More jobs go: ASU Printing Services cut

By CHAD REDWING
State Press

Nine employees of ASU Printing Services came to work Monday, only to learn that as of Aug. 17 their department and their jobs will no longer exist.

"It's going to hurt," said Robbyn May, camera operator and mother of six children.

"We are a part of the University. Everybody uses us. We are the only game in town more or less, and we certainly didn't think we were at risk as far as layoffs were concerned."

In addition to the layoffs at Printing Services, five other ASU classified staff and eight administrators have been relieved of their duties over the past week, according to George Cathcart, ASU public relations director.

The recent cutback brings the total number of laid-off employees to 75 since last March.

The reasons for closing the print shop were technological as well as financial, according to Ray Jensen, director of the Purchasing Department.

He said the closure was necessary because it would not be "financially viable" to update the printing department to

Primaries get mixed reply

Buchanan finish yields split student reaction

By CAROL ANN HANSEN
State Press

Most ASU students reacted to the results of Tuesday's New Hampshire primaries with little surprise and said the nation's lagging economy probably acted as the deciding issue for voters there.

President Bush barely slipped by challenger Patrick J. Buchanan, who claimed more than 40 percent of the Republican vote.

Former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts won the five-way Democratic race with Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton coming in at a close second.

Buchanan's impressive showing against Bush did not come as a shock to some ASU students.

Dave Alison, a junior history major, said the GOP upstart's share of the vote was not a surprise, "not considering the times. There are a lot of people who are angry at Bush."

Although Alison voted for Bush in the 1988 presidential election, he is considering abstaining from this year's election.

"No one appeals to me — Republican or Democrat," he said. "Bush certainly hasn't excited me."

Charlie Gray, a graduate student in public administration, said voters need to examine the candidates' platforms because of the nation's poor economic status.

Gray said that voters should ignore the glitz and negative campaigning that usually accompany presidential elections. "Let's take a close look at the issues, and this time in depth — not just gloss over them," he said.

Although Gray said he is a registered Democrat, he considers himself an Independent in the general election.

"I know who I am leaning towards in terms of candidates, and that's Clinton, Bush and Tsongas," he said. "It will be up to each of them through the primary process and the general election to convince me."

Mark McCall, a senior political science major, said Buchanan's showing surprised him.

"I thought Bush would get a bigger vote than that," he said.

McCall said he has been leaning toward Bush, "but after watching these primaries, I am not so sure."

Marc Mason, a senior justice studies major, plans to vote Democratic next fall.

"Usually the best candidates aren't in the race — they are the ones protecting their past," Mason said.

Mason believes the New Hampshire primary will not dictate the general election as in past years.

"I think this will be different," he said. "This will scare a lot of hard-line Republicans and a lot more people will come

Coor calls faculty bills unnecessary

By SHANNON LOUGHRIN
State Press

ASU President Lattie Coor on Tuesday broke with the Academic Senate and testified before the House Education Committee against two "unnecessary" bills that would strengthen faculty influence in University decision-making.

Coor made his opposition to the bills clear earlier this week at an Academic Senate meeting in his first public statement on the proposals.

"I believe public universities should be run by citizens," he said Monday. "I don't think that constituents ought to be represented on university boards, particularly public university boards."

Coor said any system that decides on university policy issues should be made up of citizens, not those who stand to gain from their own power.

Each bill, introduced in the Legislature last week, would increase faculty influence within the University. Senate Bill 1113 would place a faculty member on the Board of Regents, while Senate Bill 1106 would strengthen the influence of faculty in university decisions.

A bill similar to SB 1113 passed both houses of the Legislature last year, but was vetoed by Gov. Fife Symington.

Coor said that even though he accepted the practice of the governor and state superintendent of education sitting on the board, he did not approve of a student regent — even though Coor supported a similar proposal during his days as student body president at NAU.

An electrical fire broke out in the basement of the Classroom Office Building Tuesday, forcing about 400 students and faculty to evacuate.

University officials could not estimate the damage caused by the fire, but the building will likely be closed for two days. The cause of the fire is unknown.

The fire originated in the main power transformer located in Room A-1 in the southeast corner of the basement, said University Fire Marshall Andy Anderson.

Anderson said the exact cause of the transformer's

ASU to fill Peru's shoes at mock U.N. meeting

By SONDRA ROBERTO
State Press

Sickel

Imagine that Old Main is an ancient structure built by the Incas and "A" Mountain is the highest peak in the Andes.

That is how members of ASU's new United Nations Club see things now that they have placed themselves in the shoes of Peruvians.

The club will represent Peru at the 42nd session of the Model United Nations Far West Conference, scheduled for April 23 to 26 in San Francisco.

ASU is one of more than 100 colleges and universities from Arizona, California, Oregon and Washington that will represent a different nation at the mock U.N. conference.

"A U.N. club allows you, as a student, to understand the perspective of a different country," said David Sickel, president of the club. "It is hard to imagine being a Peruvian, or a person from, say, Tanzania or Luxembourg, but when you portray this country, you have to portray their national interests."

Sickel, a junior political science major, has acted as the chief organizer of the new U.N. Club at ASU. Attempts made in the past to formally establish a club failed because of lack of student or faculty support and organization, Sickel said.

Club members will meet at ASU about twice a month to hear speakers and discuss current issues, such as chemical weapons or national-separatist movements.

They will also research their country, learn parliamentary rules of debate, and learn rules guarding the proposal of resolutions, Sickel said.

The next meeting, which is open to new members, is slated for 4 p.m. Feb. 20 in the MU.

The meeting will feature speaker Albert

Celoza of the United Nations Association of the USA.

The United Nations Association is an organization that works for governmental support of the United Nations. It provides the club with information about current issues being addressed by the U.N. General Assembly and various U.N. committees.

The mock conference will follow the format of actual U.N. sessions. Students from each school will represent their country within the General Assembly, the Security Council and specific committees.

For example, an ASU student on the Third Committee would present Peru's standpoint on the economic role of women, discrimination against minorities and repatriation of refugees.

Sickel said there are no winners or losers at the conference, but some larger conferences, such as the national conference at Harvard, award delegates for an outstanding performance.

"But it's basically based on having a lot of fun debating and mobilizing your different blocs and getting a resolution drawn up," Sickel said.

Clubs from each university are chosen to be a country by conference officials after submitting a list of preferences. Sickel said first preferences are awarded based on the club's previous achievements at conferences and the number of years they have participated.

UofA team will represent Russia in the upcoming conference. Mesa Community College will be Mexico.

Sickel said the club will practice for the conference during meetings by designating individuals as separate countries.

Roxanne Doty, ASU assistant political science professor and club adviser, said the U.N. Club is a great way for students to see how global issues directly touch their lives.

"When studying global issues in class, it's not as easy to see what relevance the issues really have," Doty said. "The club helps bring global issues closer to students and they can see how they really affect us."

We're not pulling your leg...
Two pairs of eyeglasses for just $98!

There still must be some people out there who don't believe our eyeglass offer is legitimate. Otherwise there would be long lines at all our stores—and nobody would be overpaying for glasses elsewhere.

Perhaps some people are still under the false impression that they will get better quality glasses by paying more at a small optical office.

It's simply not so. Our glasses are as well made as those you might pay two or three times as much for elsewhere. The materials are high quality. And our lens-grinding lab employs strict quality controls—so your lenses are sure to precisely fit your prescription.

We don't think anyone else—no matter how high their prices—can be more confident of their quality.

Our big sale goes on every day

No, we're not having a sale this week. Or next week. We don't have sales. Our low, low prices are good every day. A pair of glasses—complete with single vision plastic lenses—is $59. Additional pairs, same prescription, same visit, just $39! So two pairs cost $98. Three pairs, $137. Most bifocals $20 more a pair.

