateral enhancements. "There is no breakdown available as to what percentage was given to MWBEs.

Tony Hatcher, Procurement Manager for the city of Phoenix is the MWBE Coordinator for Goods and Services. "There have been many improvements over the year. More firms are participating in the actual bid process. There is an influx of women owned businesses into the program."

However, actual figures are not available at this time. Mr. Hatcher said that there has been a slight increase in minority females owned businesses, while the number of businesses owned by Anglo and Hispanic females has remained the same. The city has been changing their financial management program and actual figures have not been available since July of '98. Numbers should be available by the end of this month.

When asked to comment on trends, Mr. Hatcher said, "More women are going into business for themselves. Many are going into service oriented businesses such as travel agencies, catering services, secretarial services, court reporting, word processing, etc. Many new businesses are in the area of computer services concerning needs for the year 2000. A number of companies that started up in the past six months are gearing up to meet Y2K standards."

According to Mr. Hatcher, there seems to be a shortage of fleet items, vehicles, machinery, automotive accessories." There is a void in the commodities area. This is due to the high cost of maintaining inventory and warehousing product.

"Now is the time to take advantage of the programs, get involved with government purchasing while it is available. Get certified, make the necessary contacts with government entities. Take advantage of workshop programs throughout the year. Utilize the Small Business Assistance Programs. Once the second-generation disparity study results are in, who knows what the final recommendations will be and how things will be restructured." (For information on future seminars, contact Tony Hatcher at 262-7795.)

Lisa Wormington is Civil Rights Administrator for ADOT. "ADOT is involved with highway design and highway construction related projects." According to Ms. Wormington, there is no specific program for ADOT purchasing because their requirements are not determined by local laws. "ADOT awarded $45 million in contracts to MWBEs for the past federal fiscal year. This is 11% of ADOT's total. In previous years this figure has been closer to $20-25 million." This past federal fiscal year, ADOT awarded $400 million in contracts. This was a substantial increase over previous years.

Ms. Wormington said that in their industry, they are finding that MWBEs are "pretty well booked and finding lots of work."

"ADOT awarded $45 million in contracts to MWBEs for the past federal fiscal year. This is 11% of ADOT's total."

Jan Vacek Stash is Director of the Minority/Women Business Enterprise office for the state Department of Commerce. Her office provides a centralized place where business owners can find help with certification. This office was created by the Legislature in 1994, after a governor's small business conference identified a need. Her office publishes a directory of certified businesses that the state uses "Now more than ever, women and minority owned businesses need to connect with the resources that are available to them. Trends are that women owned businesses are escalating."

According to Ms. Stash, the major stumbling block for new businesses is getting financing. "You must have a good credit history. You must do good, extensive research and you must have a business plan." She says that if there's a void, it is in finding skilled employees for these start up businesses.

The biggest mistake that small businesses make is to be undercapitalized. "They think they will make it big in a few years and it doesn't happen. They don't have enough financing to carry them through that period of time. You must use good business practices, make wise decisions."

In addition to giving community workshops, Ms. Stash works with many corporations in implementing training and mentoring programs. For example, Ms. Stash has been involved with APS in their effort to start a small business incubator program. Lorri Highet is Manager of Minority and Women Owned Business Development at APS. She has created what is called the APS Academy. "Two years ago, we went through a lengthy selection process to choose 6 MWBE companies of a commercial nature that were certified. We asked them to make a two-year commitment. We provide mentoring, training workshops, and individual training. We help to educate them as to APS is and how to best work with us." This program has been so successful, that they have just selected 5 more companies to mentor.

Ms. Highet has been extremely pleased with the support that is available through the city and state. "We have a good partnership and rely a lot on them. As with most corporations, we are shrinking the number of suppliers we use. We don't want to shrink out the number of MWBEs we need to work aggressively with suppliers to make sure that doesn't happen."

