By CHAD REDWING
State Press

A proposed African-American culture hall in next year's Residence Life options has stirred controversy about why the $100,000 program was created, as administrators disagreed on its origin.

The program, developed over the last few months, will be housed in Ocotillo Hall and is aimed at fostering an environment in which students can learn about African-American culture, according to Natalie Young, co-chairperson of ASU's African-American Coalition.

The living option is the "best alternative to fostering the success of incoming students, especially out-of-state students," Young said.

Proposed activities include lectures, workshops and activities about African-American culture.

David Stephen, associate director of Residence Life, said that the idea for the new living option came from the administration.

But Dean of Student Life Art Carter said the interest housing was the result of student protests.

"I think that it is something that really grew out of the student protests as an idea," Carter said. "It was sort of an idea that just sprung up. I don't claim any ownership of it."

Carter was referring to the Jan. 17 protest in which 20 black students wearing ski masks stormed the third floor of the MU demonstrating against the lack of

ASU faces harsh match for state's top students

This is the first in a two-part series detailing the growing attention given to the recruitment of top scholars at ASU as the University attempts to increase its academic stature.

The fact that 101 of 120 recipients of the prestigious Flinn Scholarship have chosen to spend their four, all-expense-paid years at UofA has been a persistent thorn in the side of the ASU Honors College.

When the 20 1992 Flinn scholars are announced today, Tempe faces a month of competition with Tucson for the top students in the state, who are being offered four years of free tuition, room and board at any of the three state universities, plus two free summer-study trips to any place in the world.

The scholars must turn in their final selections by May 1.

According to Brad Halverson, communications assistant for the Phoenix-based, non-profit Flinn Foundation, the organization does not provide any direction

Spring showers a 'rain' of terror for allergy sufferers

By MARGO GILLMAN
State Press

Rain showers and skyrocketing pollen counts have increased allergic reactions among many Valley residents, and local health officials say the springtime affliction is nothing to sneeze at.

Norma Clark, a registered nurse at the allergy clinic of the ASU Student Health Center, said the rain has spurred "especially bad" allergy flare-ups among ASU students.

"The extra rain has made everything bloom real well," Clark said, explaining that allergic reactions are triggered by the spread of pollen, which is produced in the flowering process. "In Arizona, you have a non-stop allergy season, but in the beginning of March things start blooming and it just gets worse."

Pollen irritates the respiratory systems of allergy sufferers, she said. Their symptoms include sore throat, watering eyes, sneezing, coughing and breathing difficulties.

Clark said the chief allergy-causing culprits for April are the Bermuda and Johnson grasses, the eucalyptus, mesquite, mulberry, and walnut trees, Rabbit Bush and ragweed.

But students are also reacting to the Arizona cypress, olive, pecan and pine trees, the privet bush and tumbleweed, which are entering their pollination peaks.

Lopa Misra, a 20-year-old senior biology major, said she only experiences allergy attacks once or twice a month, when she is exposed to dust and various grasses, "but it's really bad when it happens."

"I sneeze continuously — about five times every few seconds," Misra said. "And I get some flu symptoms, like a runny nose and red eyes."

Misra said she never suffered from allergies until she moved from India to Arizona seven years ago.

"But I usually can control it with antihistamines (the most common type of allergy medication), because it's pretty short-term," she said.

Clark said about 80 students seek relief from allergy attacks once or twice a week by obtaining antigen injections from the ASU Student Health Center's allergy clinic, which operates on Mondays and Thursdays.

"I give injections for whatever it is they are allergic to," Clark said, explaining that students bring serum, which is prescribed to them by private physicians, to the center because there aren't any allergists on the Student Health staff. "If this doesn't help, we'll treat them with antihistamines or use steroids, if the case is especially bad."

But in most severe cases, patients are referred to local allergists, she said.

Dr. Chester Leathers, an ASU microbiology professor who has monitored the Valley's air for 34 years, said allergy relief often occurs during a 24-hour period after a rainstorm because the air is free of most particles.

"But as soon as the ground dries up and the winds kick up, it starts again — so the relief is only temporary."

Tips for allergy sufferers

- See an allergy specialist.
- Take over-the-counter medication for temporary relief.
- Keep doors and windows shut.
- Keep pets out of bedrooms.
- Stay indoors evenings and nights.
- Clean air filters once a week.
- Use an air conditioner instead of a swamp cooler.
- Keep house or car dust-free.

Budget bind may worsen, lawmaker says

By CHRIS DRISCOLL
State Press

A state lawmaker told an audience of mostly classified staff Wednesday that ASU could face an increasingly bleak budget because of Gov. Fife Symington's request for a spending freeze and new programs initiated by the Legislature.

Patterson

"I do think the universities are falling behind on the prioritization list," said state Sen. Tom Patterson, R-Phoenix.

"The news on university funding is basically bad. You would need a 7 (percent) to 8 percent (yearly) increase to keep up with (student) population growth and inflation."

But he said the governor has asked that university funding remain stable, dollar for dollar.

"And that's a cut," he said, "No one would tell you different."

Patterson, a self-professed fiscal conservative, represents District 26, the boundaries of which are scheduled to include parts of ASU and the community north of the University after state elections next November.

The legislative redistricting plan has been passed by the Legislature and signed by Gov. Fife Symington, said Patterson, the minority leader of the Arizona Senate.

The meeting was hosted in the MU and was sponsored by the Legislative Task Force.

Randy Udeman, executive director of the Arizona Students Association, said the portion of the state budget shared by Arizona's three universities has fallen from 19 percent to 15 percent since 1980.

Patterson said that a "flurry of bills" have been passed by the Senate that would create new programs — and the need to fund them.

Each new program that gets funding now means less funds left for the programs that already exist, such as the university system, he said.

"My very strongly held position is that we should fund, first of all, as a very high priority, those programs that exist now," Patterson said.

He also expressed mild disapproval of a bill sponsored by Sen. John Dougherty, D-Green Valley, that would put a faculty member of one of the state's three universities on the Arizona Board of Regents.

"I feel kind of equivocal about it," he said. "I do have a concern that if we start having designated seats on the regents that there are other groups that would want seats, and I think we could end up with a Balkanized board."

Patterson said he is not in favor of the tuition freeze imposed last year by the regents because it singles out one program for special treatment. Still, Patterson said he would not necessarily be in favor of a tuition increase.

