Sparks near chemical bins cause building evacuation

By VICKIE CHACHERE Staff Writer

The Life Sciences Center was evacuated early Monday when a florescent light fixture began to throw sparks and threatened to ignite several containers of highly explosive chemicals, the ASU fire marshall

Andy Anderson said ASU police were informed that the sparks were coming from the fixture, located in a walk-in refrigerator, at 11:16 a.m.

The refrigerator, located on the fifth floor, housed several highly explosive chemicals, including ether, that are used in classroom experiments, Anderson said.

a roof began to leak into the florescent light and the water acted as a conductor of electricity, Anderson said.

According to Dave Brixen, assistant director of the Physical Plant, recent storms may have enlarged a hole in the roof which caused the water damage.

"It is my understanding that a leaky roof was the culprit in this particular case," Brixen said.

Jay Golden, a spokesman for Anderson, said the ceiling and fixtures sustained only light damage, but the potential for a "major incident" did exist.

Anderson said the area was temporarily sealed off and the chemicals were moved to

'There was never any danger to the building's occupants. We evacuated the occupants just as a precautionary measure,' - Anderson.

"We saw what we had to extinguish, and as soon as we determined that, we checked the rest of the building for other fires," he said

Anderson said the Tempe Fire Department was called in to determine if the building was safe after the sparks were ex-

He said students returned to their classes shortly after the building was declared safe.

Anderson said ASU maintenance workers are in the process of repairing the light fix-

"The power has been turned off and the chemicals have been moved," he said. "The maintenance people are repairing (the light) now.

According to Brixen, repair costs for the light fixture are estimated at $150.

'The light and the socket were replaced, and that was the only damage," he said.

Legislator predicts $280-million ASU budget will pass

By TOM STINSON

Staff Writer

A $280-million ASU budget recommendation from Gov. Bruce Babbitt will probably be approved for the 1985-86 academic year, according to the chairman of a House appropriations sub-committee.

(ASU) will probably get what the governor recommended, plus a little more," said Rep. Jim Green, R-Tucson.

He said the budget recommendation is a 9 percent increase from the amount spent during fiscal 1984-85.

ASU is seeking $295 million for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1985. This total includes money appropriated by the Legislature, selling bonds and other sources of revenue like tinuation budget and a few of the new projects," Green said

Joe Smith, senior analyst with the Executive Budget Office, said $160 million of the $280 million requested must be appropriated by the Legislature.

He said the budget office began with a base amount of $153 million, the total expenditures of 1984-85, and added $5.47 million for annualization. Annualization compensates for the increased costs while remaining at the same level of opera-

The additional funds will allow the initiation of new programs and enhance existing ones, he said.

word processors, analysts and technicians, Smith said. He said nearly $480,000 is being requested for library computers and software to increase automation.

A Minority Student Affairs office will employ seven people and cost $208,000, he said.

Smith said the elimination of 76 faculty positions would result in $2.52 million being slashed from the budget.

Another reduction is based on a "1 percent vacancy factor" designed to account for money saved during the time an employee leaves a job and a replacement is hired, Smith

He said the vacancy factor will cut 1.2 million from the 1985-86 budget

Paige Mulhollan, executive vice president, told a House sub-committee Friday that the vacancy factor should not apply to ASU in the same way it applies to other state agencies.

He said the University has low personnel turnover because

New government positions to increase activities of senate

By KATY McGREGOR Staff Writer

The addition of six student government positions and strengthening of another will make the senate more active, the executive vice president said Monday.

Responsibilities have been increased for the position of legislative assistant, which has been temporarily filled by business freshman Bonnie Johnson, Brian LaCorte

The six new positions are three aides for Johnson, as well as a college council assistant who has two aides.

Johnson took over in December when her sister Mary, who held the job last semester, transferred to NAU.

Her brother Chuck, a sophomore at ASU, also held the legislative assistant job last

"It's an important position because the legislative assistant is accessible to the entire senate," LaCorte said.

Bonnie Johnson

The newest Johnson is being considered for the position along with other applicants. The final decision will be made Wednesday, LaCorte said.

In the past, the position hasn't been utilized to its full potential, according to LaCorte. Duties include helping implement the major projects of the executive vice president and keeping him informed of progress, he said. Johnson previously was the budgetary assistant and was replaced by Scott Risher, a junior in accounting.