SRP is another company that is offering impressive support to MWBEs. They started their program three years ago. According to Dave Olsen, "We wanted to provide procurement opportunity for women and minority business. We aggressively work to find businesses that can provide what we need at a competitive price. It's a growth opportunity for businesses."

"We've had success stories in every area. We have women involved in construction, canal lining, trenching companies, programmers." We are committed to providing procurement opportunities with SRP; trying to do more business with them; and trying to be a resource for these businesses to grow and develop."

SRP offers a series of open houses. "It's an opportunity for suppliers to meet the buyers, learn about buying practices and the vendors list. (For information on their next seminar, contact Joyce Church at 236-8771.)

Lupe Barto is Western Regional Manager for Bank One. "We started focusing on women entrepreneurs a few years back and this is something that we are still committed to. Banks consider women to be good lending partners, and good suppliers to the bank. We are advocates for MWBE development."

According to Ms. Barto,

"To survive, MWBEs must stay in tune with what is going on in corporate America.

They must seek out the purchasing department manager, talk to the people who sign the contracts.

They need to research who's who at each corporation they want to deal with.

The Department of Commerce offers a directory listing of every advocate and every purchasing manager.

They do a great job."

David Mitchell is Director of Purchasing for America West Arena. "We have a system for tracking in our accounting office that flags minority and women owned businesses that we use. We have a positive approach for including MWBEs and giving them every opportunity to bid. Sometimes we are able to use them and sometimes not." Mr. Mitchell uses the directories from the Equal Opportunity Office and from Maricopa County. America West Arena hosts the Shop Arizona First Expo every year. This event has grown steadily since it began in '93.

The biggest mistake that small businesses make is to be under capitalized.

A recent press release, from the Small Business Administration, states that America's 23 million small businesses employ more than 50 percent of the private workforce, generate more than half of the nation's gross domestic product, and are the principal source of new jobs in the U.S. economy.

On the local scene, MWBE programs have made strides to help minorities and women reach their full potential on the job and in the business ownership area.

Editor's Note:
With this article, AZWN begins a series on MWBE programs in the state.

Each issue will feature a corporate or state entity with details regarding the products and services they buy from MWBE's and how to apply.

If your business has a MWBE program, we would like to hear from you.

Also, if your organization is holding an open house or other forum to expose MWBE owners to your procurement needs, please let us know.

We are happy to promote these programs.

TRAVEL

By Callie Calcote

Choosing an Adventure Trip That's Right for You

When you think of travel what comes to mind? Luxuriating on the beaches of Hawaii or a leisurely Caribbean cruise? Perhaps a motorcoach tour of Europe. Well the times they are a changin'!

The next time you plan a vacation, think adventure! Adventure travel is the fastest growing segment of the travel industry. Just as women are participating in major sports, so too are they pursuing active vacations. Though commonly thought of as hard core, adventure travel encompasses a diversity of trips: leisurely walks throughout Europe, bicycling in the California wine country and catamaran safaris in the Galapagos. At the more adventurous end of the spectrum, trekking in the Himalayas, rafting the rivers of Costa Rica and Gorilla tracking in Uganda.

How do you choose an adventure trip that's right for you? First, narrow your focus by asking yourself a few questions.

1. What type of adventure am I looking for? Adventure travel companies offer just about everything: walking, hiking, bicycling, trekking, mountaineering, sea kayaking, and river rafting to name a few. Some trips allow you to choose rustic cabins or camping if you're more adventurous, or inn, hotel, or villa stays if you prefer a more comfortable and luxurious overnight stay.

Trips can be as short as a weekend getaway, or as long as two to three weeks or more. Personalized assistance is provided by the adventure company to help you evaluate which trip would be most suitable for you.

2. What level of challenge am I looking for? Adventure travel encompasses all skill levels, from beginner to expert. Trip leaders will provide instruction to the beginner, or challenge experienced adventurers to bring their skill to a new level.