Udeman asked Patterson how he interprets the section of Arizona's constitution mandating an education that is "as nearly free as possible."

Patterson said he doesn't know what it means, but would like to see the courts rule on the meaning.

He said he is in favor of insuring that cost is not a deterrent to anyone in the state who wants a university education.

Jan Philips, an ASU administrative assistant, said she knows of instances in which state employees, working at the Capitol with the same job titles as staff at ASU, make more money.

Patterson said he didn't know why the discrepancy exists, but promised to investigate the issue.

Fred Amaro, president of the Classified Staff Council at ASU, urged the audience to attend a rally in support of higher education at the State Capitol at 6 p.m. April 9.

Bush pledges aid for former USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush pledged Wednesday the United States will help finance a $24 billion international aid fund for the former Soviet Union, rejecting criticism he has been too slow to support democratic reform in the collapsed communist superpower.

"This isn't any Johnny-come-lately thing and this isn't driven by election year pressures," Bush said at a White House news conference. "It's what's right for the United States."

Even as Bush announced his program, Democrat Bill Clinton accused the president of moving too slowly on economic and humanitarian aid to the former Soviet republics. At a speech in New York, Clinton called Bush's foreign policy "reactive, rudderless, and erratic." Last month, former President Richard Nixon had said U.S. support for Russia was "pathetic."

Bush, at the White House, said, "Some people will attack you for doing too much and some for not doing enough. I think this is right."

Nixon, endorsing the proposal, told NBC News on Wednesday: "This is a recession year and aid is not popular. But in aiding them we're helping ourselves."

The $24 billion aid fund would be extended by financial institutions such as the International Monetary Fund with principal backing from the Group of Seven — Germany, Japan, France, Britain, Italy, Canada and the United States.

Apart from the international fund, Bush said the United States would provide $600 million in new credit guarantees for grain purchases by Russia and a total of $500 million for Ukraine, Armenia and other former republics of the now defunct Soviet Union.

The money would be in addition to the $3.75 billion in agricultural credits approved by Bush since January 1991.

Bush and other administration officials were at a loss to say how much the overall plan would cost American taxpayers. The plan repackaged many earlier proposals, including a long-stalled $12 billion request to Congress to replenish loan funds of the IMF. The only major new expense appeared to be the $1.1 billion increase for agricultural credits.

However, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said afterward the program included "roughly $3 billion-plus in new money." He broke it down this way:

- $1.1 billion in new credits for Russia, Ukraine and other former republics.
- $1.5 billion as the U.S. share of a $6 billion fund to stabilize the Russian currency.
- $500 million to $1 billion to finance and insure U.S. investments in Russia.

Six bodies found in burned-out gambling house

BOLIVAR, Tenn. (AP) — Many knew what went on at a remote creekside cabin, but after six bodies were found in its burned-out remains, few are talking.

Authorities knew the cabin was a gambling house where high-stakes poker was played. They didn't know how violent Monday night's game was going to get.

Forensic pathologists took the bodies to Memphis, about 70 miles west of this southwest Tennessee town, to identify the remains and determine the cause of death.

Investigators presume they're dealing with six homicides, and that the thousands of dollars said to be in the poker game has something to do with the motive. Hardeman County Sheriff Delphus Hicks said he is looking for more than one person, but has no suspects.

"We won't know anything, really, until we get the forensics report," the Tennessee Bureau of Investigation's John Mehr said Wednesday.

"Where there's gambling going on there's usually large amounts of money. So that's got to be one thing we'll look at."

Investigators believe the victims — whose bodies were found next to each other — were murdered.

"Any time you have multiple deaths like this you start out presuming it's a homicide," TBI Director John Carney said.

The two-room cabin is owned by Ted Green, son-in-law of the state fire marshal who is participating in the investigation. Green is among those missing.

Relatives of others kept a vigil Tuesday by the iron gate that blocked the long gravel road that trails off a country lane and stops at the cabin.

Arabs criticize U.N. sanctions against Libya; protesters rally

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Syria, Tunisia, Lebanon and the Arab League criticized the new U.N. sanctions against Libya on Wednesday, and Moammar Gadhafi reportedly threatened to withhold oil exports to Europe in retaliation.

Protesters in various Libyan cities condemned what they called the unjust and Draconian sanctions the U.N. Security Council imposed Tuesday on Libyan air traffic and arms trade, the official Libyan news agency JANA said.

"In Tripoli, the enraged masses flowed into the streets of the city holding up green banners, pictures of the leader of the revolution and placards which express their rejection of this outrageous resolution," JANA said.

A pro-government newspaper in Bahrain asked: "What new world order are we talking about? And what is the world going to do under this new world order?"

The paper, Akhbar Al-Khaleej, told readers in the Persian Gulf state that the meaning of the resolution "is crystal clear, that the big ones can impose what they want on the world, flouting limits of logic or justice, flouting respect for international law and the real will of the international society."

But the Arab League said the dispute could be resolved by April 15, the date the sanctions take effect unless Libya turns over six suspects in the terrorist bombings of Pan Am Flight 103 in 1988 and a French airliner in 1989.

In all, 441 people from 32 countries died in the airliner bombings.

U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali has ordered an aide, Vladimir Petrovsky, to travel to Tripoli to persuade Gadhafi to comply with the U.N. demands, said a high-ranking U.N. official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Petrovsky is undersecretary for political and security affairs and a former first deputy foreign minister of the Soviet Union.

Libya on Wednesday began speeding up the granting of exit visas for foreigners, after slowing them down prior to the Security Council's action, said Italy's ambassador to Tripoli, Giorgio Testori.

The delays were seen as an effort to pressure the Security Council to think twice about imposing sanctions; Libya had denied there were any delays.

Syria's foreign minister, Farouk al-Sharaa, said in Lebanon that the issue of responsibility for the bombings — in years past, some officials claimed Syria has a role in the Pan Am bombing — should be handled by the World Court in The Hague, which has yet to issue its non-binding decision.

"The Security Council has nothing to do with such a dispute because the Security Council is concerned only with any threat to peace and security in the world," al-Sharaa said.

Union Carbide chairman charged with homicide

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — On his desk he kept a paperweight bearing the Chinese proverb, "Leader is best when people barely know he exists." But a low-key management style couldn't insulate Warren Anderson from his company's ignominy.