Under LaCorte, the position of college council assistant has been created and filled by Amy Young, a junior in the College of Liberal Arts Young, who also serves as president of the Liberal Arts College Council, is coodinating College Council Awareness Week to promote the councils, LaCorte said.

LaCorte hopes to make this a permanent

He said the two different positions Young holds do not conflict because Young is not involved in "making any policy decisions" in ASASU

As college council assistant, Young has two aides to assist her, while the legislative assistant has three

The position of legislative aide is the only paid position.

In other ASASU news, LaCorte said he expects a "great deal of attention and concern" over senate bill 51, which would require that decisions by the ASASU Supreme Court be based solely on the its constitution and by-laws.

Several items on senate bill 54, which establishes the ASASU senate elections process, should provide an interesting senate debate, he said.

Senators will debate whether the dates of senate elections should be the same as ASASU executive elections.

Spending limits for senate candidates will also be a topic of discussion, LaCorte said.

Camorra members's trial largest in history of Italy

NAPLES, Italy (AP) - The trial of 251 suspected Camorra gang members and their alleged accomplices — including a nun and a priest - began Monday with police sharpshooters on guard and the defendants incarcerated in 20 cages in the courtroom.

Extraordinary security measures were in effect in and around Naples' Poggioreale Prison, where a windowless courtroom was built for the trial. Court officials called it Italy's largest criminal proceeding ever.

Bomb-detecting dogs patrolled inner hallways and police sharpshooters were posted on rooftops of buildings ringing the prison. Helicopters hovered over the area and lawyers and reporters were searched at the prison's gate.

To protect admitted mobsters turned police informers, authorities beefed up prison security with an additional 800-man force. Two of the 20 courtroom cages were reserved for the gangsters who turned state's evidence, known as "pentiti."

Monday's court session, dubbed "the trial of the century" by Neapolitan newspapers, is the first of three for 640 suspects arrested in the June 17, 1983 crackdown on the Nuova Camorra Organizzata.

All defendants are charged with criminal association, a catch-all charge used to prosecute suspected gangsters. Some are also charged with drug trafficking and extortion, and some could be sentenced to life in prison if convicted.

The first day was spent hearing a variety of motions from defense attorneys. The trial was adjourned until Thursday, and many of the defendants were returned to jail.

Weinberger condemns cuts in defense budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - Members of the Senate Armed Services Committee told Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger on Monday that Congress may try to cut by nearly half the spending growth proposed in the Pentagon's $277.5 billion budget.

Weinberger warned that such a reduction would imperil President Reagan's military buildup, remove Soviet incentives to negotiate seriously at nuclear arms talks, and might compel the mustering out of two divisions of combat troops, triggering increased domestic unemployment.

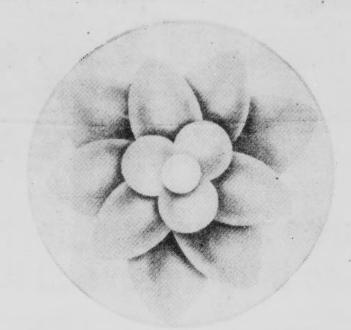

Testifying before the committee, he urged Congress to "stay the course" on "a longrange program to restore and strengthen U.S. national security.'

But senator after senator from both parties made clear they believe reductions in the defense buildup will be made, with the only question being how much and where. None were heard to predict that defense spending will not be trimmed.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., the committee chairman, said that while he opposes a freeze in defense spending as "highly irresponsible," he believes "all areas of the government have helped to create the deficit and now all must contribute to reduc-

"Defense is no exception," Goldwater said.

The defense budget presented by Reagan calls for spending growth of 5.9 percent above the rate of inflation during fiscal 1986. With inflation aside, Weinberger said that amounts to a 10 percent growth over fiscal

National foreign language institute possible for ASU

By JONATHAN HIGUERA Staff Writer

If the United States wants to continue expanding its markets abroad, it will have to enhance its language skills, said the coordinator of a new bilingual education project.

If all goes as planned, ASU could become a national research center for bilingual and foreign language education, said Eugene Garcia.

Garcia and 24 other ASU professors spent the semester break drawing up a 10-inch thick proposal detailing the project for the National Institute for Education, which would allocate the grant to fund it.

"For some reason, we think everyone ought to speak English," Garcia said.

He said there are three parts to the proposal.