Each trip is rated according to level of difficulty: easy, moderate, strenuous, for example. For hiking, bicycling, and trekking, terrain is given for each trip, such as level, gently rolling, or hilly. For sea kayaking and river rafting, the class of rapids is given according to degree of difficulty. Some trips even have varying degrees of difficulty allowing you and your travelling companion to participate on the same trip even if you have different levels of skill.

3. Where do I want to travel? Trip itineraries span the globe from Arizona to New Zealand. If your time is limited to a weekend, you can choose a trip close to home such as a Colorado River canoe trip or a three-day bicycling trip through the California wine country. If you've always dreamed of exploring the European or Asian countryside, there are many options to consider.

Unlike a motorcoach tour, an adventure trip will allow you to take a closer, more personal look at your chosen destination. Every continent, even Antarctica has an adventure waiting!

4. What are my interests? Adventure trips can be combined with cultural or geologic interests such as exploration of ancient civilizations and wonders of the world. Or perhaps you're interested in a culinary or nature and wildlife-oriented trip. Whatever your interests, there are many options to choose from.

So the next time you go on a vacation or just a weekend getaway, kick off your shoes and trade them for Teva's or Hi-Tec's and turn it into an adventure!

THE BEGINNING GARDENER

By Jayme Canaday

Frost Protection

Every winter, homeowners subject themselves to an avoidable occurrence: losing plants to frost. Unforeseen costs include plant replacement value, pruning expenses, decreased property value, and increased fertilizer and water expenses (to baby damaged plants).

When the weather cools, the soil absorbs the warming sun rays during the day and radiates heat back into the sky at night. The amounts of absorption and radiation vary with elevation and environment. Hot air rises and cool air settles in low spots. Areas with lots of concrete (walls, buildings, walkways) absorb and reflect more heat. Cloudy and breezy nights are the warmest, and pose the least threat of frost because clouds can re-radiate heat back to the soil and breezes allow the ascending warm and descending cool air to mix.

Frost harms plants in several ways, and some plants are more sensitive than others. Young citrus is quite vulnerable, but Acacias are not. Freezing temperatures can cause expansion, then rupturing of cell walls, the effects of which are sometimes seen in citrus fruit. Frost on the leaves of tender plants draws moisture from them, and subsequent dehydration. Plants sensitive to frost may experience dormant bud and young shoot dieback, fruit and flower damage.

Generally, younger and actively growing or flowering plants are the most vulnerable. Plants which are dehydrated, diseased or suffering from pest damage, may also be more susceptible. Of course, plants have their own mechanism for beating off frost: dormancy. As days shorten and cool, plants slow their growth; and, since actively growing tissue is most susceptible, those which go dormant are least affected.

Help "harden off": We can encourage dormancy through hardening off (gradual acclimation to changing weather) as follows: GRADUALLY decrease watering schedules to eventually be 1/4 to 1/2 that of summer, by mid-winter. However, water evenly and do not stress plants. Apply fertilizers higher in Phosphorous (P) and potassium (K), and lower in Nitrogen (N). This will encourage root growth and strength, preparing the plant for its spring flush of growth, yet will discourage leafy (above soil) growth.

Manage heat around plants: Plants can be draped to protect them from temperatures as low as the 20's or 30's depending on the fabric and weave. To drape, cover the plant to the ground with paper or fabric - not plastic. Foliage touching the drape is more sensitive to frost, so frame the drape over the plant. Don't gather the drape around the trunk or stem: the intention is to trap radiating heat from the soil, so the drape should cover the plant out to the drip line, touching the soil, and leaving no gaps for air to escape.

Drapes should be removed in the morning when the air underneath them has warmed to fifty degrees. Leaving plants covered longer could encourage them to come out of dormancy, begin active growth, causing worse damage, even death. Heat can be added under the drape by hanging a 100 watt bulb below the foliage, allowing the heat to rise. A trickle of running water to the soil during the coldest hours (daybreak) adds heat, which is released as the water cools. Three nights in the row is the maximum for this application, to avoid overwatering. Wrap the trunks of young citrus and other frost sensitive trees loosely with multiple layers of weatherproof material (cloth or paper) from ground to lower branches from November to February, removing after danger of frost has passed.