His name came up again in an Indian court last week, along with the words Union Carbide Corp., Bhopal and methyl isocyanate and the horrific images of the world's deadliest industrial accident.

The court requested the extradition of Carbide's retired chairman and chief executive officer to face the equivalent of manslaughter charges.

At least 4,037 people have died and 20,000 were injured from inhaling the poisonous gas that leaked Dec. 3, 1984, from a pesticide factory run by Union Carbide's Indian subsidiary.

Anderson rushed to India the next day, without consulting his board of directors, and was briefly detained. Besieged by reporters, attorneys, stockholders and consultants upon his return, he hid out with his wife and her 84-year-old mother in a Stamford hotel for a week.

He worked on a monetary settlement before retiring in 1986. Before Bhopal, his decades-long rise through the ranks to lead one of the world's largest chemical companies had been distinguished by an ability to keep a low profile.

Now 70, he lives out of the spotlight in Bridgehampton, N.Y., with his wife of 45 years, Lillian. His hobbies include golf and traveling.

Those who watched Anderson struggle through the disaster's aftermath say the Indian government has been unfair in pointing a finger at him.

"I always felt the Bhopal crisis that punctuated his career was an unfortunate end to what was otherwise a sort of sailing journey that was reasonably devoid of storm," said James H. Wilbur, a chemical analyst at Smith Barney, Harris Upham & Co. Inc.

The extradition move, which must be approved by the Indian government, may be an attempt to deflect criticism of the $470 million settlement Carbide negotiated, said Hans Smit, an international law expert at Columbia Law School in New York. India initially demanded $3 billion in damages.

"This (extradition request) is pretty farfetched," Smit said. "Are they trying to get some hay out of going after poor Mr. Anderson?"

Friends remain protective of Anderson's privacy and company officials declined to help reach him, saying he is now a private citizen. He has an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached for comment.

Turman offers nothing

Dear Editor:

In the beginning of this four-part series of race-relations columns, I was glad to hear the views and ideas of an outside party. Rossie Turman seemed to be a new source of light in a dismal area of our society. A viewpoint without the undertone of hate and a new look at potential ideas to help counteract the wrongs of racism. Not. Instead, all I see are one-sided viewpoints with the idea that if you do not agree with them, then you must obviously be a racist, whether active or passive.

I was quite intrigued by the title of your third column, "Americans invoke invalid excuses for injustices." Are you not a citizen of the United States? If so, then you are condemning yourself along with the all other Americans. You may profess to be an African-American, but none the less, you are an American. In a time when our country is facing hardships of every kind, it would seem logical to try and get people to unite rather than segregate.

In regard to your interpolation of the Judeo-Christian faith, read William Frix's response, "Justice or mercy." (April 1). His article answers that point quite nicely. You continue your discussion by using the old idea of monetary compensation today for the injustices of yesterday. I am a fourth-generation decedent of the Cherokee Nation. Yet I cannot hold today's society responsible for the actions of the past. I can only try and combat those injustices of today and make sure they never occur again.

I must say that your last point was my favorite, "Would you die for my race?" I and many others I personally know have stood up for the injustices that affect us all, not just racism. I have verbally and physically defended those who where being discriminated against and will continue to do so. A wise man once said, "It is the mark of an immature man who wants to die nobly for a cause. I would rather live humbly for one."

We must seek out the injustices of society, but that must not be our only goal. We must find new ways of solving these problems and then implement them along existing programs. Every journey has a first step. Because people does not actively combat injustices does not mean that they are supportive of them. Rather, the fault lies with you and me for not informing them better.

Archaic arguments

Dear Editor:

We shouldn't just stop at visiting the sins of the fathers upon succeeding generations; we need to return to solid Old Testament principles!

Yes, Ah've seen the light. Hallelujah, Ah is saved! Let's return to those pre-Christian days; let's cut the hands off those who are thieves; let's kill our brother.

Line up, line up, some fathers could take a leaf from the Old Testament; now, who was it — someone called Isaac or Isaiah who was prepared to sacrifice his son to God? Now doesn't that just make you feel so proud and warm inside? What a shame that we have lost such wonderful principles — it was all the fault of those rational Greeks!

Let's build a nice big bonfire on the West Lawn, and then how about bringing back the Inquisition, and throw a few people onto the fire. I'll tell you what — Protestants on Tuesdays; Catholics on Thursdays; witches on Fridays. What a shame that people like Voltaire and Thomas Paine happened along and brought about the Enlightenment! What pains in the ass those humanists were!

Yaas, let's smote our enemies; reduce their cities to ashes or pillars of salt — it depends upon which one you prefer.

Personally, salt would be more useful — the survivors could always use the salt on french fries! Send in a few plagues — boils or acne; lots of green slimy frogs; the deaths of the first-born; locusts, yes, especially, locusts.

I like that! What a shame that the Renaissance happened — it was all the fault of those pesky descendants of Rome!

Yes, Ah is going to be a Holy Roller! Just like that sainted man, Mr. T_____!

Animal rights vs. AIDS

Dear Editor:

The back page ad of March 31, sponsored by the Americans for Medical Progress Educational Foundation, attempts to blame the animal rights movement for the AIDS epidemic. This attempt utilizes two tried-and-true strategies of corporate America: divide and conquer minority opinion, and what has come to be known as the "your baby or your dog" scare tactic.

The divide-and-conquer strategy is aimed at both the animal rights movement and the AIDS activist community. In fact, the two groups are remarkably similar and are fighting for the same thing: an increase in federal funding of human clinical trials for AIDS drugs. Research dollars are being wasted in a futile attempt to develop a non-human animal model. Meanwhile, AIDS victims are dying due to a lack of human subject studies and experimental drugs. AIDS activist J. Scott Douglas, of Washington D.C., writes that "human clinical trials for AIDS drugs are trapped within the research bureaucracy . . . in fact, mice stand a better chance of getting experimental AIDS drugs than do many people dying with the disease." Additionally, the Presidential Commission on HIV concluded in 1988 that "the lack of appropriate animal models for HIV research makes the application of animal research to humans uncertain." What progress has been made in fighting the AIDS epidemic has come from human serum studies (isolation of the virus) and epidemiological studies (modes of transmission revealed).