The technical part details what the research center would do, the cost proposal would spell out the costs, and the appendices contain the resumes of the people involved, he said.

Garcia said that if funded, the official title of the facility would be the Center for Bilingual Research and Second Language Education.

"We want to provide a national focus related to children and adults," he said. "It breaks down into two groups — English speakers who want a second language, and children who can't speak English."

Garcia said the Center will only deal in research.

"We don't have the basic knowledge to resolve issues of bilingual education," he said. "We just do research on it."

Garcia said his group received 60 letters of support from school districts in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Alaska, Hawaii and the Vargin Islands.

If the funds are awarded, Garcia said extended research would include sites in Chicago, New York, San Diego, Los Angeles and others.

"By studying different populations, we can ask questions at sites we wouldn't be able to," he said. "For example, in Cincinnati the school district has a second language public education program. We'll be able to study it."

Garcia also said the Center would study populations in its natural setting.

The Center would primarily be concerned with Spanish, Chinese, Vietnamese and several Native American languages, Garcia said.

"We looked at where the population is and what is spoken by the largest group," he said. "I'm sure some people might be worried about some languages being excluded, but we'll deal with that as it comes."

Garcia said so far his group has not had to defend the issue of bilingual education.

"We're responding to national reports that have indicated a need (for bilingual research)," he said. "The National Commission on Civil Rights reports non-English speakers are at high-risk of dropping out of school."

Garcia said the group's chances of federal funding are

Organization offers forestry students valuable experience

By NICOLE MASSIE Staff Writer

Students planning a career in forestry or who are interested in conserving the environment can gain valuable experience through the Student Conservation Association, said Wally Elton, assistant program director.

The association is run by the Student Conservation Organization.

"It is a volunteer, non-profit organization with approximately 950 positions available"

According to Elton, there are two reasons why the Student Conservation Association is a valuable service.

The Association helps federal and some state conservation agencies complete their activities despite the lack of adequate funding or staff.

Secondly, the project allows a student to gain field experience by working with these agencies, and allows others who are not planning a career in conservation, but are still concerned about the environment, to participate.

Although the association is volunteer, some things are paid for, Elton said.

"Transportation to and from the area where you will be working is provided," he said. "So is food, housing and a small living allowance."

It costs approximately $1,000 to field and support each volunteer, Elton said. Cooperating agencies contribute about 75 percent of the costs, and the remainder comes from contributions, sponsor gifts, corporate donations and federal grants.

The job lasts for 12 weeks.

Some occupations involve monitoring different species, back trail control, assisting visitors to National Parks and conducting forestry and timber surveys, he said.

Elton said that the program is year round; however, most activities are scheduled for the summer.

Elton said that for every three applications recieved, one person is chosen.

"The demand is there," he said. "We would like to maintain this three-to-one ratio, as it keeps quality up and interest high."

Elton said the association is available to anyone of any background. However the main determinant in receiving a position is "motivation and desire."

"Jobs in the conservation field are scarce," Elton said. "This is an outstanding experience and looks very impressive on a resume."

"Employers see the fact that you volunteered; this shows tremendous interest to work," he said.

"We are just getting arted on campus; competition for pass will get stiffer."

Information on the organization is available in the zoology, geology, leisure studies and environmental studies center, he said.

Interested students may also write to The Student Conservation Association, Inc., P.O. Box 550, Charlestown, N.H. 03603.

Scholarships should be for earnest students

Kim Sertich News Editor

As the athletic department enters another NCAA probationary-investigative period, it's time the administration woke up and smelled the coffee. It is obvious the athletic department officials do not know how to handle the situation they are in, which is to run a sports program that is beneficial to the University and to the students.

Maybe it is time the administrators on this campus realized just how much money is put into a program that continually embarrasses the University. Scholarships are given to athletes who are ineligible for any number of reasons. Doesn't anyone keep an eye on these students who have received a free ride to obtain an education that most won't appreciate anyway?

While some scholarships are taken away from programs with violations, it still leaves an unfair situation. The administration needs to evaluate the scholarship deal that the athletic program has, but obviously hasn't earned. This is money that could be going to more deserving "academic" students - students who may not know how to pitch a no-hitter, but who are actually going to school to get an education and make it into the major leagues of the work world.

