Black protesters storm reception

BASC members decry exclusion from meeting

BY SHAUN RACHAU
STATE PRESS

About 65 members of the Black African Student Coalition, angry that they were not invited to a reception between black community leaders and ASU administrators, burst into the meeting Wednesday to air their views.

"We don't feel that we have enough communication with the black community and the student body," coalition member Jeremy Levitt told the gathering of ASU administrators and community leaders. "When the University invited (black community leaders) here, they didn't extend an invitation to all the black students."

Before entering the reception, demonstrators shouting and carrying signs gathered at the north doors of the MU.

Coalition members said a majority of the African-American population on campus was not invited to the University meeting with black community leaders.

The ASU-sponsored reception was held to inform the African-American members of the community about the progress of cultural diversity programs at ASU. The University meets regularly with diversified sectors of the community.

Members of the coalition told community leaders about the issues facing African-American students at ASU.

Geoffrey Berrett, a coalition member, displayed statistics showing that the representation of African-American courses

Playboy's portrayal of women worries ASU community

BY S. TALBOTT SMITH
STATE PRESS

Some members of the ASU community are up in arms over the image Playboy is imposing on women through the magazine's "party school" portrayal of ASU.

Nancy Russo, director of ASU's women's studies program, said she is concerned that women who are participating in the Playboy shoot are unwittingly "undercutting" their future careers.

"They should look ahead and pass this opportunity up," she said. "It's very sad, and I hope ASU women have more sense than to touch this."

Playboy representatives were at a Tempe hotel Monday through Wednesday interviewing ASU women for a chance to be photographed to back up ASU's "party school" moniker.

Russo said anyone who takes part in Playboy's offering is "cutting all of our throats" by helping to perpetuate the party school image. Russo said she is surprised that ASU men are not protesting Playboy's presence because of the damage the party school rating is doing to everyone's degree.

"I think the student body in general should be concerned about the image of their school," she said. "It affects the futures of faculty, staff and students."

Playboy was on campus recently surveying students to determine if ASU is one of the "top 10 party schools" in the nation. In 1987, the men's magazine ranked ASU at 13. As many as four ASU women will be chosen for photo shoots in the magazine.

Playboy photographer David Mecey said Tuesday that the women will be paid "several hundred dollars," but he would not disclose the exact amount.

Bill White, Mecey's assistant, said more than 130 ASU women — which he described as a "good turnout" — had been interviewed by the photographer as of Wednesday night.

Mecey was unavailable for comment.

Denise Heap, chairwoman of ASU's Women's Association, said female students may be opting to participate in the Playboy shoot for financial reasons or to please their boyfriends. But she said her main concern is that the women are portrayed by the magazine as objects and not as individuals.

"There may be a name and a biography with the photograph, but they are being lumped in as the party women of ASU," Heap said. "It's a very trivializing, damaging portrayal."

"It is easy to understand when women are portrayed this way why you have date and acquaintance rape. It's been going on for generations and women do not speak up."

Heap is also affiliated with the Phoenix/Scottsdale chapter of the National Organization for Women and the ASU Bridge Club, which she described as a feminist group working to establish "bridges" for women's

Tempe could foot bill to save relations

If sponsor not found soon, city will aid $6 million Fiesta Bowl

BY STEPHEN DEMORATZ
STATE PRESS

Tempe will be forced to pay part of the $6 million Fiesta Bowl bill if a major sponsor is not found, but the City Council and the Fiesta Bowl Committee said relations between the city and the New Year's Day game will remain positive.

"It's not in the best interests of the city to have a setback now and jeopardize our relationship with the game," Tempe Vice-Mayor Neil Giuliano said. "If we have to help out the Fiesta Bowl financially this one time, we should."

Giuliano said Tempe should support the game so that the city's 22-year relationship with the Fiesta Bowl remains positive.

The Fiesta Bowl is estimated to generate $25 million for the Valley. Fiesta Bowl officials have not set a deadline for finding a sponsor, but Warren Goodrich, president of the Fiesta Bowl Committee, said he would like to find a sponsor by Dec. 1 to allow for advertising preparations.

