Build a better city ordinance and the wackos will beat a path to your (meeting-room) door

Hearing Impaired

Attending the Phoenix Human Relation Commission's massive hearing last month was both an exhilarating and demoralizing experience.

Tackling the fourth and most controversial proposed addition to the city's anti-discrimination ordinance—prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation in employment and public accommodations—the commission's public hearing attracted some 1,000 spectators, many of whom took the opportunity to testify. According to news reports and my own observation, somewhere between two-thirds and three-fourths of the crowd favored the extension of these civil rights protections to Phoenix's lesbian and gay citizens.

The three other categories that proposed additions to the ordinance would cover are marital status, military status, and disability. (Former city councilwoman Linda Nadolski, who originally proposed amending the ordinance late last year during the final days of her tenure, as much as admitted that these other categories were included to deflect attention away from the sexual orientation issue. Predictably, that attempt was unsuccessful.)

by Don Slutes

Most of the lesbian/gay community's notables showed up at the March 26 hearing, and a successful information campaign sponsored by political groups and two of the community's newspapers brought out hundreds of what might be called rank-and-file queers.

That was the exhilarating part.

Less uplifting was the parade of rhetorical gay-bashers who got up to denounce the proposed change. (Speakers were arrayed in a strict pro-and-con format, with each allowed three minutes to state their case.) Not surprisingly, few detractors heeded the instruction to address the narrow issue at hand, the rest preferring to air the gamut of their deeply held opinions about homosexuality. Most of these betrayed ignorance and animosity so ingrained that I doubt any amount of enlightened education could affect it.

That was the demoralizing part.

I stayed for only the first two hours of what turned out to be a five-hour marathon, but I doubt I missed anything. The opposing sides made their points early on; the rest was reiteration. And, as usual, almost all the criticism of homosexuality centered on the physical rigors and immorality supposedly inherent in promiscuous male behavior. Speakers all but ignored non-promiscuous gay men (they don't actually exist, of course) and lesbians. The exclusion of women from attacks on homosexuality is common in these sorts of proceedings; in this overwhelmingly male-dominated culture, the juiciest sins belong to men.

Although admonished to stifle reactions, the predominately pro-gay audience tittered and groaned during especially rash remarks. One such eruption followed the assertion by Kathi Herrod, representing the Concerned Women for America, that there is "no evidence that homosexuals have been discriminated against like racial minorities or women." Herrod, a frequent spokesperson for CWA's fiercely anti-gay agenda, went on to characterize homosexuality as "freely chosen behavior," claiming that the average homosexual is a health risk and a poor role model. Employers should have the right to refuse hiring them, she concluded. In using a day-care center as her example, Herrod implicitly invoked the specter of the homosexual child molester, without mentioning, of course, that the overwhelming majority of known incidents of child molestation involve victims of the opposite gender from the perpetrator.

The equally ubiquitous Rev. Cosentino—while he wasn't lurking around videotaping the proceedings and, ominously, the audience—delivered two podium-thumping anti-gay diatribes disguised as loving advertisements for Jesus Christ. (Cosentino was allowed to read a message from one of his followers, who for health reasons was unable to attend in person.) The Reverend, by the way, has coined a delightful new word for homosexual unions: "abominationships."

"As a white heterosexual male who runs a business," testified white heterosexual male businessman C.R. Smith, "I know all about discrimination." Smith opposed the proposal because he feared it would spoil Phoenix's economy. "People move to Phoenix to find good, old-fashioned American values," Smith said.

More fascinating news came in the testimony of David Bradshaw, who purports to host a talk show redundantly named "World View Perspective." In a statement rife with dubious assertions about the probable effects of the proposal, Bradshaw claimed that businesses must be able to ban homosexuals (read: AIDS carriers) from food-handling jobs because "it's a known fact that body fluids find their way into foods [served in restaurants]." This blatant, outrageous lie provoked the loudest audience response yet.