Free disposable contacts!

We're so confident you'll love our Bausch & Lomb Sequence disposable contact lenses, we'll give you a trial pair free! (Eye exam not included.)

Doctor's Comment "If you're near-sighted, should you take your glasses off when you read? It depends on your particular vision."

"If there's a large difference between the correction needed for each eye, you probably need to leave your glasses on. That's also true if you're highly myopic."

"Usually your body will tell you. Headaches or discomfort when reading, with or without glasses, may indicate a problem. A thorough eye exam will provide the answer."

Bush, Tsongas win in N.H. primary

Former Massachusetts Sen. Paul Tsongas waves to the crowd after visiting a polling station in Manchester, N.H., Tuesday. Tsongas won the five-way Democratic race for the New Hampshire primary.

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — President Bush gained grudging victory Tuesday night in the New Hampshire presidential primary, with challenger Patrick J. Buchanan claiming more than 40 percent of the Republican vote to fuel his conservative rebellion.

Former Sen. Paul E. Tsongas of Massachusetts won the five-way Democratic race, ratifying the frontrunner status even he called improbable. Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton ran second and pronounced himself "the comeback kid."

New Hampshire's blighted economy was the consuming issue in both parties' campaigns, and Bush said he got the message of discontent.

"We are going to take our party back . . . and when we take our party back, we're going to take our country back," Buchanan told a chanting rally. He repeated his economic and foreign-policy campaign theme: "There is nothing wrong with putting America First." An ecstatic crowd chanted in return: "God Bless America. God Bless Pat."

Bush did not appear to claim his victory and his written statement was sedate.

"This election was far closer than many had predicted," the Bush statement said. "I think the opponents on both sides reaped the harvest of discontent with the pace of New Hampshire's economy."

He vowed to "take my case to the voters in the next eight-and-a-half months," and said he was confident of beating Buchanan to win the GOP nomination. "Now," said Bush, "on to the South."

The Republican vote, with 57 percent of the precincts counted:

Bush 40,768 or 57 percent. He led for 14 of New Hampshire's 23 convention delegates.

Buchanan 29,538 or 41 percent and 9 delegates.

"New Hampshire is Pat Buchanan's best shot," said Gov. Judd Gregg, a Bush partisan like the rest of the Republican establishment. Yet the results were sobering to the Bush camp, coming in the state where primary victory saved the president's 1988 nomination.

Polls of voters leaving their polling places showed that the economy and jobs were the issues that mattered most to both Republicans and Democrats. Early exit polls reported by ABC found that 52 percent of Buchanan voters said they voted for him Libya refuses to give bombing suspects to U.S.

TRIPOLI, Libya (AP) — Libya produced two men the United States has accused of blowing up an American jetliner but insisted again Tuesday they will never be surrendered for trial in the West.

American and Scottish authorities have charged Abdel Basset Ali al-Megrahi and Lamen Khalifa Fhimah, whom they describe as intelligence agents, with planting the bomb that blew up Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland in December 1988. The attack killed 270 people.

Libya has opened its own investigation and says the men could be tried in Libya.

Foreign reporters were invited to Tripoli to attend what was announced as a public hearing Tuesday for Al-Megrahi and Fhimah. Instead, reporters were taken to a news conference, where the judge heading the investigation said there would be no public hearing.

"According to Libyan law, it is forbidden to make an investigation public," said the judge, Ahmed el-Tahir al-Zawi.

The judge also insisted that under the law the men could not be extradited for trial outside Libya.

"If convicted in a Libyan court and it is proven they blew up the airplane, with the intention of killing those aboard, the

U.S., Russian submarines collide in Arctic Ocean

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a jarring reminder that Cold War dangers haven't disappeared, the Navy said Tuesday that one of its nuclear-powered attack submarines collided with a Russian sub last week in the Arctic Ocean.

U. S. officials said they weren't sure which vessel was at fault, but beyond the issue of blame lay a broader question: If the former Soviet Union is no longer a threat to U. S. security, why are American subs still prowling its coastline?

Pentagon officials said the USS Baton Rouge, a Los Angeles-class attack submarine whose home port is Norfolk, Va., was on a routine patrol in the Barents Sea at the time of the collision, but they would not discuss its mission or exact location.

There was no report of nuclear contamination in the area of the accident.

The Pentagon reported no apparent damage to the U. S. submarine. But Interfax, an independent news agency in Russia, reported that fragments of the U. S. sub's protective covering were found between the rails of the deck house barrier on the Russian vessel.

Private U. S. analysts said it seemed likely the Baton Rouge was on a reconnaissance mission and some questioned the need for continued U. S. surveillance of Russian waters at a time of dramatically improved political relations.

"The question is, why are we doing this kind of operation now? The Cold War is supposed to be over," said James T. Bush, a retired Navy captain and submariner. "They really haven't adjusted to the fact that the Cold War is over."

Adm. Frank B. Kelso II, the Navy's top uniformed officer as chief of naval operations, refused to discuss the incident. But he stressed that the U. S. fleet would continue to operate as usual in international waters.

"The seas are free for everybody to operate in — ours, theirs, everybody else's," Kelso said in an interview with the AP. "I don't think anything is going to change that."

"We've had that feeling since the beginning of this country that we could move our ships and forces wherever we felt we needed to move them. That's what John Paul Jones got his name for — driving ships in places of the world where people might not have expected American ships to go. I don't think this incident is going to change that."

American officials have acknowledged that Soviet submarines no longer patrol regularly off the U. S. Atlantic shore.

The Defense Department said that the accident occurred Feb. 11, and that it waited a week to disclose it because Secretary of State James A. Baker III wanted to discuss it with Russian President Boris Yeltsin before the announcement.

"Given the change in the nature of the relationship between Russia and the United States, we thought it best to notify Boris Yeltsin," the department said in a brief statement.

Bob Hall, a Pentagon spokesman, said he believed it was the first time the department has announced a submarine collision, although this was not the first involving U. S. and Russian vessels. He said the mishap was disclosed in this case "because of the unusual nature of this incident."

Bush and others said it appears the U. S. Navy intends to continue its monitoring of the Russian Navy out of concern about political instability in the former Soviet republics and to watch disarmament moves.

Hall told reporters the U. S. Navy has 84 attack submarines in operation around the world. Their wartime role is to destroy enemy ships, particularly submarines. In peacetime they often are involved in intelligence-gathering operations, said Jeff Richelson, a private expert on U. S. undersea reconnaissance.

The naval forces of the former Soviet Union include 212 attack submarines, according to the latest published Pentagon count. The biggest fleet of attack submarines belong to the Northern Fleet, whose headquarters at Murmansk is in the vicinity of the Feb. 11 collision.

Hall said there had been no Russian government protest of the incident, but the Interfax news agency in Moscow quoted Adm. Ivan Kapitants as saying, "The fact that a foreign submarine secretly operated in our territorial water arouses legitimate concern in the Russian leadership."

Hall said the incident occurred beyond the 12-mile limit of Russian territorial waters recognized by the United States, but he would not be more specific beyond saying it happened in the Barents Sea.

Lt. Bob Ross, a Navy spokesman, said that the Russian government claims a wider territorial limit than 12 miles and that the incident apparently happened inside what the Russians claim as their waters.

Primary results

Positive results have come from the New Hampshire primary Tuesday.

Pat Buchanan has proven a serious threat to President George Bush, scoring more than 40 percent of the popular Republican vote.

While exiting the polls, disgruntled voters expressed concerns about jobs and the economy — the deciding factors in their votes.