Mulches are not recommended since they prevent the warming of the soil. Don't prune frost damaged plants until all danger of frost has passed. The dead matter protects the rest of the plant from further damage; and, pruning often stimulates new growth.

Hardy plants for the desert include these trees, which can tolerate temperatures in the teens: Acacias and Palo Verde's, Desert Willow, Ironwood, Texas Ebony and Mesquite. These shrubs are also good choices: Desert and Mexican Bird of Paradise (Red Bird of Paradise is more frost tender), Pink Fairy Duster, some Cassias, Little Leaf Cordia, most Daleas, Hop Bush, the Texas Rangers (Leucophyllum family), some Salvias, Texas Mountain Laurel, Globe Mallow, Arizona Yellow Bells and Arizona Rosewood. The best desert groundcovers include: the Evening Primroses, Blackfoot Daisy, Gazania, Desert Marigold, Rosemary, and some Verbena.

Homebuyers can avoid frost related costs by planting frost tolerant, desert-adapted plants in their yard and placing frost tender varieties in protected locations. Any good landscaper or nurseryman can help. If you have a landscaped yard which looks more like Hawaii than Arizona, consider converting it, section by section, or plant by plant, to desert adapted species.

"It's like a little credit card that changes the password every 60 seconds."

Ms. Crinnian has 25 years of experience with programming, systems analysis and data center management. Her MIS degree is from Colorado State University. Her expertise is in assisting organizations in reaching their marketing and growth goals through the use of information technology.

Although she had solid industry experience, finding the right resources to assist her in starting her company was essential to her success. Ms. Crinnian started her business during the recession, when the hottest thing was e-mail. They offered proprietary and group lines. "It was a very tough year. Then the Internet came on the scene and our business grew and has been on a continual rise upward."

For help with building her business plan, she relied on Pima Community College, Maricopa Community College and the Small Business Development Center. "When you make your business plan, you can't rely on what you did well in last year. In the IS business, you have to stay right on top of what is happening. Everything can change in 3-6 months and if you don't change with it you can be left in the dust."

Susan Crinnian

For networking and marketing support, Ms. Crinnian has worked closely with Jan Vacek Stash, Director of the MWBE Department of Commerce for the state. "Jan has been very helpful in offering assistance in how to progress and grow the business. Her department has helped me to feel not so alone. You need someone to share with for moral support. Jan is great, she always returns phone calls."

The Department of Commerce offers connections to other businesses and networking options to expanding your business. "They introduced me to key purchasing staff at Honeywell and APS, among others. They helped CCI get in front of the purchasing staff and meet people we would not have been able to meet otherwise. They were invaluable in the beginning stages of meeting people."

According to Ms. Crinnian, the biggest challenge in starting her business was in getting the first references. "And, it took a few failures for me to learn how to hire employees."

She feels that the state, city, county and federal offices are as helpful as they can be. "The support is definitely there. It's up to individuals to seek them out and get educated."

"We never use the fact that we're a women owned business as a lead-in to getting new business. We don't even mention it. The local government is supportive, but you still have to stand on your own capabilities."

"If your dream is to start a business, you should try it. It takes a certain mentality to be able to be in business for yourself. You'll be able to identify very quickly if you are suited to it. This is a great industry for women, it allows them to get out on their own. You can compete."

CCI Network's business has doubled this year and their goal is to quadruple their business for next year. (For more information about CCI Networks, look up their website at www.ccinetworks.com)

TO YOUR HEALTH!

The Anti-Inflammatory Diet

by Jan Perozeni, DC

Research has consistently found that eating a healthy diet is one of the most important things we can do to maintain or improve our health. Diet is particularly important in the treatment of inflammatory conditions. Inflammatory conditions include a variety of the arthritic conditions (Rheumatoid Arthritis, Psoriasis, Ankylosing Spondylitis, Reiters Syndrome), Systemic Lupus Erythematosus, Progressive Systemic Sclerosis, inflammatory bowel conditions, tendonitis, bursitis and local sprains and strains.