"Concerned mother" Kim Slater was concerned enough to get up and speak about the activities of the North American Man-Boy Love Association. Members meet to exchange ideas about the best places to pick up young boys, Slater said. No doubt the very idea of an organization like NAMBLA is a little disturbing to most of us, but I wonder what Kim Slater's point was. Was it that all gay men belong to this organization? That the existence of this organization is a rationale for denying equal rights to lesbians and gay men? Here, perhaps, the depth of ignorance was saddest. This woman was not a screaming homophobe, but she had undoubtedly heard something that bothered her, and instead of putting it in perspective, allowed it to color her judgment about a whole, diverse group of people. This is how every discriminatory impulse toward any group starts.

During my attendance at the hearing, I witnessed the testimony of two young men, both somewhat effeminate in their mannerisms, who each claimed to oppose the measure on behalf of their close personal friends who happen to be homosexual, and whose lives are filled with misery. In a way, the words of these two closet cases provided the most poignant moments of the hearings.

Another speaker, a black male, represented the viewpoint of many civil rights workers that the inclusion of the lesbian/gay agenda not only damages the overall cause of civil rights for blacks, women, etc., but also offends many members of these groups. The speaker restated the assumption that homosexuality is a "chosen behavior" rather than an innate, inviolable quality, like race. On that point he was wrong, of course, but one issue here is well taken: whereas your average black person cannot escape being recognized as such and cannot subsequently avoid being subject to discrimination, the average homosexual can easily conceal that fact, eluding the overt ramifications. The argument is essentially bankrupt, however. Why should any group be denied equality for any reason? And just because most lesbians and gay men have the option of burying this liability, why should they have to? The issue isn't who has the most compelling claim to civil rights protection; it's that no-one should have to suffer for a single characteristic that has little or no bearing on one's humanity. The testimony may have been partly for the benefit of black councilman Calvin Goode—who was not in attendance and who lately has become a strong sympathizer of the lesbian/gay community's struggle for equal footing in Phoenix—as well as for the several black members of the Human Rights Commission.

The Commission will soon present its recommendation to the City Council, which is expected to vote on this issue in July. Mayor Paul Johnson has already stated his opposition to the addition of these categories to Phoenix's anti-discrimination ordinance, claiming that he's against placing additional "regulations" on business (this despite the fact that the business establishment overwhelmingly supports the measure). Johnson, who would obviously prefer that this issue simply go away, has staked a position on it that is clearly more of a political calculation than a "pro-business" conviction. When Mayor Johnson inevitably runs for re-election (or for some other office), we should remember this slight and exercise a little job discrimination of our own.

romanovsky and phillips answer really stupid questions

By their closest approximation, Ron Romanovsky and Paul Phillips have granted 4,913 magazine interviews during their long musical career. Despite this glut of media attention, Ron and Paul find themselves answering the same seventeen questions over and over again. Their press book is bulging, but how many different responses are there to "How did you get started in show business?" Ron and Paul must certainly have wearied of being asked about their musical influences and their favorite snack foods, yet these harmonious homos remain upright: They always answer each probing query truthfully. "I cannot tell a lie," Ron insists, as he explains to the umpteenth magazine writer that his favorite color is "misty plum." • In an attempt to reveal a never-before-seen side to these significant sissy singers, we've forsaken customary fan mag Q-and-A and insisted that Ron and Paul bare their souls to you, their faithful fans. We've posed fresh, innovative questions designed to disclose truly pertinent facets of their sonic psyches. Here, in this thinly disguised promotion for an upcoming concert, you will discover the final word on Ron Romanovsky and Paul Phillips. ▽

Why do you guys make music?

Paul: Because it's there.

Why are you queer?

Ron: Are these questions going to get stupider?

Name a Romanovsky and Phillips song you never want to perform again.

Paul: I can't imagine us singing "In The Outfield"—a song about Junior High—when we're 55.