Pursuant with their interests, the voters in the Democratic primary put Sen. Tsongas in the top seat with 33 percent vs. Clinton's 29 percent of the vote. New Hampshireites flocked to Tsongas, recognizing his pro-growth and pro-commerce ideas are the the surest hope for the country's ailing economy.

In the same light, Buchanan scored an impressive vote against the incumbent, showing that voters are ready for the strong, ideological approach to American politics, not seen since Bush gained office in '88.

The Buchanan upset represents serious trouble for the president. The New Hampshire primary has traditionally been a a deciding one. No incumbent has ever succeeded in a re-election bid against an opponent scoring over 35 percent of the vote.

Among the conservative Democratic candidates, one can see nothing more than a "kinder, gentler" version of Bush.

If Buchanan succeeds in future primaries, it looks as though the message he sends will go to the Democratic party.

Faced with a GOP nomination of Buchanan, the Democrats will be forced to offer a leftist ideologue of similar stature.

"Mario!" is leaping from the lips of the Democratic leadership predicting an ultimate Buchanan nomination.

Buchanan's leap into presidential politics just 10 weeks ago may be enough to focus the country's attention on principled, philosophically based politics after a too-many-year record of mud-slinging, deception and apathy.

For whatever it's worth, New Hampshire has sent its surprising but welcome message.

ASASU

Important election issues in '92

April used to be the cruelest month until ASASU elections got bumped up to March 4-5.

Within the next few weeks, the ASU campus community, admittedly apathetic, will be faced with slogans, poster board, campaign promises and one very difficult decision—which student will lead this campus during one of the tightest budget years in recent history.

While there are likely more pressing issues facing individual students (making rent, making the grade and finding a job after graduation), there is virtually nothing more important than the election of strong executive leaders for the progression of this campus as a whole. This is especially true given the bleak-at-best budget situation that has befallen Arizona's universities.

ASASU controls about $800,000 of student's money—that's a lot of dough. It is the student body's responsibility to get caught up on the issues, look carefully and critically at the candidates and VOTE to ensure such control doesn't fall into the hands of the wrong people. Last year, there were only about 3,000 out of 43,000 students who bothered to cast their ballots in the ASASU election.

The following are some issues both candidates and students should address in the upcoming election:

- Student involvement and input into the every day workings of ASASU. This requires that junior politicians don't forget to come down off the third floor as soon as they've been elected. Students must also make a concerted effort to play an active role in ASASU politics.

MICHELLE ROBERTS

Editor

- Beating the budget. Next year's ASASU executives have a lot to do without much money. Corporate sponsorship and thrifty fund management will be essential.

- Tuition and Legislative budget policy. Thanks to a superb State Relations effort this year, tuition was frozen for Arizona's three universities. To ensure future success, ASASU must be filled with student officials who are not only effective lobbyists, but also self-motivators.

- Student representation within ASASU. This year,

"It is the student body's responsibility to get caught up on the issues, look carefully and critically at the candidates and VOTE to ensure such control doesn't fall into the hands of the wrong people."

graduate students and the Honors College gained their rightful place within the Senate. However, ASU West students remain pitifully underrepresented within the student government.

- Educational priorities. Classrooms are too full and services are shrinking. Dozens of ASU employees have been laid off due to the budget cuts—are faculty members the next casualty?

The above examples are but a few of the problems and issues facing ASU. It's all up to the ASU community and candidates to ground this election in serious issues—(no one cares about the previous love lives of the candidates, right?).

Just one more thing—vote.

Flowers turned floozie for profit

It's become a constant challenge to write something critical about a female person without bringing down the wrath of the sisterhood of angry letter writers. Which is really unfair.

For years I've written about male rascals of all sorts: politicians, transom peepers, Wall Street swindlers, disc jockeys and other foul creatures. But not once has a male person said: "Why are you always so unfair to men? Do you hate men?"

But female persons will spot any perceived slight to their sex and fire off a barrage of messages.

Their most recent outburst came in response to a mention I made of the blond female person who decided to tell the world that she had regularly been engaging in sex with Gov. Bill Clinton. I referred to her as a "cheap floozie."

"How dare you?" wrote one member of the angry sisterhood. "Who are you to judge her? The fact that they were lovers does not make her a floozie, nor does it make her cheap."

Another said: "You are typical of most men. You call her a cheap floozie. But you didn't say that Clinton was her stud or lover boy."

And several echoed the female who said: "Why is it always the woman who is held up to public ridicule? The woman is always the slut, the floozie, the bimbo. But what do you call Clinton? Governor, that's what. And a presidential contender. Why should she be called a cheap floozie when he is still 'Gov. Clinton'?"

Or the one who said: "Why not give them equally 'cheapshot' names. Perhaps Clinton could be called the 'thumper of bimbos.' After all, he may be more guilty than the woman because he was married and she isn't." Honestly, ladies (calling them ladies makes them mad, too), I gave you credit for more brains than that. The difference should be obvious.

It wasn't Clinton who took a bundle of money from a raucous tabloid to tell a lurid tale of hopping between the sheets.

Nor was it Clinton who appeared at a televised press conference to promote the tabloid's story and hint that there may be more titillating tidbits in future issues.

Clinton has conducted himself like a gentleman. Or at least like a terrified husband. He has denied all. He's even refrained from calling the tattletale a cheap floozie.

It would be a different matter if Clinton gathered the reporters and said: "I would like to announce that for 12 years, that blond tidbit and I bounced from pillar to bedpost, off the floors, the doors, the ceiling, and all points between, and for further lurid details, I refer you to the latest issue of The Star. Had that been the case, I wouldn't hesitate referring to Clinton as the Arkansas Stud or the hottest spring in Hot Springs.

But he has denied everything. There is no evidence against him, except those recordings of his foolish phone jabber. And unless the woman made secret videotapes (an oversight she probably regrets) it's unlikely that there will be any evidence.

Why, she hasn't even said that he has an old hernia scar or a birthmark shaped like a poodle on his backside.

On the other hand, the woman has proclaimed that she was carrying on with a married governor. Is that a ladylike thing to do?

Consider this: What if everyone in America who claimed to have had an illicit affair decided to hold press conferences and announce it all on the same day? We would have chaos, with people weeping, raging, leaping out of windows, flinging themselves from bridges, shooting, stabbing, pointing fingers, stuffing clothing into suitcases, and the nation's wealth would wind up in the hands of the lawyers.

It would be very unpleasant.

Most decent people, if they do something indecent, have the decency to keep the indecency to themselves.

No, in the words of Ralph Kramden, she had to be a blabbermouth. (Now the angry sisterhood will get on me

Gennifer Flowers fields questions among reporters at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel on the subject of the recent Star report alleging a 12-year extramarital affair between Flowers and presidential hopeful Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas.

for that, too.)

So, yes, I called her a floozie. And I stand by my choice of words, since my dictionary says a floozie is a "disreputable woman."

Can the angry sisterhood deny that she is a disreputable woman? What if your darling son walked in and said: "Mom, Dad, I want you to meet my new fiancee."

You may remember seeing her on TV, shocking the nation with her torrid tale of illicit love with the governor of Arkansas. We're planning a big wedding. Should I call gran and gramps or will you?"

Yes, I'd like to see the look on Mom's face when she poured the bubbly for that celebration.

However, I will withdraw the word "cheap," since the floozie wound up getting a considerable fee for her efforts.

Say, isn't there a word for floozies who turn it into one of those profit deals?