These ads began appearing last week in the New York Times, Village Voice, and the Washington Post. The cost of a full-page ad in our own State Press is $816. Whose interest is being served by this expenditure? The Americans for Medical Progress Educational Foundation board of directors includes: Leon Hirsch, president and founder of U.S. Surgical, a staple manufacturing company (director of Americans for Medical Progress); Thomas Bremer, an attorney for U.S. Surgical; and Anneliz Hannan, who also holds a position with U.S. Surgical (president of Americans for Medical Progress). U.S. Surgical has come under fire in recent years for having non-medical sales personnel demonstrate stapling techniques on live dogs. Over 20,000 physicians have signed petitions asking U.S. Surgical to end this useless practice. U.S. Surgical is very much a profit-oriented organization.

The scare tactic of employing America's most volatile, misunderstood disease in an attempt to raise funds ignores the ethical questions that surround the use of non-human animals in laboratories. In what might seem like an ironic pairing, animal rights groups and consumer health advocates are finding themselves aligned against established institutions that refuse to fund preventative interventions and alternatives.

The Americans for Medical Progress Educational Foundation is spending untold thousands of dollars to preserve their own interests. Their decision to use AIDS in an attempt to manipulate public opinion is unfortunate.

Library services cut

Dear Editor:

I would like to offer a correction to Tracy Phillips' complaint in the State Press on March 30 about Noble Library's services during spring break. The library maintained the usual spring break/intercession schedule, which means that we were open during the break with shorter hours. The only time the library was closed was on Saturday and Sunday, March 14 and 15, and on Saturday, March 21. Hours for the library can be determined by calling 965-7133 at any time.

Some of the services, e.g. group study room reservations, have been discontinued due to the reduction in our student wage budget, which is also affecting our ability to maintain the reshelving of books as we would like.

I and my staff appreciate Tracy Phillips' suggestion that library service should be among the institution's priorities.

Police Report

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- Two students were involved in a car and bicycle accident along University Drive. A female bicyclist, riding westbound along the south side of the sidewalk, was struck by a male driver pulling out of Student Health Services Building. The cyclist suffered bruises on her right knee, left thigh and upper left arm. She also suffered a cut and bruised left ankle. She was not able to ride her bike, but used it to help her walk to work. Police were not called until about nine hours later, after the victim began to feel stiffness. The cost of damage to the bike was unknown.

- An employee lost her engagement ring on the fourth floor of the Farmer Education Building. The ring was yellow gold with a diamond center. No value estimate was available.

- The rear window of a student's vehicle was damaged while it was parked in Lot 42. Loss is $200.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

- Nathan Colosimo, 22, a Tempe resident, was arrested and charged with possession of

- a dangerous drug after a search of his residence found ecstasy pills and marijuana. The search warrant was served after Colosimo sold four ecstasy tablets to undercover officers in March in the area of Mill and Southern avenues.

- Three juveniles were arrested at Whataburger, 1346 W. Rural Road, for allegedly causing disturbing behavior and throwing rocks with two of their friends.

- An 18-year-old employee of Jack in the Box, 700 S. Mill Ave., was arrested after allegedly pushing a 25-year-old employee and hitting him in the head.

- The Dairy Queen at 950 S. Mill Ave. was broken into through a window. The floor safe was forced open and $27.89 in change was stolen. The locks of the drop portion of the safe were punched out, but that part of the safe was not opened. Police seized a cartoon map of Tempe, which had blood and fingerprints on it, as evidence.

- The refrigerator in the kitchen of Palo Alto Preschool, 1723 S. College Ave., was broken into and a 3-pound block of American cheese valued at $8 was stolen. Damage to the refrigerator was $50.

House bill would legalize concealed weapons in Arizona

By RICHARD RUELAS
State Press

Arizona residents can carry their guns in parks, restaurants and stores, but a bill before the Arizona House of Representatives would let them carry their guns in secret.

Rep. Dave Carson, R-Prescott, is sponsoring for the fourth year in a row a bill to legalize concealed weapons.

If House Bill H2581 is passed, Sgt. Al Taylor of the Tempe Police Department said, "people will be carrying weapons that normally would not be carrying them, and they would take them into places they would not normally be going into. "No, we don't feel it's a good idea," he said.

Guns can already be worn in partial secrecy. State law says that as long as a weapon is in a holster, it is not considered to be concealed.

Further, a person wearing a gun need only expose part of the holster, not the weapon, to comply with the law.

Larry Weinstein, general manager of Great Guns in Tempe, said repealing the concealed weapon law "would make things a lot easier."

"You go to a lot of places, places like Smitty's, and there's a sign that says 'No Guns.' You want to have your gun, but they feel you can't because it makes people nervous," he said.

Taylor said he foresees problems with weapons in "stores, bars, churches, (because) in a heated situation, they will have accessibility to a concealed firearm."

Weinstein said concealment would make gun-toters more socially acceptable.

"Not everybody likes to have a gun staring them in their face," he said.

Weinstein said he carries a gun every day, but does not wear it constantly.

"I hope and pray to God I never have to pull it from my holster," he said. "But the way crime is now, you have the right to defend yourself."

Taylor said a weapon is concealed if it is accessible and out-of-view. But, he added, any gun in a holster is no longer considered concealed — even if out of view.

Guns in purses are illegal without a holster, but a gun can be carried under a vehicle seat as long as it is not in reach of any occupants.

Glove compartments are fine for guns, so long as no passenger is in reach of the compartment, or if the compartment is locked.

Carrying a concealed weapon is a Class 1 misdemeanor with a maximum six-month jail sentence and a maximum fine of $2,500.

City to raise refuse rates

By D.J. BURROUGH
State Press

To keep up with increasing landfill tipping fees, the city will have to increase the refuse service rates charged to residents, according to a city report.

The refuse rate analysis report stated that in order for the city to break even in its refuse operations, the current service rate of $8.45 per month for each household should be increased 22 percent to $10.40 per month.

"We've been paying now more money to have our trash hauled away, and we've not recouped any of that cost," said Councilman Neil Giuliano. "You can't do that for long without running into a deficit."

The city moved its dumping operations from the Tri-City Landfill Feb. 18 because rising flood waters in the Salt River threatened to inundate the EPA-unapproved landfill and send refuse cascading down the river.

Since that time, the city has been sending its waste to a landfill operated by Waste Management.

The tipping fee the city was charged at the Tri-City site was $8.35 per ton. The tipping fee the city is currently paying for dumping at the Waste Management transfer station is $18.25 per ton.