How come you've never done a cover version of a Partridge Family song?

Ron: I really want to record "Point Me in the Direction of Albuquerque."

Paul: ...but there's no one to sing the Shirley Jones part.

Out someone.

Ron: No.

Paul: Under the right circumstances, I would out Jerry Falwell. Of course, Jerry Falwell could never, ever be gay. Even for a minute.

Do you answer all your own fan mail, like Joan Crawford did, or do you have a service do it for you, like Joan Blondell did?

Ron: Joan Crawford. Always like Joan Crawford.

Paul: Who's Joan Blondell?

Do you guys play with Barbies?

Paul: I used to. They were all burned up in the fire.

What fire?

Paul: The pretend fire.

How come no one understands this magazine?

Ron: It's too hip.
Paul: I don't know. I don't get it, myself.

Name the strangest place you've ever had sex.

Paul: At a subway stop in New York City.

Why do you live in Albuquerque?

Ron: We don't. We live in Santa Fe.

Did kids pick on you and call you "sissy" when you were little?

Ron: Yes. So I wrote about it. Stories at first, and then later on I wrote songs.

Paul: I'm proud to be a sissy. I wear it like a badge.

Where can I buy a Ron Romanovsky blow-up doll?

Paul: After every one of our concerts, they're available for sale in the lobby.

Why do heterosexuals have such bad taste?

Ron: No one knows. It's one of the great mysteries.

Paul: It's because they're heterosexual. They just can't help themselves. Style went to the queens.

What's the worst thing a critic has ever written about you?

Paul: I really hate it when writers refer to Ron as the "straight man" in our act. That's like the worst pun in the world. And they always write, "excuse the pun." It's so tired.

If you were a chair, who could sit in you?

Ron: Matthew Broderick.

What's the worst thing about being famous?

Paul: It's lonely at the top.

Can you think of anything worse than being heterosexual?

Paul: Not at the moment.

Tell me a lie.

Ron: I'm not really gay.
Paul: And I've never had sex in a subway station.

Interview by Perry Shurtz.

Romanovsky and Phillips will perform in concert at Kerr Cultural Center, 6110 N. Scottsdale Rd., on Friday, April 24 at 8pm. For tickets or more information, call 965-KERR or see the Culture Club listing on page 10 of this issue.

I had a funny adventure in the Temple. A note came from a barrister—in fact, a leading Queen's Counsel—to say that Mr. Inslip had mentioned my name to him as likely to oblige him in a certain way and would I be so good as to give him a call at his chambers at 4:30 p.m. next day.

Of course I went, and was shown into the private room of Mr. Horner, who I found had a young and cleanshaven man of about twenty-five with him.

He at once dismissed his clerk, with the observation "that she would not want him again to-day," and then, as soon as the door was closed, turned to me and said:

"Mr. Saul, I am much obliged that you answered my note so promptly. It is not that I require your services myself, but this gentleman here wants a good fucking."

"Awful! The man's mad! Pray let me out!" almost screamed the wide-eyed young gentleman in a fright, as he made a rush to the door.

"Stop him! Don't be a fool, man!" shouted Mr. Horner. "Didn't you come here to be fucked? Now just answer that question—yes or no—as we say in court. Tell Mr. Saul the truth."

The gentleman, lean, handsome and fair, covered his mouth in embarrassment, his face blushing a bright red, and began to sob.

"Well, I never! There's no understanding these men at all. No wonder I never got hold of one more than an evening's dalliance," exclaimed the Q.C. "Would you believe it? He came here to be fucked; I tell you the plain truth. I wanted a nice manservant, a free-and-easy one, that would humour me in anything I might fancy, and Mr. Wilson here answered my advertisement. We were some time beating about the bush, 'til at last I plainly told him he would have to stand fucking, and must come to my chambers one afternoon on trial. He should have fifty pounds if I did not engage him, and two hundred-a-year as manservant of this humble house-hold if he pleased me. My God, I sent for you to fuck him. I didn't mean to do it myself; the fact is that I require a very peculiar kind of excitement before I can get a cockstand. Now, Mr. Wilson, you understand this is a nice young fellow, far nicer than myself, and I'm damned if I won't see him fuck you! We'll have a glass of fizz first, and then to business."