What difference does it make who receives the scholarships as long as they are attending ASU? What difference does it make if it's an accounting major who has his tuition paid for or a wrestler? There are some differences. One is that the accounting department is not on probation. Another is that the accounting major's grades are probably deserving of some kind of finan-

Of course there are already plenty of academic scholarships. But it wouldn't hurt to have more and to give them to students who want and deserve them. After all, this should be an institution of higher education, not a contender for the school with the most conference titles.

The athletic teams may bring what some believe to be needed recognition to the University, but who needs press like the athletic department is getting now? Academic departments on campus are just as capable of receiving recognition as the teams. The College of Business is one of the finest in the nation and the Walter Cronkite School of Journalism/Telecommunication is now located at ASU. So why not give departments such as these more money to wheel and deal with in obtaining students for their

You can be sure that if an undeserving "academic" student should become ineligible for a scholarship the University would waste no time in letting him know about the

While the athletes in the programs who have nothing to do with the violations shouldn't be punished for something someone else did, if they still want to go to ASU, and a scholarship is not available, let them pay their tuition. Plenty of other students do it, why not more of the athletes?

Homosexual community promotes living right life

After reading your column, "The Homosexual Hoax," I realized that it was compiled of opinions, containing little to no fact. Although, I find that I have to question your credibility as an objective journalist and editor.

By bringing up the different topics included in your article, I would assume it would be to educate your readers on certain aspects of the homosexual community, their lifestyles and of course the AIDS epidemic. I therefore have compiled some information, facts and personal experiences to also help educate your readers

AIDS is a fatal virus that destroys the body's natural defenses to fight off disease. The AIDS virus is passed only through bodily fluids, such as sperm and blood. AIDS can only be passed through close intimate contact, or blood transfusions. AIDS has reached epidemic proportions. There are more than 7,000 cases in the United States alone, and more than 3,000 of the cases have proven fatal. The majority of AIDS funding and care support to AIDS patients has come from the homosexual community. AIDS is not an exclusively homosexual disease. Its graves are shared by Haitans, hemophiliacs, children, senior citizens, and sexually active heterosexuals

It might be of interest to you, that it is a noted fact that the percentage of communicable diseases, in the homosexual community, has dropped by 50 percent since the beginning of the AIDS crisis. This fact, stated in many medical journals and news magazines, conflicts directly with your statement that "rampant promiscuity among homosexuals has caused an outbreak of 'highly' communicable diseases." I also have to wonder about the sources of your information in regards to your quote, "nearly half of all active homosexuals suffer some sort of venereal disease." Again, Mr. Munsil please keep your opinions at a more professional-factual level.

In your column you mentioned, "The average homosexual has 1,000 sex partners in a lifetime." It takes no mathematical genius to figure out that in a sexually active lifetime of 60 years, this person would have to have more than one new partner every two weeks. Remember average means that almost half of the community would have to be more active. This would seem to prove to be quite a feat.

The one and only concept you seem to have any understanding of, is that homosexuality is inborn and is not a choice. People live and grow with feelings (impulses as you put it). These feelings guide you through life, if you do not follow your feelings then you are lost. The homosexual community does not promote homosexuality or sex, it promotes pride and strength in one's self. It promotes understanding yourself and living your life the way that is right for you. The homosexual community does not encourage people to succumb to each and every temptation. As a matter of fact, the homosexual community deals with the fact that a person is homosexual and teaches him to understand himself and the pressures of a hostile heterosexual society.

I can assure you that I find nothing happy or pleasant about the deaths of thousands of homosexuals. I can also assure you that to those of us homosexuals who have lost loved ones: our lovers, our friends, our brothers and sisters, and our children, nothing has been written that is as inhumane or insensitive as your statement concerning homosexual deaths compared to innocent heterosexual deaths. People are people, life is life, and everyone is someone to someone, no matter what the gender of the person they share their life and

Ignorance, misinformation abound

Mr. Munsil alludes to homosexual blame for the AIDS epidemic and says that "innocent heterosexuals . . . are coming down with life-threatening diseases." The blame of the AIDS epidemic cannot be put upon homosexual people exclusively, even though the majority of victims are homosex-

But shouldn't a sexually active person be held accountable for his own actions? Yes, but most people have the privilege of developing healthy dating relationships following the guidance of positive role models. This opportunity has not been made available to homosexuals. The bulk of homosexuals do not realize they have more alternatives to choose from than celibacy and promiscuity.