Step show

Dear Editor:

In response to the Feb. 17 leading article in the State Press which covered the last-minute cancellation of an African-American step show, we present a few bearing questions that were unanswered after reading the article. Beginning with the phone calls from "concerned community members," WHO were these people? How many phone calls were received? Specifically, what "serious incidents" were mentioned? Where's the legitimacy and validity in these phone calls?

Deduction tells us that violence was the key message being conveyed, correct? Was this violence going to be directed at the participants and observers of the step show or was the violence even to take place inside the physical site of the show? WHO were the violators supposed to be? The questions are infinite, but to avoid name-calling, let us express insight from our past experiences.

We are natives of California and Kansas respectively. Based on attendance of step shows or similar events at our alma maters, we did not witness any violence specifically at the physical site of the activity.

That's not to say that violence did not occur in parking lots, most frequently attributed to the presence of racist agitators. The featured participants we recall were not limited to African-Americans, Mexican-Americans, Native Americans, Asian-Americans or Non-Hispanic Whites. Our point is that ASU missed a golden opportunity to entertain the very element that it is so often criticized for lack of presence — cultural diversity. For a University attempting to achieve cultural diversity, what kind of effort is this?

Combating racism

Dear Editor:

After reading Keith Campbell's article Feb. 17 titled "Misdirected Anger" I have to admit to Mr. Campbell it's still a black thing and you wouldn't understand. Who should Mr. Triche direct his anger upon when white folks have collectively been and still are the root of the tree that denies black people here in America the true fruits of their heritage, justice and equality.

Next let me comment on why you fail to understand why Mr. Triche spends almost half of his article in a very picturesque description of "black slavery." I realize that if you go back in history even before "black slavery" you will find white slavery. Oops, I mean indentured servants. These white folks owed money and had to repay a debt by issuing their services. On the other hand, the people of Africa owed no one. They were kidnapped, shackled and brought into this strange wildness called North America. Fifty million to 100 million black life's were lost in the trip from Africa to America (Middle Passage).

For 400 years my ancestors built a civilization for no pay from sun up until sundown. Four hundred years of black women being raped by their lustful slaveowners. Four hundred years of black men being used as studs to produce babies they were not allowed to be a father figure to.

Mr. Campbell, this list can go on and on, but you and your people will never feel the pain that your savage "so-called civilized" ancestors caused. The inhumane enslavement and denaturing of a people is so incredible that it is even talked about in the Bible (Gen 15:13).

Next, you say that many of your ancestors owe several hundred people money. I say you and your government owe millions of black people here in America reparations for the intentional destruction, hatred, and dehumanizing of a people for 400 years.

You also state that slavery is history; unfortunately it is an embarrassing wound in United States history. This is a wound in black history that will never mend.

Oh yeah, Mr. Campbell, I do partly agree with you on one thing you said, "Nothing can be done to change it." Slavery did happen and it is still happening.

Collectively as a race of people we are still locked into a mental slavery caused by 400 years of deception and dehumanizing treatment. This is why you fail to understand how it affects our life on a day-to-day basis.

You think Mr. Triche should have used his pen to bring to the public's attention about issues such as discrimination (employment), retention of black faculty at this university (why only this one?), and representation of blacks and black interests in the student organization on campus and stop spewing forth a history lesson on "black slavery."

I find that people have a problem with any black man standing up for his race and trying to uplift and place his people in a better position. (i.e. Jesus, Martin Luther King, Malcolm X, Farrakahn and even Professor Griff).

Mr. Campbell, only when you begin to understand the pain we feel when it comes to physical and mental slavery will you begin to understand why it is a black thing.

The last statement I want to close with is you made an assumption that Mr. Triche is practicing negative racism. You will probably say that I am doing the same.

If you want to call stating the actual facts racism then call us racist, but I promise you that we would not practice the same demonic, savage, dehumanizing, inhumane type of racism on you and your people that your people have practiced on us and our people.

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents Tuesday:

- A student reported that an unidentified man masturbated in front of him in the Hayden Library men's restroom.
 - A student was arrested and cited for being a minor in possession of alcohol at 725 Adelphi Drive.
 - A male juvenile was told to stop throwing oranges at the windows of the Palo Verde Main complex.
 - A female student was transported to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital after she became faint in the MU women's restroom.
 - A student reported that $139 worth of clothes had been stolen from her room.
 - A student reported her trumpet stolen from the second floor of Gammage Auditorium or the Music Building. Loss is $175.
 - Police impounded a tire from a Pathfinder 26-inch bicycle, which was locked to the handicapped entrance of the Music Building.
- Tempe police reported the following incidents Tuesday:
- Nineteen officers responded to calls of an out-of-control fight at Sgt. Pepper's Video Dance Nightclub, 1848 E. University Drive. A large crowd was involved in a fight between patrons and staff, including the owner of the club. The club owner's wife sprayed Mace into the brawl, but the Mace filled the entire building, causing the crowd to run outside. The owner was taken to the hospital for treatment of a possible broken leg. Officers found blood in the parking lot, but no evidence of shots fired, as a call reported. Reports from patrons of someone being shot in the stomach were also not confirmed.

Two cars collided in the parking lot as officers directed traffic out. One of the cars fled and was pursued as far as 24th Street and Broadway Road in Phoenix. Officers tried to move the crowd away from the Circle K on the corner of University and McClintock drives. Shots were fired from a black Nissan pick-up leaving the store's lot. More shots were heard as the truck headed south on McClintock Drive. Police found no evidence of the bullets striking anything.

Approximately 75 patrons from Sgt. Pepper's entered the Jack-in-the-Box, 721 S. Mill Ave., where one man assaulted a 19-year-old customer.

• A 67-year-old woman was found slumped over the wheel of her 1991 Dodge at 1200 E. 8th St. The car veered to the right, crossing the sidewalk and railroad tracks, coming to rest against a block wall. Attempts by an officer and citizens to revive the woman with CPR were unsuccessful. She was taken to Tempe St. Luke's Hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

• A 41-year-old man died after striking a raised median at high speed with his motorcycle while traveling northbound on Mill Avenue. The man, who was not wearing a helmet, was tossed off his bike and struck the pavement causing massive head trauma. Police believe alcohol was involved.

• A 19-year-old woman was kidnapped from the Circle K, 926 E. Guadalupe Road, by a black male, 60 to 65 years old, 5-foot-9, 230 pounds, gray hair, dark eyes, wearing blue-jean overalls and a dark-colored Clint Black T-shirt. The suspect forced the woman to drive to the west side of Phoenix where he forced her to have oral sex with him. The man then beat the victim, scratched her skin with a knife and stole $14 from her purse.

• A white male, 5-foot-5, 140 pounds, mid to late 30s, with a beard and mustache and "dirty appearance," and wearing a black baseball cap backwards, robbed Circle K, 2044 E. Southern Ave. The man demanded money from the cashier while displaying a wooden-handled handgun in his waistband. He ran out of the store, heading toward the back, after stealing $27.26.

• An 18-year-old ASU student was arrested after he assaulted two men and pushed an officer aside while leaving Taco Bell, 936 E. Apache Blvd.

• A 26-year-old Phoenix resident was arrested after she stole a rental car. The woman was hitchhiking when she was picked up by a man attending a conference at the swimming pool of Kiwanis Park, 6111 S. All American Way. The woman asked to have the radio on in the car until the victim returned. The man left, leaving the key in the ignition, and returned to find the car gone. The suspect was found in Phoenix and the car was returned to the man.

• A Hispanic male, 18 to 23 years old, 5-foot-9, 160 pounds, short brown hair, wearing blue jeans and a gray T-shirt, was masturbating outside Jazzercise Inc., 4930 S. Ash Ave.