Inflammation is a condition that indicates tissue damage is occurring. The classic signs of inflammation are local redness, swelling, heat, pain and loss of function. The events of inflammation are started and regulated by a number of chemical mediators. Overall, decreasing inflammation is a balance between increasing substances that reduce inflammation and decreasing substances that promote inflammation.

An anti-inflammatory diet is a nutritious diet that promotes those foods that tend to decrease inflammation. Many patients with inflammatory conditions find relief when positive diet changes are made. Let's discuss some anti-inflammatory diet hints. If these suggestions conflict with an already prescribed diet, consult a health practitioner for clarification.

Decreasing or eliminating red meat, cold cuts, frankfurters, sausage, canned meats, shellfish and eggs is a major step in reducing the substances that promote inflammation. Increase intake of chicken, turkey, all legumes, dried peas and lentils, and cold water fish such as salmon, halibut, mackerel and trout. An essential fatty acid (EFA), omega-3 is the best natural inflammation fighter and is found in cold water fish. Consider tofu and tempeh. These soybean products are a complete protein, containing all essential amino acids. Decrease or eliminate all dairy products, including milk, cheese, ice cream and non-dairy creamers. The antigens in cow's milk may contribute to inflammation, especially in cases of Rheumatoid Arthritis and Osteoarthritis. Substitute dairy products with rice milk, nut milk or soy beverages. Increase intake of pure water. Unless you are on a fluid restriction, drink at least 8 large glasses of water each day to maintain hydration and to flush out the various toxins and by-products of metabolism.

Increase consumption of fresh, raw or lightly steamed vegetables and fruits. Good fruit choices include apples, bananas, grapes, mangoes, papayas, peaches, pears, prunes, kiwis. Do use discretion if there are possible problems with elevated blood sugar. Good vegetable choices include asparagus, spinach, zucchini, parsley, artichoke, kelp and other sea vegetables, okra, snow peas, carrots. Some research indicates that those who suffer from arthritis may decrease inflammation by avoiding the Nightshade family of vegetables. Nightshade family includes tomatoes, eggplant, white potatoes, red and green peppers, cayenne, pepper, paprika and tobacco. Avoid vegetables that are canned, creamed or in casseroles. For snacks, consider raw vegetables, fruits, nuts and seeds. Raw nuts and seeds are rich in essential fatty acids.

Remember other healthful suggestions. Every positive change we make will enhance our health and well-being. Eat a balanced meal. Decrease saturated fats, refined sugar and caffeine. Take time to enjoy your meals. Get adequate rest. Promote a positive attitude. Maintain good spinal health. Your nervous system controls your physical and mental well-being and good spinal health promotes a healthy nervous system.

VISIONARIES

Denise Meridith

A Woman With Vision

Denise Meridith is the new Executive Director of the Greater Phoenix Black Chamber of Commerce. She accepted this exciting appointment to help the African American business community to gain increased exposure, education and credibility in the thriving Arizona marketplace.

Denise has been with the Department of Interior's Bureau of Land Management for 25 years. She has been the State Director for the BLM for the last four years. It is customary for BLM employees to take sabbaticals to work in other industries.

Denise decided she was ready to take another sabbatical and put the word out. She was approached with several opportunities, one of which was the Executive Director position for the Greater Phoenix Black Chamber of Commerce.

AZWN: What is your position now?

DM: I am the AZ State Director of the Bureau of Land Management. Here in AZ we have 14 million acres of public lands. Our primary responsibilities are recreation and tourism which includes overseeing camp grounds, hiking trails, rivers, RV parks, the copper mining industry, live stock grazing, and wild life habitat restoration. I direct this. We have eight offices here in Arizona. I have 550 employees, with an annual budget of 28 million. What I do is try to make that all happen.