"It wouldn't have mattered whether we stayed at the landfill or went to the transfer site," said Craig Clifford, a Tempe accounting planner who prepared the report for the council. "One way or another, it was going to start hitting us in the pocketbook."

Clifford said the city was planning for a major rate increase in July from the Tri-City Landfill and was anticipating raising residents' rates.

"We were at least anticipating a sizeable increase in our costs," he said. "The change to the transfer site came at an opportune time while we were already analyzing our costs."

Clifford said 92 percent of the rate increase is attributable to the increase in tipping fees.

"The only way to avoid increasing the rate is if we just cut back our service levels," Clifford said.

The city currently offers twice a week pickup for residential homes and also has a once-a-month uncontained pickup. The uncontained pickup service allows for the removal of items too large to fit in the trash container.

"We don't want to cut back on services at all," Giuliano said. "It is one of the things that Tempe has a great reputation on with its citizens."

Giuliano said the city couldn't continue to absorb the added refuse costs and that the council would have to pass the increase along to the residents.

"It is nothing we can control," he said. "It is what it is going to cost."

Giuliano said he thought the proposed recycling program the city was hoping to begin would be delayed by the landfill fee increase.

"It may put the implementation of our curbside recycling program back a year," he said.

Federal judge denies execution stay

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday refused to halt triple murderer Donald Eugene Harding's scheduled execution next week and defense lawyers turned next to a federal appeals panel.

Harding, 43, is scheduled to die at 12:05 a.m. Monday in the gas chamber at the Arizona State Prison at Florence in what would be the first execution in the state in 29 years.

His lawyer, Denise Young of the Capital Representation Project, vowed an immediate appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco. She said Harding "is not an antisocial personality. He is brain-damaged."

Assistant Attorney General Jack Roberts countered her contention that Harding had been a victim of a miscarriage of justice. He said the record was clear that Harding had insisted on representing himself at his 1982 trial for the Jan. 25, 1980 murders of Mesa businessmen Robert Wise and Martin Concannon in a Tucson hotel.

He also said Harding's lawyer on his first appeal could have raised claims of ineffective trial representation, but it's too late now.

In addition, he said, "No way from now to the millennium could Donald Harding establish" his factual innocence.

Roberts said he has filed motions with the 9th Circuit and the U.S. Supreme Court to vacate any stay.

Meanwhile, the state Board of Pardons and Paroles meets Friday to take requests from Harding for a sentence commutation or reduction — an automatic step in Arizona death penalty cases.

"Obviously it went well for us, because on the law and on the facts, he can't demonstrate what the Supreme Court says he has to," Roberts said after the ruling.

Mehr said the TBI knew about the gambling house. Agents hadn't closed it down because it was considered a county matter, and because of manpower concerns.

The sheriff said "it appears there was some card playing, some gambling going on there. But I don't know."

Many similar clubhouses in the county, which borders Mississippi, are often used for fish fries or other gatherings, Hicks said.

"They're just a place to get away from things, he said. "All of them are not gambling houses. You've got people owning them who do no wrong."

Only cinder blocks and ashes remain of the cabin.

Robert Frost, the state fire marshal, described the scene as "a gray hole and greasy spots."

Betty Graves, one of the last four people to see the victims alive, said a card game was being played in the cabin Monday night.

"It was just poker," Ms. Graves said. Graves said her companion, Kenneth Derrick, had played and decided to leave shortly after 1 a.m.

"When we left, it was six people inside and two outside," she said.

Mehr said officers are talking to everyone they knew who played poker at the cabin.

Since Tuesday morning, Graves said she has kept a watchful eye on her front yard, afraid that whoever killed the six would come after her.

Authorities didn't know about the fire until a relative of a missing man walked past a locked gate and down to the clubhouse along Spring Creek, Hicks said.

"He came out looking for some guy who didn't come home this morning," Hicks said Tuesday.

University response to diminishing black faculty. More than 50 other students protested outside the building.

Five students were arrested in the incident.

"Students expressed an interest in (the program)," Carter said. "Student Life and Residence Life collaborated on it as something that could be very valuable."

Stephen, however, remembers a different scenario.

"It is my impression that it was kind of his (Carter's) brainchild," Stephen said. "My recollection is, he said 'I really haven't talked to the students about it yet, they may not be interested, but this is kind of my thinking.'"

In addition, Stephen's first impressions of the program were negative.

"My first reaction is that it is not consistent with my own experiences," he said. "It is not consistent with what I would want to see in a community per se. But, if it is something the students want, then that is a really compelling argument."

Carter, meanwhile, defended the worth of the program.

"There was lots of discussion as to what kinds of things would make the campus a better place for African-Americans," he said.

Carter said the idea for such a program came from university campuses in other states that have an "African interest house," in which students from any ethnic group who have an interest in African-American life and history could live and work together.

Carter also stressed that it was students, not administrators, who expressed initial interest in the idea.

Still, Stephen said Student Life was responsible.

"I think the whole idea came from our side and not their side — but they certainly adopted it," he said. "I've heard that there is some feeling out there that the black student coalition has been rewarded for 'misbehaving,' and I don't see a relationship to that at all."

But Young said the student protests played a major role in creating the new hall.

She said that it was because of the protests and the ensuing meetings that ASU officials began to develop an African-American hall.

She added that "anybody can live there, not just African-Americans."

Carter said that if people do not feel comfortable living in the situation, they simply "wouldn't join such an interest house."

Scholar

to the Flinn scholars when it comes to picking a school.

"When it comes to choosing a university, we remain completely neutral," he said. "But we do encourage them to check out all three universities and find out what they're all about."

Honors College Dean Ted Humphrey said he feels the first group of Flinn scholars set a precedent in 1986 that may be hard for ASU to break.

"In that year, 17 Flinn scholars went to UofA, and that group of scholars became a very powerful recruiting tool for the University of Arizona," he said. "And that became self-perpetuating."

But with six of the 20 1991 Flinn scholars choosing to attend ASU, the University made unprecedented headway in the recruiting showdown. Humphrey hopes to at least match that number this year.

"I think it's critical for the academic standing of the institution. I think these students add a lot of leadership to the institution," he said.

Clifford Lytle, director of the Honors Program at UofA, said he believes most Flinn scholars go into the recruiting process "with their minds made up."

"But there are some students who are choosing between ASU, UofA and NAU and more important, outside universities," Lytle said. "And the purpose of the Flinn Scholarship is to try to keep those wonderful minds in the state of Arizona."