The Sunkist corporation cut sponsorship of the Fiesta Bowl in February 1991, and officials have been searching for a sponsor since then.

Tempe, Maricopa County, Phoenix, Scottsdale and the Arizona Office of Tourism agreed early on to support the bowl game if no sponsor was found. Now, with less than a month and a half to go until kickoff, it looks as though these governmental bodies will have to keep their promise.

The exact amount Tempe may have to pay is unknown because the Fiesta Bowl Committee is still selling advertising for the game. Goodrich said the more advertising sold, the less Tempe will be required to pay. The combined amount the state, county and cities would pay is less than $3 million, he said.

Tempe Councilwoman Carol Smith said the city would not be affected if a sponsor is not found for the game because the extra money the city would be forced to spend, which is potentially in the hundreds of thousands, would be taken from a contingency fund Tempe sets up for emergency situations.

Ex-official pleads innocent to misuse

BY DAN ZEIGER
STATE PRESS

A former ASU administrator pleaded innocent Wednesday to 21 counts of misuse of public funds stemming from his alleged loss of $709,000 in University money with cash advances to a theater company.

James O'Connell Jr., former ASU director of public events, was indicted by the state grand jury for making loans totaling $1.4 million to the now-defunct Musical Theatre of Arizona. ASU lost the $709,000 after the theater company folded and was unable to repay the entire loan.

Philip Christensen, ASU associate professor of geology, shows data being received at 11:14 a.m. Wednesday from the thermal emission spectrometer. The data received shows that space is very cold.

ASU's Mars Observer space probe passes first test

By CHRIS DRISCOLL
STATE PRESS

At 9.8 million miles into a 77-million-mile voyage to Mars, an instrument designed and operated by ASU on board the Mars Observer space probe passed its first test without a hitch at 11:15 a.m. Wednesday.

While newly christened sea vessels get a "shakedown cruise" in their natural environment before going on active duty, no such luxury is possible with spacecraft. The Observer's shakedown had to take place during the early phase of the mission.

"It seems to be working as well as could be hoped," said Philip Christensen, ASU professor of geology and principal investigator for the thermal emission spectrometer, one of the eight instruments on the Mars Observer.

"It had to survive launch, which is a very violent activity," Christensen said of the abuse the instrument endured on Sept. 25, when it began its journey to the red planet.

A VCR going through the same violent shaking as the TES during launch would quickly fall apart, he said.

NASA is allowing each instrument to be controlled by principal investigators from their home institutions, so the TES test was actually carried out at the Mars Observer Spaceflight Facility in ASU's Moeur Building.

The TES will reveal the chemical composition of the geology and atmosphere of Mars.

Greg Mehall helped to build the TES while working as an electronics engineer for the Santa Barbara Research Center, a subsidiary of Hughes Aircraft. He is on loan to ASU for the next three years to work in the Mars Observer Spaceflight Facility.

Mehall said the commands to put the TES through its first tests since going into space were actually sent to the spacecraft last week, where they remained stored in one of Mars Observer's computers until today when the instrument was turned on.

The instrument was on for about two minutes, Mehall said.

During that time the TES' two computers were run through a diagnostic test, the motors that turn its moving parts were tested and then it was aimed briefly away from Mars and toward deep space to take a temperature measurement. Since the temperature of deep space is well known, 3 degrees above absolute zero, the TES reading can be compared with what is already known to verify its accuracy.

The next test for the TES will come in February.

"Mars may not be as diverse as Earth is, but I think we're in for some tremendous surprises. I think Mars is going to fool us and there are going to be a lot of new things we are going to learn that we didn't expect," Christensen said.

White House clean on Clinton probe, State officials say

BY GEORGE GEDDA
ASSOCIATED PRESS
WASHINGTON — A State Department investigation concluded Wednesday that officials who snooped in Bill Clinton's passport files had been trying to help President Bush win reelection — but had not done so at the bidding of the White House.

State Department inspector general Sherman M. Funk, disclosing the results of a month-long probe, said:

"There was indeed an attempt to use the Department of State, the records and the people of the Department of State to influence the outcome of the election.

"That is a very heinous activity and shame on the Department of State that it happened."