Why is there widespread ignorance about homosexuality, even among homosexuals? The American Psychological Association (APA) said homosexuals are faced with "patterns of thought control inhibiting open education, research, and the free exchange of ideas concerning homosexuality. The crisis in our society is that many people believe misinformation about homosexuality.

It is extremely difficult for an individual to grow up with a positive self-concept when he is constantly being told that his natural instincts are sick and perverted. I wonder if Mr. Munsil is aware that within the homosexual community the levels of suicide and alcoholism are well above the national

There is no cure for homosexuality because it isn't an illness. Mr. Munsil got one thing right when he said that there those born with an attraction for members of the same gender." But he missed the point when he suggested that homosexuals should "fight those abnormal impulses."

Just as it is natural for a heterosexual to be attracted to a member of the opposite sex, it is natural for a homosexual to be attracted to a member of the same sex.

So, what is the real homosexual hoax? The tragedy is that there is widespread misinformation about homosexuality The APA states that "there is a clear need for open education which will allow public access to reliable information on the subject which has been widely censored and suppressed.'

Mr. Munsil claimed to have written his editorial out of 'compassion for an unfortunate group that has been led astray by society." He concluded by saying that he would not 'be party to the ultimate self-destruction" of homosexuals' bodies and souls. Well, Mr. Munsil, I hope that you will reconsider exactly who is doing the actual destruction. And I hope that you will demonstrate your compassion by publishing this

Huey the Hunk

Lewis bops his news with powerful Tower of Power

By CINDY PEARLMAN

Assistant Entertainment Editor Oh, thank you, Huey Lewis for choosing ASU's Activity Center as a stop-off before the Sports' tour returns to the road. Thank you, News, for playing here before you head out to Washington.

Thank you, Huey, again, for playing "I Hope You Love Me Like You Say You Do." It's one of my favorite songs. Believe me, we love you. Take my word for it.

And by the way, Huey, I personally believe that you are about the coolest, most suave, best looking rocker working for a liv-

Uh, sorry

But, Huey, one more thing. In case you're reading this — on a scale from one to ten, I think you're ten material. Also, I love the

The word from rock star Huey Lewis is that when you don't play for a month, it makes you "rusty."

"It also makes you have a good time, but don't tell MTV because it's not hip to jam,' Lewis smiled and said to a sold-out crowd that was only too happy to let loose and kick back

Sunday night, Lewis (in black jeans, a blue striped shirt, an evening jacket and cowboy boots) took the stage at about 9 p.m.

He was accompanied by one of the best working bands in the rock business Once again for those who make it a habit to read the State Press Entertainment Section on some sort of a regular basis, we announced last week that the News consists of drummer Bill Gibson, saxman-guitar player, Johnny Colla, keyboardist Sean Hopper, bassist Mario Cipollina and guitarist Chris Hayes.

These guys warrant another mention because Huey Lewis and the News is not just a lead singer. This is the case of a "group" of varied talents in every sense of the word.

For Lewis, this means that man does not live by harmonica alone.

In addition, Sunday's show was supplemented by what many feel is the world's greatest horn section, a.k.a "The Tower of Power Horns" or "those bad-boys from San Francisco Bay.'

Between sets, Lewis had a few words to

"Do we have any Sports fans in the audience tonight?" he asked.

Imagine loud screaming.

"Aren't you sick of those Sports' songs? You've heard them on the radio. You watch them on MTV. I bet you don't care if you ever hear those songs again?" Lewis asked.

Imagine even louder screaming bordering on hysterics.

Yes, this crowd "believed in love." Lewis dedicated "Walkin' On A Thin Line" to Viet-

Then, there was "If This Is It (doo-wap)," "Heart and Soul" and rock classic "Buzz, Buzz, Buzz.

For everyone who doesn't make enough money, Lewis sang, "Walkin' on the streets. it's really all the same. Selling souls, rock and roll - any other game. Workin' for a living. I'm takin' what they're giving 'cause I'm workin' for a living.''
"What do you want?" Lewis asked during the first of two encores.

About 14,000 people screamed, "A New Drug" in unison.

"Tough, I don't feel like playing it," Lewis answered, shaking his head with hands on Yeah, he finally played it after leading 14,000 people on for a few minutes.

However, my favorite moment from this show was an old, bluesy rock tune

"If you got soul, then everybody knows that it's all right." Lewis crooned.

"Now,it's all right. Yeah, it's all right."