According to Halverson, over the years 17 scholars have chosen to go to ASU and two to NAU, with two others transferring to NAU from UofA later in their college careers.

Flinn scholars give varying answers as to why they chose the way they did.

Cindy Schorzman, a freshman chemistry major at ASU, was impressed by what the Honors College had to offer.

"I really think it offers an opportunity to experience a small college within a large university," she said. "The Honors program at UofA seemed to me to be every man for himself. The Honors College here has offered a lot of guidance, the staff has been incredibly supportive, and it's just a lot more personal attention."

Ruth Allard, a sophomore interdisciplinary studies major at UofA, said ASU has strong programs.

"I guess, overall, ASU's been considered a better school in the past in a general liberal arts perspective, but people who are interested in journalism or certain branches of engineering tend to go to ASU because they have a really good program," she said.

Allergy

Leathers, the director of research for an aero-allergy monitoring project of the Maricopa County Health Department, said recent air samples from Phoenix, Scottsdale, Tempe and Mesa indicate that the mulberry tree, and ragweed currently have the highest pollen count.

"Arizona is getting close to its pollen peak," he said, explaining that olive tree pollen will bring in the highest pollen count during the end of April to mid-May.

Scott Messing, a 29-year-old junior communication major, said he had severe allergy problems when he lived in New York about 7 years ago, but the Arizona pollen has had little effect on him.

"I really had it bad back East with the grass and molds," he said. "But now I'm usually fine — I only have reactions sometimes to orange tree pollen and dust."

Leathers said it is not uncommon for people who move to Arizona from different climates to have their allergies worsen or improve.

"We have ragweeds out here that are different from those in the East," he said. "So they may find relief, but sooner or later, they are likely to become sensitive to what we have here."

● MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Take my cheap tricks — please. The cost of laughing index is down this year — and that's no April Fool's joke.

The novelty business is booming despite the recession. And that's never more obvious than on the first day of April.

"We've got a 14-inch megapuke from England that's selling like crazy," said Mark Burger, owner of San Francisco's House of Magic. "It looks like a fresh meal, and you can roll it up and put it in your pocket."

Burger sold 40 $12.50 megapukes in his first 90 minutes of business Wednesday. He said he dropped prices for his most expensive novelties this year after the "high end" of the business fell 20 percent and the "low end" increased more than 30 percent.

The cost of a wiggly fake dead rat in a trap, for instance, dropped from $30 to $25 before people began buying them.

"The tighter money is, the more volume we push. Business is booming for low-end gags," Burger said.

Greg Richard, a 35-year-old customer, was thinking about buying a seat cushion that has a fake hand to pop up between victims' legs when they sit. But he also liked the powder that turns liquids into gelatinous goo.

"I figure that if I don't buy it now, the opportunity is gone," Richard said. "And I love to see their faces when I pull a gag."

At the House of Humor in suburban Mountain View, people were stocking up for the future.

"You always want to buy extra," said Joan Sloss, a professional clown who bought two packages of fake doggie-doo. "You never know when you may need another packet to use as a practical joke on a friend."

Malcolm Kushner, a Santa Cruz lawyer-turned-humor consultant, said hard times haven't killed humor, partly because it comes a bit cheaper these days. His annual Cost of Laughing Index that measures 17 comedy indicators fell slightly this year — .03 percent — for the first time in six years.

The index includes prices for comedy club admissions, rubber chickens, Groucho glasses, arrow-through-the-head gags, humor magazines, singing telegrams (dancing chickens and pink gorillas) and fees for writing TV sitcoms.

Groucho glasses went up a bit, from $14.40 to $15 per dozen, but most other prices stayed steady or dropped slightly with the economic downturn, he said.

"It's costing less to laugh," Kushner said. "People are still buying gags, but I don't know why in an election year. Why buy a rubber chicken when you can go to a campaign appearance and see comedy for free?"

● BULLHEAD CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Police say they're fielding a lot of worried inquiries about a brand of chewing gum that some children think will help them get high.

Despite the name, Buzz Gum doesn't contain any drug stronger than caffeine, said Jim McCabe of the Mohave County Sheriff's Department.

"It was deliberately packaged to entice young people to think they were going to get high," McCabe said. "The kids thought it was something illicit."

There have been reports of children shoplifting the gum, eating large amounts and getting sick, he said.

Officers who work in anti-drug programs have had to study up on the gum to answer questions from students, teachers and parents.

"The children had a concern it was laced," McCabe said.

The gum's maker, Nekros International Marketing of Ogden, Utah, said the product contains an "organic natural energizer" called guarana that's extracted from the nut of a South American shrub.

Guarana, used by natives in Brazil and sold in tablet form in health food stores, contains caffeine, Nekros owner Greg Gossett told The Mohave Valley Daily News. He said it would take 10 sticks of the gum to provide as much caffeine as there is in a cup of coffee.

ASU men's swim coach Ron Johnson has been named Brazilian Olympic coach.

Johnson named Brazil swim coach

By DARREN URBAN
State Press

ASU men's swim coach Ron Johnson has spent his career in Tempe turning his squad into an international melting pot, bringing in Olympic-caliber foreign athletes.

The practice seems to have had a positive effect.

Johnson, who has four Brazilians on his current Sun Devil team, was named coach and technical director of the Brazilian national team Wednesday, in order to prepare Brazil for the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.

"I'm thrilled because it gives me an opportunity to work with four guys that have done very well for us this year and with some other Brazilian swimmers that we're looking at (to recruit)," Johnson said.

The four ASU Brazilians — junior Emmanuel Nascimento and freshmen Cristiano Michelena, Renato Ramalho and Eduardo Piccinini — have each qualified for their country's national team.

Johnson leaves for Brazil June 1 to conduct a seven-week training session for both the Brazilian men's and women's squads. Johnson would then come home and would not accompany the team in Barcelona because the Brazilian tradition allows for a political appointment to serve as coach at the games.

"I will not be at this Olympics," Johnson said. "I've been to two games as a coach. It really doesn't bother me because I've got other responsibilities here, and fortunately I have the blessing of (Director of Athletics) Charles Harris."

Johnson said he was contacted by Brazil for the job, in part because of his Brazilian ties and in part because of his second language of Spanish, which Johnson said is close enough to Portuguese to conduct the training sessions.