The two most senior officials held responsible were the assistant secretary of state for consular affairs Elizabeth Tamposi, dismissed last week by Bush, and the acting assistant secretary of state for legislative affairs, Steven Berry, also disciplined.

As for Tamposi's allegations of White House involvement, Funk said in a memorandum to Acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, "We found no evidence that the White House — or any other external source — orchestrated an 'attack' on the Clinton files."

Funk recommended that "less than 10" department officials be disciplined.

Eagleburger disclosed that he had offered his resignation to Bush because of his distress over the department's political activities before the Nov. 3 election.

"When this thing first developed and before the election, I offered the president personally my resignation. He refused to accept it," Eagleburger said.

He told reporters there were no plans to recommend criminal action by the Justice Department against department officials.

Funk had been asked to determine whether the department initiated the file search in response to reporters' requests under the Freedom of Information Act or whether administration officials were attempting to dig up damaging information.

President-elect visits D.C.

BY TERENCE HUNT
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — President-elect Clinton swept triumphantly into the capital Wednesday for a "terrific" meeting with President Bush that ran 45 minutes over schedule and touched on more than a dozen potential trouble spots the Democrat could inherit.

Clinton said he and Bush discussed such global tinderboxes as Russia, Bosnia and Somalia. "He was very candid," the president-elect said. "He gave me a lot of insights. The American people should be pleased."

"It was a terrific meeting." Bush was waiting in the White House driveway to extend a handshake as Clinton stepped from his armored black limousine — on time, a rarity for the often-tardy Arkansas governor.

The White House visit was the first stop on a two-day whirlwind of high-powered meetings and social engagements with the lions of the Washington establishment. Clinton's visit was intended to pave the way for a smooth transition and signal the new president's readiness to deal with Washington insiders.

Demonstrating his willingness to be a good neighbor to the community, Clinton went directly from the White House to Northwest Washington for a walking tour of one of the city's black business districts.

Thousands of well-wishers strained against police lines for a glimpse as Clinton ducked into the Hamilton Seafood Grocery, the Hamilton Laundromat and other stores near the Georgia Avenue intersection.

Former Pakistan leader arrested for political demonstration

BY KATHY GANNON
ASSOCIATED PRESS

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The government arrested former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and her top advisers at a huge political rally Wednesday after they defied a ban on protest and called for the overthrow of the government.

Ms. Bhutto had threatened that 100,000 marchers would storm Parliament. But the march, scheduled to begin 10 miles from the capital in Rawalpindi, was disrupted before it began.

Police barricaded the route, fired tear gas into the crowd and beat protesters. In the capital, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif imposed emergency measures and troops patrolled in machine-gun mounted trucks. Thousands were detained around the country.

"My arrest won't make any difference. The struggle will continue," Ms. Bhutto said in a brief speech to about 40,000 supporters at a Rawalpindi park. Then she and party leaders were surrounded by 200 police and taken away.

Ms. Bhutto agreed to board the plane for Karachi after the government promised to release all opposition party supporters who were members of Parliament.

Ms. Bhutto, an articulate politician with a well-tested ability to attract crowds, says that Sharif's Islamic government is corrupt and repressive and rose to power through rigged elections. She wants President Ghulam Ishaq Khan to establish an interim government that would oversee new elections.

But her demands are unlikely to be met. Sharif's government has a solid majority in Parliament. Ishaq Khan makes no secret of his contempt for Ms. Bhutto.

Ms. Bhutto herself was dismissed from office in August 1990 for alleged corruption, nepotism and abuse of power, paving the way for the October 1990 elections that brought Sharif to power.

Ishaq Khan has filed corruption and mismanagement charges against Ms. Bhutto. A conviction would bar Ms. Bhutto from politics for seven years.

Ten people were seriously injured in other protests Wednesday in Peshawar, and a dozen were hurt in Lahore, including a policeman who was set on fire.

Ms. Bhutto's left-leaning Pakistan People's Party called for more demonstrations Thursday.

The U.S., British and other Western embassies had urged Ms. Bhutto to cancel Wednesday's march, saying it could lead to bloodshed.