We had the champagne, then opening a door into another room I saw a bed. He gave me a sign, and I moved over to help him start at stripping the frightened Mr. Wilson.

"Please, sirs," whimpered the poor young man, "stop this folly at once. I have decided to change my mind and withdraw any services toward the respectable Mr. Horner."

"Oh, be calm and be still," I chided, already working up a stiff one as I set to work at the button of his shirt collar. "You are with me now, Jack my friend; a veritable professional at matters such as these. And Mr. Horner was more than correct, as indeed I am much nicer than he. Any pain will come and go quickly, my dear virgin, and then you shall enjoy what happens thereafter most assuredly, and I can guarantee that."

"Ah!" cried Mr. Horner, with lecherous glee as he pulled Mr. Wilson's rising pego from his pants. "Just as I thought, long and fat and dressed in golden blonde hairs; this is more than the way I like them."

"Oh dear!" said Mr. Wilson, as the Q.C. slobbered a thick wet tongue up his rapidly inflating cock.

"Why hello down there," I sneered, drawing back upon all of those late-night phantasies I had in humiliating cousin Jerry, and how much that tickled my fancy. "I wonder if that bloating cock will become as red as that sheepish face of yours, Mr. Wilson?"

"Of course I am flush," he stammered. "I am mortified and half-faint with these proceedings. Do put a halt to them immediately, I say."

"Why, certainly a man whose flesh is so solidly packed with fresh and lean, youthful muscle could take a frail such as I, and an old man such as the one licking upon your balls," I taunted. "If this scene so dissatisfies you, why not make a breakaway and flee out of the door?"

"I do believe this flagrant cockstand does answer your question, young Jack," grinned Mr. Horner.

"Then it is settled," said I. "What we do have here is a whimpering, fair-haired, genuine Mary-Ann; and so fresh and new this late in the game. I should enjoy popping this tremendous prick of mine into that sweet little bum of yours, and I will pluck the bloom from that rosy little bud as surely as anything, shan't I, Mr. Horner?"

"Hmmm," murmured the clearly enthralled Q.C. "Now I do not know, and perhaps I am having a change of heart. May well it should be me who takes this man's fruit for the first time, as these things are rare privileges in this day and age."

"My dear Mr. Horner," I snapped. "A deal is a deal, as they say, and our business concerned this fresh and fair Mary-Ann to be fucked by none other than I, leastwise first. And think of it: You will get to lay eyes upon quite a spectacle of the taking, as I mean to lay into poor Mr. Wilson with the many thick inches at my command."

"Indeed?" said the Q.C. "Very well, but I must insist I take his first spend of the day, as it would seem I have very nearly got it."

Mr. Wilson was powerless in our hands, and when he was fully stripped I commenced to throw off all my clothes, while Mr. Horner was amusing himself, kissing and tickling his balls and gamahuching his cock 'til the poor young man was almost dead with shame, besides being so excited that he could hardly contain himself.

"Oh! Oh!! Oh, I am spending!" gasped Mr.

"Ah!" cried Mr. Horner with lecherous glee as he pulled Mr. Wilson's rising pego from his pants.

Wilson, as great gobs of pearly spend shot from his throbbing tube to land upon the floor or to be caught like cake frosting in Mr. Horner's moustache.

"Now jump up," he exclaimed, "and don't spare the randy bitch. He's spent all over my fingers!"

Mr. Wilson was too much overcome to attempt any resistance to my attack. He was slender and tight, and it would become a troublesome fit, but under his soft and pleading cries I soon got into possession of all he had and began to fire his blood still more by a good rapid fuck. And when the spending crisis came he was so carried away by these new and exquisite feelings that his arms held me almost like a vice, and he actually made his teeth meet in the fleshy part of my shoulder.