AZWN: How did you get into this area?

DM: My degree was in Wildlife Biology at Cornell University. At the time BLM was the only one that would hire me. I was the first woman that BLM hired back in 1973. And I've been here ever since.

AZWN: You will be leaving here for a year to take over the Greater Phoenix Black Chamber of Commerce, how did you come to this?

DM: When I got my 25-year plaque this year, I decided it was time to try something different. I've done a lot of community work here. I'm on the Girl Scouts Board of Directors, the Black Board of Directors, I've worked with the Boys & Girls Club and started some programs, such as Wonderful Outdoor World, here locally for children. So I have a lot of visibility in the community.

I let people know I was interested.

I wasn't sure of the timing but I knew I would be available in the near future for a sabbatical.

The offer came from Mayor Rimza's office because they work closely with the Black Chamber. The Board sent me a letter of invitation and it was an offer too good to refuse.

AZWN: Why were you invited for this position coming from government, instead of someone coming from a business background?

DM: Both the board members and the Mayor say that it's based on skills and ability. I have very good organizational skills. I started several offices within the government.

I've done a lot of community work and I know what the needs are.

For me personally, I've always been interested in business. I've run my agency to be efficient like a business. BLM is one of the few money-making organizations within the government.

AZWN: What is your vision for the Greater Phoenix Black Chamber of Commerce?

DM: Since I don't have a lot of time (11 months), I have to make my goals practical and realistic. As President I want to increase the visibility and viability of black businesses here in town.

Denise P. Meridith

There are 5 - 7 thousand black businesses in Phoenix. I want to help them to know each other.

The common question I get is why do we need a black chamber? The answer is African Americans come from a very different background in history in this country and we didn't grow up in the business community. Whereas a lot of Anglo people have a brother who is a lawyer or an uncle in import/export and they have a support basis for that information and knowledge that helps them get started.

African Americans are starting from scratch. They are the first ones in their family to go to college or the first ones to buy a business on their own.

So they don't have that background information that they need and that's available to a lot of other people. We hope to fill that gap and provide that information to support black businesses.

I'm going to focus on establishing credibility for the group, provide the exposure to the black businesses, have networking socials, setup an office - I'll be recruiting for my replacement, and create a 5-year plan that will get us started.

For more information on the Greater Phoenix Black Chamber of Commerce, contact Denise Meridith at 631-6928.

Doris Polite is the Executive Director for the Tucson Black Chamber of Commerce. For information on the Tucson Black Chamber of Commerce, call 520-623-0099. Or visit their website at: http://www.tucson.com/Black_Chamber/INDEX.HTML.

VISIONARIES

Peace on Earth

by Margot Dorfman, M. Ed., M. Div.

How can we generate peace on earth if we cannot find peace within? This is the season for peace. Yet the pressures of life escalate through the merriment of the season. To create this vision of peace on earth, we must first bring peace to ourselves. Finding peace within is a delicate balance between body, mind and spirit. Here are a few tips to bring you peace through the holidays.

Remember your priorities.

Stay focussed on what is most important to you, choosing only activities which are in alignment with your priorities. Eliminate distractions which pull you off course.

Take care of your body by treating it lovingly.

Exercise regularly, eat healthy meals, and get enough rest. Stay away from too many holiday goodies. Substitute your own fresh fruits, vegetables and other nutritious snacks. When your body feels good, you also feel good mentally.

Mind your mind.

Maintain a positive attitude no matter what. Start each morning by setting your intention and creating a vision of your perfect day. Should you begin to feel upset, take a deep breath, and look for the bright side. Standing in a long line could be a perfect opportunity to network with someone new. A delayed business meeting could give you more time to prepare.

Nourish your spirit.

Take time out to do what you love - whether it's claiming your first hour of the day to read the newspaper in silence while have your coffee or volunteering to work with the elderly. Participating daily in whatever your passion is will rejuvenate you, giving you the energy you need for the rest life's requirements.