The assistant Entertainment editor shows off Huey Lewis' autograph with pride and unmiti-

Women netters seek respect among cream of WCAA crop

By BRAD HALVORSEN Sports Writer

Competing in the country's toughest conference, the ASU women's tennis team hopes to gain respectability in the WCAA this year, starting with today's springseason opener at Grand Canyon College at 2

"We're not quite as good as the top teams in the conference on paper," coach Sheila McInerney said. "I would be surprised if we end up winning the conference, to be perfectly honest.

"But we're going to take it step-by-step and be very competitive. We have a lot of talented girls out there and everyone's playing better than at the beginning of the year.'

Stanford, Southern California and San Diego State top the WCAA as well as the entire nation. In preseason polls, the Cardinal ranked first, followed by the Trojans and the Aztecs in second and third. Two other WCAA teams - No. 6 UCLA and No. 17 Arizona - are in the top 20.

The Devils take on the Antelopes today with one key player on the sidelines and another overcoming an injury.

Vanessa Miller is recovering from an illness and will sit out the season's first two matches.

Therese Arildsen is still hurting from a groin pull she sustained last fall and will play farther down the ladder until she's back into form

Returning All-American Sheri Norris tops the squad at No. 1 singles after an impressive fall season.

"Any match she goes into, even against the top players, we know Sheri has an even chance at winning the match," McInerney said. "She has the toughest job on the team. She has to play the toughest players in the Sophomore Carol Coparanis assumes the No. 2 spot.

"I'm really pleased with Carol," McInerney said. "She's got as much potential as anybody. She's tall and has a big serve, which is a definite advantage in women's tennis.'

McInerney said Coparanis has the ability to play with anybody, but must work on cutting down her errors before reaching this

Sophomore Beth Smigel, who is playing the best tennis of her life according to McInerney, will play No. 3 singles

"Beth has good groundstrokes and a very

Vanessa Miller, who missed action last fall because of a pulled hamstring muscle, will be out of the ASU women's tennis lineup for two more matches with an illness.

real hungry right now, and that's been a key for her.

Sophomore Kristi McCormick has been assigned the No. 4 position.

"Kristi's playing well right now, but we have to work on getting her to come into the net more," McInerney said. "She's a good volleyer and she has to be able to take advantage of her strengths by consistently

Jane Paulson, another sophomore, will play No. 5.

"Jane's a good volleyer and she keeps improving," McInerney said. "Like Kristi, we have to work on her coming into the net

The three doubles teams — at least for today — will be Coparanis-Norris, Paulson-McCormick, and Kay Miyagi-Janet Smiley.

Rounding out the 11-player squad are freshman Pam Mirassou and sophomore

I have been told more than once that I watch entirely too much television. In fact it is rare that I am told in a way as

But when you are a sports reporter, you feel it your civic responsibility to stay glued to the action. And unless you happen to live in New York or Los Angeles, TV is the only way to

And that is why those who make sports their life are still praising the 11th commandment, the one which forced the FCC to grant an operating license to . . .

ESPN, the total sports network.

Those godsends from Connecticut have certainly been a big plus for those of us who want a little more sports during the week than "ABC's Battle of the Network Key Grips" with that Emmy Award-winning broadcast team of Howard Cosell and Herve Villechaize.

"De commercial, de commercial."

For those not blessed with the miracle that is cable television, ESPN is a 24-hour sports station. And since ABC, NBC,

CBS, WTBS and USA have the rights to pro football, basketball, baseball and hockey tied up until Emmanuel Lewis becomes a grandfather, ESPN must scoop up the remains to

Its coverage of college basketball is infinitely superior to that of the networks. Billy "ACC" Packer and Al "Points in the Paint" McGuire must bow to Dick Vitale, without a doubt the supreme college basketball analyst.

The following is a description, in "Vitaleese", of Syracuse guard Dwayne Washington.

"I'll tell ya, the Pearl loves to carry the rock into the paint, and he can light it up when it's showtime!" Translation: Mr. Washington can take the ball to the basket and score, especially near the end of the game.

I have a vicarious love affair with Gayle Gardner. I couldn't live without Chris Berman's nicknaming. My two favorites are still Minnesota Twins pitcher John "Innocent" Lysander and Baltimore Orioles outfielder John "Tonight, let it be" Lowenstein.

