Editorial

The Tempe Collegian cordially welcomes both faculty and students to a glorious college year. The record of previous years shows a constant elevation in the character of this institution. Each entering class, inheriting from the many earlier classes their traditions and ideals, adds to these its own contribution. The students returning to continue their work this year are the custodians of the traditions and ideals built up by forty classes that in their turn have come and gone.

How are these real but intangible qualities bequeathed? By the process of living together.