Mine was a most delightful position. I never enjoyed anything more than I did being sandwiched between him and Mr. Wilson. Not one of the three seemed anxious to bring such a delightful conjunction to a close, and Mr. Wilson did respond in the most amorous manner possible to the motions of my excited pego.

I was handsomely rewarded for my services, and the Q.C. took Mr. Wilson for his manservant, and I afterwards often went through the same performance with them at his residence in Palace Gardens, Kensington.

center stage

Minor Demons: Bruce Graham's two-act explores one man's obsession to "do the right thing" in spite of its moral and ethical ramifications. Deke Winters, a burned-out former mob lawyer, returns to his hometown hoping to do nothing more than write wills and handle divorces. Confronted with handling the defense of a guilty adolescent, Deke learns he can get him off on a technicality. However, to do so will destroy the career and life of his best friend, the Chief of Police, and may well pose a threat to society. April 18 through May 2, Centerstage at Works is located at 6615 W. Thunderbird Rd. 486-8636 or 979-9003.

Woman in Mind: British playwright Alan Ayckbourn's dark comedy explores one woman's solution to the bleakness of her reality. The play begins as Susan regains consciousness after stepping on a rake. She finds both her ideal family (champagne-drinking, immaculately dressed, witty, loving) and her real family (condescending, apathetic, stodgy, dull) vying for her attention. The Mill Avenue Performs production can be seen Thursdays through Saturdays at 8pm through May 2, as well as in two matinees at 2pm, Saturday, April 25 and Sunday, April 26 at Tempe Performing Arts Center. 132 E. 6th St. Tickets $10; $8 students and seniors. 921-7777.

Intimacies: This one-man play,

Herberger Theatre Center. Tickets $16-$25. 222 E. Monroe. 252-TIXS.

School for Scandal: Since 1777, Richard Brinsley Sheridan's deliciously naughty piece of nonsense has set tongues wagging about the nasty games Sheridan's people play on one another. Considered one of the great masterpieces of English comedy. Friday and Saturday, April 17 and 18; Thursday through Saturday, April 23-25, 8pm; Sunday, April 19 at 2pm in the Paul V. Galvin Playhouse. Tickets $8; $6 faculty and staff, $5 students and senior citizens. 965-6447.

Sojourner: Pat Sternberg and Dolly Beechum's historical work based on the life of 19th century civil rights advocate Sojourner Truth will be presented by ASU Theatre at 8pm Sunday through Tuesday, April 19 to 21, in Studio A of the Nelson Fine Arts Center. Tickets $4; $3 students. 965-6447.

The Way We Live Now and Jack: Two one-act plays concerning the AIDS crisis. Thursday through Saturday, April 23 to 25 at 8pm, and Sunday, April 26 at 2pm in Studio D22 of the Fine Arts Module at ASU West. Tickets $8; $5 seniors, $3 students. 543-ARTS.

The Miracle Worker: Helen Keller's real-life story is the basis for this dramatization of her relationship with mentor and teacher Annie Sullivan. Through April 18. Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays at 8pm, 2:30 and 7pm Sundays. Tickets $8, $9 and $10. Theater

Hello Muddah, Hello Fadduh: The hilarious musical revue based on the songs of Allan Sherman will reprise its sellout Herberger engagement at the beautiful new Playhouse on the Park in the Dial Corporate Center at Central and Palm Lane, in Phoenix' Arts District. Thursdays and Fridays at 8pm; Saturdays 6pm and 9pm; Sundays 2pm. An indefinite engagement. Tickets on sale now at the Phoenix Little Theatre box office, or call 254-2151.

For The Time Being Players: This all-women improvisational group gives weekly performances exploring life and comedy from a woman's perspective. Admission is $5. Saturdays at 8pm at Liza's Cafe, 1945 W. Baseline Rd. in Mesa. 838-7338.