It also helped that Johnson had a large chunk of the Brazilian squad under his tutelage.

"We gave the idea for Ron to the Brazilian Federation," said Michelena, who credits Johnson for giving him enthusiasm for the sport again after shoulder injuries. "I think it's good for us and good for Ron. He has a lot of knowledge."

Badminton goes for 4th straight championship

Reidy leads Sun Devil dynasty

By MICHAEL FLORES
State Press

"We'll take Manhattan" will be the ASU badminton team's theme as it hits the courts this weekend.

That's Manhattan — as in Manhattan Beach, Calif., the site of the National Intercollegiate Badminton Championships.

A national powerhouse in the sport, ASU will be aiming for its fourth consecutive sweep of the men's, women's and mixed team's national championships under head coach Guy Chadwick, and an unprecedented 10th straight sweep of the team championships overall.

"We don't really know what kind of competition we'll be up against at this stage," said Chadwick, still uncertain of the schools that will be sending players. "We won't really know until we get there."

Regardless, with four team members returning to defend five crowns — together with a fresh crop of talented freshmen — the Sun Devils once again appear poised to repeat.

Junior Tom Reidy, one of the nation's top players, will again lead the ASU contingent. Victories in the men's singles, doubles, and mixed doubles competition would give Reidy his third straight individual triple crown championship, a distinction held by former ASU player Chris Jogis, who accomplished the feat from 1985 to 1987.

"Tom's definitely the man to beat," Chadwick said. "If he plays like he's been playing, he'll be tough to knock off."

The tournament comes during a period in which Reidy has been busy traveling the globe to compete in Olympic qualifying events.

"It's been real hectic the last two months," said Reidy, whose recent performances have helped solidify his chances of going to Barcelona in the summer.

At the heart of Reidy's game is his tremendous concentration which, because of his abundant tournament experience, can be nearly impossible to break. The result:

ASU archer Susan Page prepares to fire during a meet this season. The Sun Devils program could be severely cut if it does not find a way to come up with $300,000 in each of the next three fiscal years.

Archery face$ trying time$

Athletic department budget might hinder winning program

By GREG SEXTON
State Press

An extremely successful intercollegiate sports program at ASU is feeling an economic pinch and is in jeopardy of being reduced.

Due to across the board budget cuts, the Sun Devil archery program may be "drastically reduced" if ASU coach Sheri Rhodes does not come up with $300,000 in each of the next three fiscal years, with the first one starting July 1, 1993. If she can do it, the money will then be used to draw interest that will help support the program.

Easier said than done.

Rhodes said she was recently informed that if she cannot come up with the money, the archery program may be severely cut. Rhodes said she did not know what the cuts would entail.

Also affected by the proposed cuts are the ASU men's gymnastic and badminton teams.

"It is part of the overall plans to reduce the college's expenditures," Rhodes said. "I was told by the Intercollegiate Athletic Board that if I wanted to see the archery program maintained as it is, I would need to come up with the $300,000 by July 1993."

ASU Director of Athletics Charles Harris said that cuts in any athletic program are unfortunate, but he said it is Chris Gambino and the ASU tennis team travel to Tucson to play UofA Saturday.

But women get UNLV 1st, men have Wildcats on road

By BRIAN CHARLES
State Press

As the men's and women's tennis teams wind down their difficult schedules, they are still not out of the clear, as this weekend will be a meeting of rivals for the Sun Devils.

Coming into Tempe to face the sixth-ranked women's team (12-4, 4-3 Pac-10) will first be unranked UNLV at 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Whiteman Tennis Center, followed by eighth-ranked UofA, which will be seeking revenge. The Sun Devils defeated the Wildcats earlier in the season in a close 5-4 match in Tucson.

"There is no question that they will be ready for us," Sun Devil coach Shelia McInerney said. "UofA has been playing exceptionally well lately, beating both USC and UCLA last weekend, but first we can't overlook UNLV."

With wins by UofA over the Los Angeles teams, it is clear that the Wildcats are going to be ready to play Sunday — they will also be hungry.

ASU will have to be on the lookout for sixth-ranked Danielle Scott. Scott faced an injured Krista Amend last time they met and should get a much better match out of Amend since the Sun Devil senior has really come on as of late.

In addition, 62nd-ranked Banni Redhair also adds power to the Wildcat offense, but was handled easily last time by ASU's Kori Davidson. Furthermore, sophomore Alex Creek has now inserted herself into the rankings at the 37th spot.

The Wildcats also possess the third-ranked doubles team in Redhair and Scott, but will probably have to face a very improved Meredith Geiger-Pam Cioffi combination for ASU.

The Sun Devils are coming off a come-from-behind victory over USC and a tough loss to UCLA and have established a good foundation going into the closing month of the season.

Seniors Luann Klimchock and 55th-ranked Amend continue to lead the young squad against the toughest competition, and freshman Davidson, ranked 47th, exploded onto the scene in March, making her presence known to the opposition after a slow start.

In addition, freshman Joelle Schad, who began the year with an injury, has been able to come off that and produce for the Sun Devils.

On the 20th-ranked men's side (6-11, 0-5 Pac-10), very tough competition made for a not-so-terrific weekend last week, but the Sun Devils will have to put that behind them to get an invitation to the NCAA championships — not to mention to get by unranked rival UofA on Saturday in Tucson.

Despite being unranked, UofA's squad is very similar to ASU's. Despite not having any players ranked in the top 50, the Wildcats are a good team that has beaten some tough opponents.

Injuries continue to plague ASU, as junior Chris Gambino, suffering from a broken left thumb, recently had his cast removed. He is still unable to use his greatest weapon on the court, his two-handed backhand. In addition, senior Bryan Geiger has a broken left foot and has been advised not to play until next Tuesday.

Johnson

The experience won't be the first Olympic one for Johnson; he was the coach for the Mexican national team for both the 1968 and 1972 Olympics. He has said that his biggest coaching thrill came in the 1968 Mexico City games, when one of his swimmers collected the first gold medal for Mexico.

Although Johnson won't be around the actual competition in Barcelona, he said he is optimistic that his Sun Devils can make a good showing in the Olympics.

Ramalho swam his lifetime best in the 200-meter individual medley in Tempe; Nascimento set personal marks in the 100 and 200 freestyle; Michelena had a lifetime best in the 200 freestyle; and Piccinini, a recent ASU addition, won a bronze medal in the Pan Am Games.