ESPN also shines in its coverage of skiing and track and field competitions. Whether it be bowling, billiards or even bull roping, it is covered with an interesting insight, though I wouldn't normally watch all these things

I'm sure there are people who like to watch Billy Joe Jim Bob Arnsparger Jr. wrestle with your average three-quarter

Me? The closest I get to those animals are when they are served medium rare with savory gravy and home fries.

But to each his own; I'm awful darn flexible

But the network does have its down side. Why so much Boxing? Why so many different kinds of boxing? Yes, I understand why they show your normal cut-his-lip-and-bashhis eye boxing, but it doesn't stop there.

We lucky viewers get to see PKA (Professional Karate Association) boxing. Is there a sport more stupid than this? Now I have never seen a cock fight, but it would really have to be a megaloser to even approach PKA.

For those lucky enough to have never seen PKA, it is a combination of boxing and karate. Dressed in sweat pants, the two guys who can't punch hard enough to bust a pinata face each other armed - get this - with their feet.

Sponsors are oh-so-easy to find: Dr. Scholl, Absorbine Jr.

and, of course, Odor-Eaters.

Had enough boxing yet? Not according to ESPN. They can't find anymore live boxing to cover, but they have reels and reels of taped bouts they would just love you to see

This week's is a doozy. The 1979 fight between Matthew Saad-Muhammad and someone whose name escapes me. I didn't want to see that fight six years ago, and I sure as hell don't want to see it now.

And they also show just a few too many old NFL films for me to stomach. If I see the Cowboys-Steelers Super Bowls one more time, I swear I might change the channel.

Hey, don't push me, I'm serious.

Women cagers lose 6th straight

By BRAD HALVORSEN Sports Writer

After building a halftime lead against national champion Southern California, the ASU women's basketball team fell victim to some familiar problems while falling to the Women of Troy and 68-57 and Cal State-Fullerton 79-58 last weekend.

The losses keep ASU in the WCAA cellar with a 0-6 conference record (8-11 overall). The Devils have lost six straight games.

"We came out with a lot of aggressiveness and they weren't aggressive at all," said ASU coach Juliene Simpson, who watched her squad open a 27-26 halftime against the Women of Troy, ranked ninth nationally

'But I feel that in the second half we let up a little bit. We didn't have the determination we had in the first half.'

The Trojans (2-0, 12-4 overall) came out storming in the second half, outscoring ASU 12-0 during the first 41/2 minutes. Eight of the points came from ASU turnovers

In the first half, we did the little things, like blocking out, talking on defense and faceguarding Cheryl (Miller) after she rebounded," Simpson said

But in the second half we broke down. We didn't keep Cheryl off the boards. We were not scoring consistently every time down the court as we had done in the first half

Miller, the conference's top player who starred in the 1984 Olympics, did not have one of her best games, but still riddled the Devils for 22 points, five assists and 20 of USC's 43 re-

Miller was the only Trojan to break into double figures in any category

The 6-foot-2 Trojan led USC's second-half attack, hitting five of six from the field while the Trojans outscored ASU 4230. The Devils turned the ball over 21 times in the second half, compared to six first half turnovers.

Guard Jodi Rathbun returned to the ASU starting lineup after a four-game absence and led the Devils with 18 points. Barb Smith added 14.

Robin Connolly and Sherry Poole, who had directed the ASU scoring attack in recent games, combined for only four points during ASU's lowest point output of the season.

ASU's second half troubles continued Saturday, when Cal State-Fullerton expanded a five-point halftime lead into a 21point victory.

"Our game was so much different from one night to the next," Simpson said. "The things we executed so well the night before we did not execute.

"We really lacked a lot of small techniques, like blocking out and being aggressive, especially in the second half. They put a little pressure on us and we threw the ball away.'

The Titans (4-1, 13-5 overall) held ASU to a season-low 43 field goal attempts compared to 64 of their own.

The Titans beat ASU on the boards 44-30 and dished out 23 assists to ASU's six.

"We have a great bunch of girls but we really lack the killer instinct and the aggression," said Simpson, who was not pleased with the team's intensity against Fullerton.

When things are going well, they listen and do the proper things, but when the game is not going well they lose confidence and they just lack that intensity. "When the going gets tough they seem to back away a little

Rathbun led ASU again with 14 points while Poole added 10.

Terri Withers directed the Titans' attack with 18 points 12 rebounds while Meg Gallagher handed out 10 assists.