Q-Fest: Social Distortion, Sugarcubes, Material Issue, Henry Rollins Band, Real People, Dramarama at 5:30pm April 11 at Desert Sky Pavilion. Tickets $10 and $8. 678-2222.

Christopher Columbus: Don White created this zany (and completely un-historical) piece in celebration of America's Bicentennial. Written to music by Jacques Offenback, White's "operetta outrageosa" is full of wild twists. Performance times: Friday and Saturday, April 17 and 18 at 7:30pm; Wednesday, April 22; Friday and Saturday, April 24 and 25; and Sunday, April 26 at 3pm. Tickets $10 and $5 students. 965-6447.

oral intercourse by girl tony zonies • arty parties • winkler's new stuff • lucy lamode's old muff • chris wynne in pants • anne thompson in a dress • gary naylor's jewelry • raymond shurtz' hat • guess who's coming on dinner?

Some people like a good game of chess, lotsa folks dig a rousing round of tennis, and there are even those who, when pressed, will admit to playing with Barbies for fun and relaxation. For my money, though, there's nothing quite so fun as trashing a bunch of people I barely know. So let's get started!...Ken "They Hate Me 'Cuz I'm Successful" Fisher has a new boyfriend. No one's actually seen the sterling young stud, but rumor has it that he's built for all the fun things that Kenny likes most to do—like playing croquet. Speaking of rumors and Ken Fisher, the tales being spread by a bunch of nasty vipers are just plain exaggerated. Despite sinister stories, Ken and company are prospering and having big fun—always the best revenge. Don't you just hate gossip?!...And wasn't Art Detour big huge fun?! I saw Amy "If It's Tuesday, This Must Be Belgium" Bowling's Mail Art Exhibit twice, mostly because Xeroxed penises are my faves, but also because it was just so darn groovy! Adrienne "Laughter In The Rain" Davis had a mystery gallery that couldn't be beat with a great big stick (I want her to design all my furniture!), and Chris Winkler's new figurative expressionist stuff at Ice House was a monster rage! All the truly important celebutants were out trolling artsplaces during this miraculous weekend d'art (that's French—don't you just adore foreign languages?), especially at Cate "What Are You Doing The Rest Of Your Life?" Spencer's and John "Rototiller Man" Chonka's Radix Street Cafe. Seen on that scene were Robert "Nicest Guy Alive" Adams and his lovely, ultra-pregnant wife Lynne, who has an "e" on the end of her name. Mel "Baby Bottles From Heaven" Roman showed up, as did house artists Mayme "Stop In The Name Of Love" Kratz and Jim "It's So Easy To Fall Downstairs" Cherry. Dwayne "Silverware Wrapped In Blue Handtowels" Stone and Joe "What's An Expediter?" Della Rocca rubbed elbows with Doug and Shay Patterson of Do Wah Diddy infamy, and Kim "Where's My Brown Hat With The Feather In It?" Moody, who abandoned his own roaring Alwun House shindig just long enough to drop in for a look-see. Elsewhere, digging the downtown scene, Girl spotted Michael "Ninety-Nine Cents Per Minute Plus Tolls If They Apply" Marlowe; Deon "Cool It With The Teeth Thang" Brown; Mike "Gimme The Lowdown, Slowdown" Tucker; Janet "Big Library Tales To Tell"