And finally, Keep It Super Simple.

Choose the path of least resistance. When you are barraged with holiday parties and other activities, choose what is easiest to do and what would give you the most joy. Graciously decline those activities which are not in alignment with your priorities and are too difficult to schedule.

You may have your own solutions for maintaining inner peace. Remember to practice them frequently.

When we feel peace within, we are balanced and centered, the inconveniences of life can be kept in perspective. Our feeling of inner-peace will spread to others. As a pebble in a pond, the ripples will expand outwards to encompass the whole.

Book Reviews

THE FIRST TIME

by Cher as told to Jeff Coplon (Simon & Schuster, $25)

Sonny and Cher made the music that filled the house I grew up in, and I vividly remember my sister recreating the comedic routines from their variety show on the way to the bus stop every morning. This autobiography reads like a monologue, with Cher reminiscing about the early days, the ups and downs of her career, her marriages and children. She talks about coping poorly with the news of daughter Chastity's sexuality, and how the death of Sonny affected her. There's also gossip from the movie sets she's worked on, and anecdotes aplenty.

THE COLLECTOR OF HEARTS

by Joyce Carol Oates (Dutton, $24.95) Gothic horror is as precise as haiku, as exact as iambic pentameter. It's not for seekers of cheap thrills or graphic violence. Gothic horror is largely intellectual—it's all atmosphere and suggestion. Prolific author Joyce Carol Oates returns to the genre of Gothic horror that worked so successfully in HAUNTED. This is a brand new collection of short stories designed to tingle your spine and keep you awake at night.

ON WOMEN TURNING 60: Embracing the Age of Fulfillment

(Three Rivers Press, $15) This is the third installment in Cathleen Rountree's "decade" series. As in the other books, she's interviewed twenty vibrant and energetic women who openly discuss their thoughts and feelings on the milestone of reaching 60. The interviewees range from politicians and performers to psychologists and nuns. The women talk about their careers in the face of retirement, grown children and grandchildren, marriage and divorce.

THEY CALL ME MAD DOG

(Simon & Schuster, $20) by Erika Lopez picks up where last year's FLAMING IGUANAS (Simon & Schuster, $10) left off. Both novels feature the brassy Tomato Rodriguez, the Puerto Rican devil girl who blows through towns on her motorcycle looking for love. This is a down and dirty, no holds barred narrative. Lopez writes openly about sex and love and life on the open road. Her characters never slow down when they see obstacles in the road—they ride right over them. Take it for a spin.

THE BREAST CANCER PREVENTION DIET

by Dr. Bob Arnot (Little, Brown, $24) For years, doctors have been investigating the relationship between breast cancer and diet. Dr. Arnot's new book is designed to offer a sensible diet that will help guard against the onset of breast cancer as well as maintain the health of breast cancer survivors. Whether you have a history of breast cancer in your family or are seeking a program to improve or insure your health, this book can help you.

Well-Balanced Living!

It just takes a little practice...

"A good psychological balance is struck when the will and the emotions are rightly poised. That is, when the intellect first decides what the emotions are to respond to."

Dr. Ernest Holmes

That was interesting. There were a lot of things that came together. The Republic did a beautiful front page business section spread about my retirement from banking and that created a lot of interest. People called me to talk.

Then I sat down with Joe Reed. He told me about what he was doing and his philosophy. The chemistry was really right. I told him quite honestly, 'I'm not going to do banking anymore. It's been very good to me. I've learned a lot but I'm not going to do this anymore.'

In his infinite wisdom, he said to me, 'If you were going to do it, where would you put the bank? And if you were going to do it, who would you put on your board of directors?' It was a great strategy. I was painting inside the numbers by the time we got done with the conversation.

"It was as if I built a house and this was the roof - the finishing piece."

AZWN: How did you take the step from established banking to a more entrepreneurial organization?