• Two Phoenix residents reported that large rocks were dropped from the Kyrene overpass and damaged their cars while they were traveling west on Superstition Freeway.

Explore The Next Generation

Apply For Motorola's Summer Engineering Internship Program

You don't have to wait for graduation to begin exploring the engineering challenges of tomorrow. Our NEXT GENERATION summer internship program is designed to allow a select number of top Engineering students to gain first-hand experience in the vast and challenging world of Motorola.

Our NEXT GENERATION summer internship program will allow you to explore such areas as analog/digital, RF circuit design, the development of hardware and software communications systems design, modification, implementation and maintenance of applications of software and the mechanical design of advanced voice/data products for a worldwide marketplace. Choose to work in one of our high technology centers located in Schaumburg, Illinois, Fort Lauderdale, Florida or Boynton Beach, Florida.

We are seeking engineering students who have completed their freshman, sophomore and junior years and have the talent to exceed all other generations. The program is designed for engineers who wish to reach new heights and continue to climb. Motorola's commitment to the NEXT GENERATION goes beyond summer employment. Special hiring bonuses will be awarded to those interns who join us full-time upon graduation. Interns will also have the opportunity to compete for Motorola scholarships for continuing their education.

We will be interviewing on campus for summer internships in February. See your Placement Office for more details or send your resume to:

penalty of the Libyan court is absolutely severe. It is death," al-Zawi said.

Al-Megrahi and Fhimah were presented to journalists after the news conference, but reporters were prohibited from asking any questions.

"I just want to say that we are not guilty," al-Megrahi said when offered the chance to speak.

Fhimah, except for identifying himself, remained silent. He was the manager of the Libyan state airline office in Malta at the time of the bombing.

A senior PLO official told reporters Tuesday night that a 1½-year PLO investigation had absolved Libya, determined where the bomb's timer was obtained and identified the bomb's maker. Bassam Abu Sharif provided no details, but said the probe implicated "parties in the Middle East."

The United States has said the timer was Swiss-made and bought by Libyan agents.

In Washington, State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said, "We think that a Libyan investigation or a hearing is a travesty of justice, amounts to nothing more than another attempt by Libya to delay and to evade its responsibility."

The U. N. Security Council demanded last week that Libya surrender the two men. It also demanded four other Libyans be turned over to France to face charges in the bombing of a UTA plane over Africa in 1989 that killed 170 people.

Western nations have raised the possibility of economic sanctions if Libya defies the resolution. The United States and Britain also have not ruled out military action.

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi has denied the two men are government agents or were involved in the bombing. He has vowed not to hand them over to the United States or Britain, but has proposed a trial before an international body such as the World Court at The Hague, Netherlands.

U. S. and Scottish authorities contend the pair, using Air Malta luggage tags, routed the bomb-rigged suitcase from Malta to Frankfurt, where it was transferred to the Pan Am flight.

to send a message, compared with 47 percent who said he would make the best president. More than half said they would not vote for Bush if he was the choice in November.

Angela Bay Buchanan, sister and manager of the challenger, said. "This is a victory. Protest votes don't run this high. We're going against a president in his own party in the state that put him in office."

Buchanan campaigned to the end, declaring at one point Tuesday, "We're going into Georgia and Super Tuesday with enormous steam." Those Southern primaries are on March 3 and 10.

William Bennett, the former administration official, said in a CNN interview that the New Hampshire verdict was "serious trouble" for Bush. He said the president would have to get tough with Buchanan now; "kinder and gentler is over."

In the Democratic primary, with 43 percent of the precincts reporting, Tsongas and Clinton both were splitting New Hampshire's 18 convention delegates. The vote was:

Tsongas 22,919 or 34 percent.
Clinton 18,701 or 27 percent

For Sen. Bob Kerrey of Nebraska and Tom Harkin of Iowa, the challenge was to defeat the other and emerge as the more liberal alternative to Tsongas or Clinton. Kerrey had 12 percent and Harkin 11. Former California Gov. Jerry Brown 9 percent.

"Bronze ain't bad," said Kerrey, claiming third place with the vote still being counted.

In the exit polls, three in five Tsongas voters cited his specific ideas as mattering most, while 42 percent mentioned his strength and courage. Nearly one third of all voters said they wished some other candidate had been on the ballot. Write in campaigns for New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and consumer activist Ralph Nader were gaining sparse and scattered support.

Democratic National Chairman Ronald H. Brown said the New Hampshire results put Bush "in incredible peril."

"George Bush is a one-term president," he said.

Clinton told his supporters in Merrimack that he "just can't wait to take this campaign across the country . . . and I know . . . in November we are going to win a great victory — against Pat Buchanan."

Tempe trash goes south after flood threat

By D.J. BURROUGH
State Press

The potential for flooding and washout in the Tri-city Landfill has prompted the City of Tempe to send its waste to an alternative fill, city officials said.

Tuesday, the city began sending its solid waste to Butterfield Station, a regional landfill facility located 47 miles southwest of Phoenix near the town of Maricopa.

"Tempe's management has reviewed the present status and believes it is prudent to use another landfill site until the situation at SRPMIC (Salt River Pima Maricopa Indian Community Landfill) is demonstrated to be more stable," said Tempe City Manager Terry Zerkle. "Stability will be evaluated in terms of expected Salt River flows and weather conditions contributing to those flows."

Heavy rains and runoff from mountain snow have contributed to the above-normal water flow in the Salt River, increasing the chances of the landfill washing out and sending refuse cascading down the river.

"We are affected more by what snow and rain may occur in the mountains," said Gary Brown, Tempe's deputy city manager.

The city is working closely with SRP and SRPMIC officials to monitor conditions at the landfill, located on the banks of the Salt River near Mesa and Beeline Highway.

Salt River water flow has also been increased because of the construction work on the Roosevelt Dam that requires that the dam maintain lower water levels, Brown said.

He said the move was temporary and did not violate the city's contract with the SRPMIC.

"When we feel comfortable with the flood risks and the environmental soundness of the landfill, we will be looking at going right back there," he said.

The city's solid waste will travel to the Butterfield station through the Sky Harbor Regional Transfer and Recycling Facility, located at 40th Street and University Drive.

Redistricting to affect north Tempe, ASU

By CHRIS DRISCOLL
State Press

Two state lawmakers who will likely serve parts of north Tempe after legislative redistricting said they are looking forward to representing the ASU community.

A special session of the Legislature this week to reshape district boundaries is expected to result in a section of north Tempe changing districts, giving the area a new state senator and two new representatives.

Area legislators said Monday they saw no roadblocks to the switch that would take north Tempe out of legislative District 21, most of which is in Mesa, and place the area in District 26.

The current plan to redraw the legislative districts, now under consideration by the Legislature, favors incumbents, so the current lawmakers from District 26 would probably represent Tempe north of University Drive.

The area, north of ASU bordered by 48th Street to the west, University Drive to the south and McDowell Road to the north, is now represented by Sen. Matt Salmon, R-Mesa, and Reps. Stan Barns, R-Mesa, and Leslie Johnson, R-Mesa.

Salmon, who presently represents the area, said he is satisfied with the proposed changes.

He said he expected the proposal for his district to be approved, and no one has raised any objections to the change so far.

The new District 26 would stretch from University Drive north to encompass not only north Tempe but parts of east Phoenix, west Scottsdale and Paradise Valley.

Incumbent Sen. Tom Patterson, R-Paradise Valley, said he is looking forward to having a part of the University area in his district.

Patterson added that he foresees no problems with the new district lines receiving approval by the Legislature later this week.

"Look, the map works out well for all incumbents," he said. "I don't think the ASU community is a plus or minus. I don't think I'll lose their vote."