DeBerge and hubby Mike "I Met Fay Wray" Lange, on their way to Chicago for Janet's big post-Detour MARS opening; Dinah "At Last, Freedom" Alderman, whose studio recently hosted a bunch of homos and a wheel of cheese; Michael "I'll Have The French-Fried Mongoose" Schroeder; Bruce "I Warned You" Kurtz; Bill "Now That He's Gone, Let's Have A Party" Hardin, and famous artist Fritz "What Do You Mean, Guys In Dresses?" Scholder, who purchased select works by lucky local artisans (probably as next-holiday stocking stuffers)...There was no paucity of Peters at the Metropophobobia Detour 'do, where Girl was regaled by Life Garden and where she spotted Francine "Six Inches Off The Top" Ruley chumming with Chris "Chicken In The Acid" Winkler and Mike "I Was A Substitute Teacher On Another Planet" Miskowski. Next door at Anne "Best Plaid Dress" Thompson's and Rose "New Times Darling" Johnson's hopping kinda studio scene, I spotted David "That's The Way Uh-Huh Uh-Huh I Like It" Greenman pouring gallons of white wine; Lisa "Go Buy New Tires!" Colwell; Peter "Origami My Eye"

Petrisko; Dave "Tell It Like It Is" Kemp, and even Peter "I Promise Not To Take It Out" Kelly, who ditched the art scene and was later seen swilling joe with a monster at that nasty Arizona Center. Great big huge gigantic arty fun was the order of this stellar weekend, and we have Beatrice "I Gotta Get Arty" Moore to thank for it...So whaddya follow a weekend of swell art with? How about a night spilling over with stage stars in really ugly evening wear? Okay, so not everyone at the Second Annual Zony Awards was dressed in rags, but the fashion faux pas were enough to send the enormously sissified crowd running for cover. The Scottsdale Center event, designed to acknowledge the great and near great in local theater, was a big bash for the local thespian crowd, but a sorry scene for haute couture. Appropriately attired and full of good cheer were Lucy "Teenage Enema Nurse" LaMode; Christopher "It's A Jock Strap" Wynne (who all but stole Phoenix Little Theatre's recent Lend Me A Tenor out from under a swell cast); Brad "Kirby Who?" Craig (who snagged Best Supporting Actor honors and whose ex-boyfriend showed up with his new wife); Michael "Major Major Talent" Grady, who was honored with the very first Zony Lifetime Achievement Award; Elaine "Best Dressed" Boothby; Michael "Hubba Hubba" Santorico (oh, if only he were queer!); Kathy "Niceta Meetcha" Fitzgerald; Raymond "Ten Gallon" Shurtz; Max McQueen, whose generosity knows no bounds; Christopher "Look, Mal Long Pants!" McPherson, Heidi "Marry Me A Little" Ewart, who wowed us with her brunette tresses and her performance of "Blonde Song"; Kirby "Fight Ya For Him" Holt; Neil "Just Call Me Hedda" Cohen and his yummy new love thing Gray; Gary "47 Carats" Naylor, sporting more jewelry than Paul Johnson's; Tony "Tell Me What You Want And Nothing More" Hodges; Robert X. "I Know When You're Naked" Planet, whose "influence" on the success of Guv: The Musical did not go unacknowledged; Laurie "Out To There" Fagan, ready to give birth for the first and last time; Michael "Voices" Barnard, whose presence dampened the drawers of at least one local journalist; the ever-dapper Tom "That's No Gorgeous Italian, That's My Husband" Oldendick; the endlessly humpy J.J. Giannantonio (how come white folks never pronounce his name correctly?); the equally humpy, unfortunately heterosexual David "Suspenders" Barker; and Ev Mecham lookalike Dick Jonas, so sure he would take a Zony for looking like our fave ex-governor that he practically stormed the stage. By the time 2:00 a.m. rolled around, the post-Zony crowd had abandoned the boarded-up AZ88 and blasted off for a round of post-party parties. I'd tell you what happened next, but I've spilled enough sleazy slander to choke a mule, so instead I'll leave you hanging, go cash the teeny paycheck this column provides and blow myself to a tuna melt. Until next time, go fuck yourself.

Are Looks The Only Thing He Has That Kill?

Last year alone, over 70,000 men and women died from AIDS. Today there are an estimated 2,000,000 who could be infected without even knowing it.

So the next time you see someone you think is drop dead gorgeous, just keep that in mind.