BR: That was a question I had - how successful would I be if I were truly out there on my own? I do have a whole new respect for entrepreneurs. I learned a lot along the way when I finally made the decision to do it. I sat down, and did an analysis of everything I had done.

It was as if I built a house and this was the roof - the finishing piece. If I'm going to retire from a place, wouldn't it be swell to take advantage of all the things I've learned in the industry, all the relationships I've built, all the community activities I've done, and put that together in an environment where I could build something? I could revel in its success, and honestly say I made a difference.

That's always been a driver for me - am I making a difference? Am I making a contribution or just taking up space? This was one of those things that every angle I looked at it from, the answer was yes. This means you're going to have an opportunity to create something that has a real value to be something you can walk away from it - whenever that is.

I can say I took it from zero to whatever it is. And that felt good to me. It felt important to me. Some of the positions I had I knew were important jobs and had big roles to play, but it wasn't going to be mine when I finished.

AZWN: From the point you signed to bringing it to fruition, how did you deal?

BR: I found myself every night thinking this was the most exciting and the most frustrating day of my life. And it didn't matter what happened yesterday. The next day was even bigger, better, and different.

The biggest issue for me was raising capital. The holding company raised 50% of the capital which meant I still had to raise $2.2 million. I learned a lot about myself in that process which was a valuable piece for me. First of all, I learned how extensive my network really was and that was very satisfying.

I also learned how hard it is to ask for someone to invest in you personally. I've asked them to build cancer centers and invest in breast cancer research and all kinds of things in this community, but never have I gone out and said I've got a great idea and I think you should be part of it. That was a very stressful time. That was probably the toughest time for me.

The other things were just a matter of working them through.

I believe things happen for the right reasons and I would encounter this immovable force - I knew there must be something else going on. I can't say I didn't get frustrated because I did - but I didn't throw up my arms. I knew there was something else I needed to be looking at, maybe approach differently. There was an opportunity out there.

AZWN: Tell me about your vision of a community bank.

BR: As part of the Arizona holding company that I joined, we will never be anything other than this bank at this location. We will not branch. Should we collectively decide that there's a need for a bank at another location, we'll hire another bank president, and create another bank with its own board of directors and its own strategy so it can serve its community just like we serve ours.

"I found myself every night thinking this was the most exciting and the most frustrating day of my life."

The thing that's been most interesting is that community is not necessarily defined geographically. It's defined by the people who choose to do business in our environment, and by the way we do business. Our customers know the banker; they can call and we know who they are. We can deal with whatever their issue is right at the moment.

The difference in our philosophy is that we are totally independent. Today when I decide what the rates are going to be for the week, I don't call anybody. If a customer comes shopping for a home equity loan and they got a great rate someplace else, if I can match it I will. For me coming out of the banking systems, it's the perfect world. I can stay focussed on the customer.

AZWN: How does this affect women in business?

BR: One of the things I heard frequently when I first made the decision to do this is that I was opening a women's bank because I'm the only woman running a community bank in the marketplace.

AZWN: What does it mean for the women in the community?

BR: My goal when I began was to make this environment where women who own their own businesses would feel comfortable coming in, sitting down with a loan officer or with me, and talking about how to leverage their business. Most of the women I know who have become entrepreneurs have funded their businesses with equity in their homes, and/or credit cards, and/or an angel or family resources.

What I hope to accomplish is to have women come in when they are looking to take their businesses to the next level and grow that business. Women who are ready to do that first line of credit or understand what it means to grow to that point, and they'll view us as consultants instead of somebody who is just going to say yes or no to a loan request.

The best thing that happens is when someone comes in that has a business circumstance and is looking for the best way to proceed. We talk about alternatives, like a SBA loan or a city program loan. Are they strong enough financially to be bankable as a stand-alone company, and if not, why not? What do they need to do? What are their next steps to move from what's been internally funded to a company that's going to be able to take advantage of growth opportunities when they present themselves. That's my goal for women in business.