Although Patterson is not an ASU graduate, he said he told Sen. Doug Todd, R-Tempe, that he intends to get a maroon blazer, don an ASU pin and "get with the program."

Patterson said he is frustrated with midyear budget cuts that affect ASU and other state agencies, and would like to see something done to eliminate them.

He said he would like to see more diversity in the state university system. He would like to see more universities, rather than more campuses of the current universities, to foster diversity.

Rep. Tom Smith, R-Phoenix, is one of two incumbent representatives from District 26. He is an ASU graduate and four of his six children also graduated from the University.

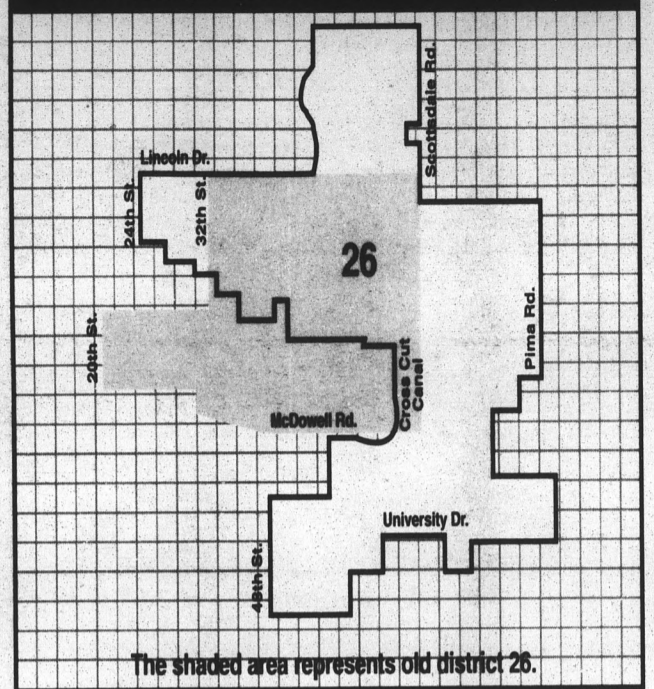

Smith said he has had two careers so far. He spent 24 years in the Marine Corps and 14 years in education — as an elementary and high school principal and a few years as a school board member.

Smith describes himself as a fiscal conservative who thinks that "everybody has got to take their fair share" of the midyear budget cuts the governor has requested.

He said that tough times can be positive for institutions like ASU, as long as they don't last too long, because they are forced to learn to be more efficient.

Smith is a member of the House Education Committee.

New district would include Phoenix and Scottsdale as well as north Tempe

The shaded area represents old district 26.

Professor's book studies 'caring' children

By BLAKE HERZOG
State Press

Nancy Eisenberg, an ASU regent's professor of psychology who pioneered research into the causes of altruistic behavior in children, has published a book that takes her findings and orients them "towards the undergraduate or the intelligent layperson."

The Harvard University Press has included Eisenberg's The Caring Child in the spring 1992 catalog of its new publications.

Eisenberg has written several books on the subject in the past, but she says that with this book she employed "a different kind of writing."

"It is written more for the purpose of getting the information out to an audience that may not have read it before."

The book focuses on the roots of prosocial or altruistic behavior in children and looks for ways to encourage growth in that area.

Eisenberg feels that a child's social and familial relationships are the most important factors in the development of compassionate emotions and actions.

"Kids model prosocial behaviors if they're helped to understand other people's feelings, and to sympathize and to empathize with others," she said.

"Providing opportunities for kids to engage in prosocial, or helpful, behaviors (is important). Kids who have opportunities to do this, and are subtly induced to engage in such opportunities, are more likely to do so again later."

She also cited cultural factors as playing a major role in the development of altruistic behavior. Eisenberg finds that the American social climate sends mixed messages concerning compassionate gestures.

"More traditional cultures are more cooperative. They help their family members, their neighbors, their community more. They work together more. We value independence and autonomy and competition, which conflicts with cooperation and caring," Eisenberg said.

"However, sometimes in a small culture there may be higher degrees of cooperation and caring within the group, but that doesn't necessarily mean that people will be kind to those outside of their group."

"I actually think that our Western culture, while we're worse on cooperation and helping our families and neighbors, we may be no worse at all in helping people we don't know. In fact, we may even be better."

Eisenberg, who has been at ASU since 1977, is a well-known expert in the field of social and emotional development. She has written a number of books on the development of prosocial behavior, including one of the first books on the subject, which was written and published in 1977.

Layoffs

meet future needs in the reproduction area.

"We feel that the direction to go in is more of the digitized technology that has the capability of being networked," Jensen said.

However, Joe MacKay, Printing Service's supervisor and one of the layoff casualties, took issue with the financial aspect of the decision.

"We are a profitable entity and a service to the University. It's a real waste of the University's money because what we do they'll have to spend many times over going outside," he said.

MacKay added that ASU is losing more than just money.

"The University will lose the advantages of quick, same-day deliveries in addition to cost savings," he said.

However, Jensen said the University is reorganizing and updating equipment specifically to bring more efficiency to the printing services offered at ASU.

"The volumes in the print shop have been dropping over the last several years, and we are in a position right now that we need to make a significant investment in equipment if we are going to continue the print shop in a competitive way," he said.

Tim Stelf, a senior graphics communication major, is a student employee at the print shop. He said he felt the Purchasing Department was disrespectful toward the printing staff and failed to handle the layoffs in a sensitive manner.

He said personnel from the Purchasing Department laid off the entire staff in less than 15 minutes.

"I think they deserve a little more than 15 minutes — that's pretty sad," Stelf said.

Arvy Johnson, another Printing Services supervisor, said the news was all the more shocking because of the dedication of the staff.

Johnson and her co-worker, Joanne Schultz, have each been with the printing department for 28 years. All the employees have worked at ASU for a minimum of six years.

Schultz said, "I have worked here for almost 30 years, and I was very shocked when I heard the news. I thought that my job would always be secure and that I would retire from ASU."

John Riley, assistant director of Business Services, said, "The employees have a number of years, in some cases a lot of years of dedicated service to the University, and we are sorry to see them go."

Coor against bills

"I don't have any objection to the historic practice of other elected officials serving as members of the governing board of a public university," he said.

The Academic Senate has expressed support of the two bills, and representatives from ASU have been working closely to develop the bills with the Legislature.

Academic Senate President Alan Matheson said he had no expectations about Coor's opinion because he had not stated it last year.

"I think the president is free to react how he chooses on the issue," Matheson said. "He has given his reasons openly and has been very candid and forthright.

"These are matters that people have different opinions on. That the president sees this in one light and the faculty in another is an indication that everyone has a different approach.

"Lattie is not one who hides his feelings. He expresses them, and he does that reasonably and well."

Academic Senate President-Elect Dickinson McGaw, who helped draft the bill, said faculty governance has improved since Coor took the presidency three years ago, but added that more work remains.

"There is still unfinished business at Arizona State University with respect to faculty governance," he said. "Faculty should be able to control the most important decisions regarding promotion and tenure.

"The reason we support this is because other colleges at NAU and the University of Arizona are not experiencing the same kind of enlightened administration we have here at ASU."

Fire

fire could not be determined until the damaged unit was removed.

"(It) probably shorted out and burned," Anderson said. "The only thing to burn in there would be the insulation on the wires and that sort of thing."

An alarm alerted ASU's Department of Public Safety at 12:29 p.m. of a fire in the basement of the building, located near Noble Library in the southeast portion of the campus.

DPS notified the Tempe fire and police departments and then moved to evacuate the building and establish a safety perimeter around the building, said ASU Sgt. Bill Wright.