"All these guys have a chance to do well," Johnson said. "We have seven guys on this team that are Olympians, and two others that have a chance. I think that's pretty phenomenal."

consistency, although Chadwick warned of a letdown from his star.

Reidy will team with Paul McAdam in men's doubles and, together with mixed doubles partner Jenny Chan, defend the title they won last year.

Senior Marc Padre, junior Martin Flores, sophomore Clinton Ang and freshmen Mike Edstrom and Surya Boopathy round out the formidable ASU men's field.

Chan, a senior, is the women's defending triple crown champion, also having won the women's singles title and teaming with ASU sophomore Andrea Andersson to win the doubles title.

"The women's (competition) is a lot more up for grabs," said Chadwick, adding that he wouldn't be surprised if ASU women captured the top four or five spots in singles.

"It looks good for the women's team," Chadwick said. "In terms of depth, we don't really have any weak spots."

With the season over, it's time for the hoop awards

Well hoop fans, the time has come to deliver the 1991-92 ASU basketball team awards, so over the next 20 inches or so, the basketball writers at the State Press are going to present some honors to the Sun Devils. Keep in mind that all decisions were made in strict confidentiality, and the voting process is supervised by Price Waterhouse.

DARREN URBAN
Assistant Sports Editor

It's been a heck of a year for the Sun Devils, hasn't it? The way the coaching staff had to try to mold a very young team without a center. Oh sure, they had their ups and downs... and maybe they had a tendency to break your heart at times... and maybe they played out of control sometimes, but hey! It's a learning experience.

And how about that Mario Bennett? Is he a player or what? His development almost makes you forget about Jamal Faulkner's woes.

But enough small talk. Let's get on to the honors, which I'm sure are coveted by those who receive them.

Most Valuable Player

Bennett made his push late, and Stevin Smith — besides his shooting — played pretty consistently. But there is no question that Lester Neal was the heart, soul, nuts, bolts and everything else intangible for a team that thirsted for intangibles. Although Coach Bill Frieder never officially named a captain, Neal was clearly the leader. And at a listed size of 6-foot-6 (and that is exaggerated), a decided disadvantage for a center, Neal was still able to corral 7.5 rebounds a game playing half the time.

Shot of the Year

Tie: The obvious answer is Faulkner's buzzer-beating 3-pointer to beat Mew Mexico in Albuquerque in early December. At the time, it looked to be the beginning of another stellar year for the sophomore. In hindsight, it may have been the high point of Faulkner's season.

But just as big a basket, given the circumstances of the shot, came from Smith at the end of the first half of the colossal 77-74 upset of UofA in Tempe. After a solid first half, the Sun Devils fell behind 31-30 late in the stanza. Neal tied it with a free throw but missed a second. Smith gathered in the loose ball deep in the corner and burned the net for a 23-foot 3-pointer, setting off the crowd and giving ASU a lead it never relinquished.

Quote of the Year — Player

Given by the indomitable Lynn Collins after the UofA win. Normally serene with his responses, Collins could hardly stand still after the Wildcat game, and his quote was just as lively when he was asked about how close the game was.

"Like I said before, I don't care if we win by half a point, an inch, half an inch — I don't care — as long as we win by a nose," Collins said. "What'd we win by tonight? Three points? Three inches."

Quote of the Year — Frieder

Sure, this category is rigged — after all, Frieder will win no matter what. But the internal competition was tough and, ironically, the winner was the last thing Frieder said at the season's final weekly press conference. Reflecting on his role as spectator at the NCAA tournament games held at the University Activity Center, the ASU coach talked about Bill Frieder, basketball junkie.

"(When I'm retired), I'm going to sit right above that tunnel, and I'm just going to throw shit and boo and dump beer on the players and dump beer on the officials, throw airplanes at the writers and just have a good time," Frieder said. "Because I have fun just watching the game... I'll be Superfan."

The Needs-Another-Pituitary Award

Tie: This one goes to Neal and Dwayne Fontana, the best big men ever to play in guard bodies. Neal's shortcomings (pun intended) are chronicled above, and Fontana would be an awesome power forward if he weren't only 6-foot-4. If anyone feels like sparing some leftover growth hormone, call the Sun Devil basketball office.

The Don't-Count-On-Four-Years-From-Me Award

After watching Bennett improve like he did, does anyone really believe he'll be here when his senior season rolls around?

The Maybe-Four-Years-Would-Be-Good Award

Faulkner looked like he might be one the three-year NBA express after his freshman year as well — not anymore.

the trend in many universities across the nation.

"These are dire economic times," Harris said. "It is affecting everybody from coaches to players to students. Anytime you look at the situation around the country it's easy to see the impact (the economy) is having on higher education."

The ASU athletic department has accumulated a $2.8 million deficit over the last five years.

Rhodes said although the matter is yet to be approved, it is a probability that the proposal will be passed in one form or another.

And she added that she is not pleased with the way the matter has been handled, feeling that the way the ICA Board treated the matter "was very unprofessional."

First, she said she was informed by a partial ICA board on March 23 that the $300,000 was a one-time thing, but four days later, she was informed by the board chairman Milton Schroeder that the money needs to be raised annually.

"I thought it was a one-time thing," Rhodes said. "But they informed me that I needed $900,000 by July 1995, instead of only needing $300,000 by fiscal 1993."

"I have mixed feelings about the whole thing. I am mad with the unprofessional way it has been done."

Schroeder could not be reached for comment.

Rhodes said she will have to raise the money by trying to secure grants and organizing fundraising events, adding that because of the amount of money involved and the time in which she has to get it, she might need to hire someone to help her do the job.

Rhodes, who is in her 16th year at the helm of the archery program, said she understands the need for cuts, but added that her program is already on a shoestring budget. She said most of her budget goes toward travel expenses, and the remainder goes to scholarships and other costs.

Although given the July 1993 deadline, Rhodes said she will go to the ICA Board next March as a "look-and-see" date, in which the board will look at how much money has been raised. It will then determine if an extension will be given for Rhodes to come up with the money before any cuts are to be made.

Rhodes, who served as the 1988 U.S. Olympic archery coach, has built a winning dynasty at ASU since taking the reins in 1976. Since then, her teams have claimed 29 of a possible 30 national crowns. Also, she has tutored more than 100 All-Americans, and ASU is the only institution to win all five national titles in a single season.