Tempe Fire Inspector Larry Randall said the fire was limited to the transformer, and the 25 firefighters called to the scene had the fire under control within an hour of its onset.

"It was pretty much a by-the-numbers fire," Randall said of the one-alarm fire. "It went pretty smooth."

Randall said the four-engine and two-ladder company left the scene at just after 4 p.m., once tests determined that carbon dioxide gases in the building had returned to a level that required no breathing apparatus.

out and vote."

But Mason said the New Hampshire primaries could have the opposite effect.

"People may see Buchanan as stronger than they thought and they may come out and think that they have a chance of getting Bush out of office," he said. "It will definitely set some sort of trend, which one I can't possibly guess."

Steve Garling, a graduate student in business administration, said that although he is a Republican, he does not support Bush or any other candidate.

"No one has offered an alternative or given a platform that I favor," Garling said.

Garling said Bush has a good record with foreign affairs but his domestic policy is lacking.

"He has got to deal with problems at home," he said. "He's only done half of his job."

Garling hopes Buchanan's large share of the vote "woke up

Bush because I don't think he is decisive enough, especially when it comes to domestic affairs."

Cindy Severson, a senior business major who said she is a Democrat, said the outcome of the general election in the fall depends on the state of the country's economy.

"If Bush doesn't come forth with some concrete ideas, I think that people are going to start looking seriously at Tsongas and Clinton," she said.

NEW YORK (AP) — Pennies from heaven? How about from shoe boxes, coffee cans, piggy banks, pillowcases and even an antique Chinese vase? Thanks to an organization called Common Cents, all this loose change adds up to help the homeless.

"We look at pennies as problems — they're just gathering a lot of dust, what a drag, let's throw them out," said Teddy Gross, the group's founder.

"A lot of people have the same attitude towards the poor — what a nuisance," he said. "But if you start with the very smallest thing in the world and say this has value, it's like saying everything has value."

Some 30,000 New Yorkers have donated a total of $103,000 in loose change since Common Cents was formed about a year ago. That included 7 million pennies — about 21 tons — and an assortment of quarters, nickels, dimes, 50-cent pieces and Susan B. Anthony dollars gathered in everything from piggy banks to an antique Chinese vase.

The money has paid for 50,000 meals prepared by soup kitchens and food vans; three weeks of summer camp for 71 homeless youngsters; hundreds of blankets, coats and sets of thermal underwear; and recreation programs in family shelters.

Gross, a playwright, was inspired after his young daughter noticed a homeless man on the street and asked why they couldn't help him.

"I remember running in Riverside Park and looking up at all the buildings, and seeing in my mind this huge penny bank — sort of imagining what the city has in wasted wealth," Gross said.

ASU catcher Dave Robson awaits a throw while Grand Canyon's Matt Evans slides home in the Sun Devils' 14-12 win Tuesday.

Sun Devils cut it close at Canyon

Antelopes won't quit as ASU's quick start earns it 14-12 victory

By DAN ZEIGER
State Press

PHOENIX — It initially appeared as if it would be a game for those who like to skip to the end of mystery novels, as the ASU baseball team seemed to have erased all of the suspense with a huge early advantage.

But you can't judge a book by its cover. So regardless of how insurmountable the Sun Devils' 10-0 lead in the third inning against Grand Canyon on Tuesday might have seemed, it was still a college baseball game at Brazell Field — anything can happen.

And considering all of the wild and wacky game scenarios that ASU has been through over the past few seasons, having to frantically hold off a furious rally to get a 14-12 victory was really no unusual experience.

"This was just an unbelievable game," Sun Devil catcher Dave Robson said. "They sure battled back. It is way too early (in the year) for these kind of games — usually you expect this around the 20th game of the season, not the eighth or ninth."

Yet talk about your gut-wrenching situations — with the bases loaded and one out in the bottom of the ninth, the fellow whose game it was to win or lose was a guy who at this time last year was a regular student.

Brent Smith, a sophomore relief pitcher who walked on during the fall, had entered the contest in the seventh inning with an eight-run lead, but the Antelopes then collected eight hits off of him over the next two frames to close the gap to a pair.

And now in the ninth, he had just intentionally walked Canyon third baseman Doug Kimball — the potential game-winning run — to set up a possible game-ending double play. ASU (9-1) could have turned that double play earlier in the inning, but second baseman Bill Dunn could not handle the ground ball.

With the modest gathering of 874 in a nervous frenzy, Smith fired to first baseman Matt Evans, who stroked a grounder just to the right of second base.

This time, Dunn came through. "It wasn't the best-played of games," Smith said. "Everybody had to make a great effort for us to win this one. But it was a great effort — and it was a very good thing that our bats came alive."

Smith wasn't especially effective — he allowed eight hits and five runs in three innings — but ASU coach Jim Brock and pitching coach Dub Kilgo never lost confidence in him. Even when the reliever

HEDAKE

Smith earning way into big-time college hoops

By DARREN URBAN
State Press

Sometimes ASU sophomore guard Stevin Smith just sits back and thinks.

He thinks about his heady days in high school, when the Dallas native lit it up on his way to becoming one of the top recruits in the country.

He thinks about making it into the collegiate ranks, and just where he thought he would be halfway through his second year — and in all honesty, it wasn't quite like this.

"Right now, I might be a little off-track," the 20-year-old said. "As a sophomore (in high school) I set a school record for 3-pointers. Right now, my shot is not falling like it was in high school."

"But in high school, I never had to worry about working on my shot like I do now."

The transition from prep ball to college has been a fast and bumpy ride for the man everyone calls "Hedake" — a nickname given to Smith by his mother, who wanted to fit the moniker of her hard-headed toddler on her license plate.

Thrust into a major role as a freshman, the 6-foot-2, 200-pound Smith endured a rude awakening, starting slow in an ASU uniform. But by the end of the year, Smith showed flashes of his talent, playing two solid games in the NCAA tournament en route to an 8.2-points-per-game average.

The experience led to a less cocky, more confident Smith, a player who has been able to weather the difficulty of 1991-92 — including a telephone credit card scandal and an up-and-down season on the court.

"I've learned more this year than I did last year," Smith said. "I've learned what it takes. Like when you look at my free throw percentage. Last year it was 60-something, and (Coach Bill) Frieder was always preaching to me, 'Shoot free throws, shoot free throws,' and I used to laugh because I was like, 'Yo, I'm a freshman.'"

"This year, that's all I do is work on things like that."

The jumper still hasn't come all the way back. Although he hit 3 of 5 treys in the Sun Devils' last game against Washington State, Smith has labored to hit 36.6 percent of his shots, 33.8 percent from 3-point range.

But because of his added responsibilities — an increased emphasis on scoring has jumped his average to 12 per game — Smith is willing to wait patiently, looking to his other accomplishments: tied for first in the Pac-10 in steals with 2.1 a game, and second in the conference (8th in the nation) in free-throw shooting at 90 percent.

"A real player doesn't worry about things like (criticism)," Smith said. "Everybody can't have a great game every night. You can't have 20 points every night. You just have to face things like that, learn how to accept the criticism, and just play."

"You accept it as a challenge and play hard. That's one thing about me — I don't even worry about how people look at me and what people think."

Frieder said he is impressed with the progress Smith has made, despite the fact

Sun Devils open spring season with Burns tourney in Hawaii

By BRIAN CHARLES
State Press

After a two-month layoff, the top-ranked Sun Devil men's golf team returns to action at the John Burns Intercollegiate Tournament Thursday in Oahu, Hawaii.

The Sun Devils are coming off a very successful fall that saw 13 top-10 individual finishes and a team that won three of the six tournaments it competed in.

"That was our best fall as far as records go, but we can't be fooled by it," ASU coach Steve Loy said. "We have to continue to get better."

Loy, who was the 1990 Pac-10 coach of the year, led the Sun Devils to a national championship that year and looks to continue his success as it comes off a third-place finish at the NCAA championship in 1991 and now shares Golfweek's No. 1 ranking with Oklahoma State.

Leading the way for the Sun Devils will be three-time all-American and ASU legend Phil Mickelson, who needs only three wins to tie Ben Crenshaw's record of most collegiate wins. Mickelson has now posted an amazing 23 consecutive top-10 finishes, and will get eight possible chances the remainder of this season to tie Crenshaw.

Also returning for ASU will be stars Brett Dean and Todd Demsey, and newcomer Trip Kuehne.

Dean is coming off three top-10 finishes last season and looks to continue to contribute. Loy has been quoted as saying Demsey is one of the best-kept secrets in golf. Demsey had five top-10 finishes in six starts in the fall.

Freshman Kuehne was the most highly recruited prep in 1991 and has become an impact player immediately. In high school, he recorded two individual Texas state titles and joins Crenshaw as one of only five Texas preps to do so.

The other members of the 1992 squad are freshmen Larry Barber and Danny Campos and juniors David Fuina, Rob Mangini, Keith Sbarbaro, Cade Stone and Ben Weir. The seniors include Jason Spittler and Scott Sullivan.

The 16th-annual John Burns Golf Classic is played at the 6,552-yard par-72 Kaneohe Klipper Golf Course in Oahu. The field includes 18 teams from all around the country, including such top-ranked teams as USC, Stanford, UNLV and arch-rival UofA.

The Sun Devils finished third in the event last year behind UNLV and USC and unfortunately will be without Mickelson, who will be competing in a PGA tournament in San Diego that weekend. It will be his third PGA event this season, as he placed in the Tournament of Champions (passing up $10,000) and missed the cut at the Phoenix Open by a few strokes.

ASU's next match will be in Tucson at the Ping Invitational with several top-ranked teams.

Sun Devils use doubles to crawl past Wildcats

By BRIAN CHARLES
State Press

Down 4-2 after singles, it looked as if the ninth-ranked ASU women's tennis team would be unable to keep its skein of wins against seventh-ranked UofA alive, but dominating doubles play allowed the Sun Devils to squeak by their arch-rivals 5-4 Tuesday at the Robson Tennis Center at UofA.

The Wildcats (5-2, 1-2 Pac-10) took an early lead as they dominated singles play. Led by senior Danielle Scott, currently ranked 11th in the nation, UofA took four of the six singles matches.

ASU senior captain Krista Amend met Scott in the No. 1 spot and fell 4-6, 1-6. Fellow senior Luann Klimchok also fell to a tough Erica O'Neill 3-6, 7-6 (7-5), 6-7 (3-7). In addition, sophomore Meredith Geiger was defeated by Alix Creek in the No. 3 spot 3-6, 2-6 and junior Dawn Martin lost to Jane Yates 7-5, 6-7, 3-6.

The saviors for the Sun Devils (4-1, 2-1) were a pair of freshmen. Kori Davidson has now won two in a row as she defeated 40th-ranked Banni Redhair 1-6, 6-2, 6-4, and Joelle Schad continues to play brilliantly as she defeated Beth Choate 7-6 (7-3), 6-2.

Luckily for the Sun Devils, they got hot at the right time as doubles play took over the match, not giving up a single set.

ASU's tandem of Amend and Schad could be the answer to Coach Shelia McInerney's doubles problems, as the pair beat Creek and Allison Grace in straight sets 6-0, 6-3.

In the No. 3 doubles spot, Klimchok and Davidson proved to be a potent matchup, defeating Choate and Lesley Barbour 7-6 (10-8), 6-0.

The No. 1 tandem of junior Pam Cioffi and Geiger proved to be the difference for the Sun Devils. Facing 11th-ranked Scott and Redhair, the duo, which lost two tough matches this past weekend, finally got its wake-up call. After winning the first set 6-4, UofA applied some pressure and forced a tiebreak. Cioffi and Geiger held and went on to win in the second set tiebreak and the match 6-4, 7-6 (7-3).

Smith has had no one to sit behind and learn from.

"If Stevin Smith was able to come into this program as a freshman and learn from Stevin Smith who was a junior and a senior, he would be farther ahead, as far as maturity and things like that, than he is," Frieder said. "On the other hand, coming into a program with the opportunity to play has other advantages."

Perhaps the biggest change in Smith has been in his attitude and work ethic. He has repeatedly stressed his belief in team play this season, preferring to score two points in a win than 20 in a loss.

And the 15 minutes of free shooting time the basketball players get in practice have been transformed from wasted time to work time.

"Now I just shoot free throws," Smith said. "Last year, I was just jiving around with big Ike (Austin) trying to dunk and throwing alley-oops. This year I've gotten with the guards, doing what I'm supposed to do."

ASU Note

The game between the Sun Devils and UofA Thursday night, a sell-out that will be televised nationally on ESPN, has been changed from a 7 p.m. start to 7:30 p.m.

got into trouble, the Sun Devils never had anyone else warming up.

"There are two kinds of confidence in that situation," Brock said. "You have his, and then there is ours in him. And he did some things well — he kept his composure and still threw some strikes. So there's no way he'll have confidence in himself if we don't have it in him."

ASU, ranked 16th in the nation by Baseball America and 13th by Collegiate Baseball, sent 12 players to bat and scored eight runs in the first inning. The biggest blows were a two-run homer by Scott Samuels and RBI singles by Robson, Brett Weinberger and Todd Stevenson.

The Sun Devils increased the lead in the third when Weinberger doubled and was brought home by shortstop Kurt Ehmman, who took a 1-2 pitch from Alfred Kermode and deposited it over the left field wall for a two-run home run.

And so it stood at 10-0 — but the Antelopes never seem to be out of it when playing at home.

"Even if another team gets a big lead, they just keep playing hard," Canyon coach Gil Stafford said. "I see that as a sign of respect, that the other teams think we are capable of scoring eight or nine runs. Sometimes we can."

The Antelopes (7-4) came back with five runs in the third off ASU starter Kevin Rawitzer, led by RBI doubles from designated hitter Darrin Forster and left fielder Bill Robbs. Rawitzer, a junior making his second start, pitched 2½ innings and wasn't involved in the decision.

Mike Fenton relieved Rawitzer and earned the win by allowing four hits and two runs while striking out three in 3½ frames of work. The two runs were the only ones he has allowed in 12½ innings this year.

But with the Sun Devils ahead 13-5 in the seventh, Fenton put two men on base and Smith came in. Canyon scored three runs in the stanza on RBI singles by Kimball and Robbs and a fielder's choice.

The Antelopes rung up four more in the eighth, with the first coming when outfielder Ryan Freeburg singled off Smith's ankle to bring in Josh Hurst from second. Canyon got its other three runs on RBI singles by Evans and Robbs and a sacrifice fly by Kimball.

ASU scored an insurance run in the top of the ninth as Samuels drew a walk and advanced to third on two wild pitches. He then scored on a sacrifice fly from designated hitter Doug Newstrom.

"This was a game where I felt if we had won, it would've been a plus, but if we lost, we'd be about even," Brock said. "This just goes to prove that you never have enough runs on the road — especially in (Brazell) — and this was a perfect example."

The Sun Devils return to action this weekend at ninth-ranked Texas for a three-game series that begins at 1 p.m. on Friday.