To get to Rawalpindi, Ms. Bhutto, 39, and her colleagues pushed through barricades of barbed wire and barrels around her Islamabad home, as enraged police with bamboo batons charged a crowd of supporters.

Ms. Bhutto herself was beaten but unhurt and managed to scoot away in her jeep. A group of 28 party leaders who tried to reach her home were arrested.

She switched vehicles at least three times to outwit police at roadblocks and reach Rawalpindi. There, her supporters had endured steady bursts of tear gas.

Cost-cutting efforts put Postal Service in black, avert rate hike

BY RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — Cost-cutting efforts have put the Postal Service in the black and should help postpone a stamp price increase at least through 1994, Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said Wednesday.

Runyon also told the National Press Club that hours will be extended at more than 5,000 post offices across the country to help meet the expected Christmas rush.

Runyon said progress to cut costs means the price of a stamp may be held constant through 1994.

Without the money-saving measures the agency was facing a $2.2 billion deficit in fiscal 1993 and a 35-cent stamp price in 1994, Runyon said.

He took office in July and quickly launched a massive restructuring of the postal service, including an offer of six-months pay to senior workers who want to take early retirement.

More than 46,000 workers took the offer. Some will be replaced but Runyon expects to cut the postal labor force by at least 30,000 overall — mostly managers. In addition he has dropped some projects and restructured agency debt, sharply cutting interest payments made by the agency.

"In July we were talking about breaking even in 1992. Now we're expecting an operating surplus of $500 million. And we're in a good position to break even in 1993," he said. "All this adds up to two more Christmases at today's rates."

When it became an independent agency in 1971, the Postal Service was ordered to operate like a business, breaking even over time. The agency no longer receives tax subsidies for operations.

Squeezing for sponsors

Last New Year's Day, sandwiched between the Mobil Cotton Bowl, the Federal Express Orange Bowl and the USF&G Insurance Sugar Bowl was the Fiesta Bowl.

Just the Fiesta Bowl — no longer the Sunkist Fiesta Bowl, as it had been known in recent years.

It seems that bad weather caused the Florida grower's oranges to freeze and, in turn, so did the money it pumped into the annual football game.

This year, the 22-year-old Fiesta Bowl is scraping for money because the sponsors have not exactly been crawling out of the woodwork.

Although Arizona voters have finally corrected their mistake of rejecting a paid state holiday to honor Martin Luther King Jr., they may have to live with the results of their hesitation for some time.

After the severe crop freeze — which cost Sunkist $700 million — forced them to pull out, other companies expressed reservations about paying for the event, especially because Arizona had no King holiday.

Now, Fiesta Bowl officials are trying to get cities in the metropolitan Phoenix area to foot much of the bill to avoid losing the estimated $25 million the event brings to the Valley.

The figure may seem small, but it is one Arizona could have avoided altogether.

Despite the best efforts of local officials to recruit sponsorship, many companies are afraid to touch Arizona sports because of the bad reputation it has earned over the last few years.

But to blame the current situation entirely on a failed referendum would be too simplistic.

The Arizona Legislature had numerous opportunities to pass such a measure, at least once every year since former Gov. Ev Mecham rescinded the holiday that predecessor Bruce Babbitt created.

In 1987, a holiday was killed in a Senate committee before reaching the floor, and bills introduced later met similar fates.

So while some lawmakers bragged about giving Arizona a tax break over the summer that averaged less than $7 per person, those same constituents have paid more than that in terms of lost revenue from boycotts against the state.

Count in this year's would-be Super Bowl, relocated national conventions and reduced tourism, and the lost revenue is staggering.

So our price of democracy in this instance is footing part of the bill for a traditional ball game.

But let's hope the Fiesta Bowl can find a sponsor for next year, ranking it alongside the Thrift Car Rental Holiday Bowl and the Weiser Lock Copper Bowl.

After all, the Unified Cities of Phoenix, Mesa, Tempe and Scottsdale Fiesta Bowl would be a bit of a tongue twister for Dick Enberg to spit out every year.

Feminism: A cause without rebels

Perhaps I am being unduly influenced by a recent reading of Robert C. Tucker's new biography, "Stalin in Power," but I have concluded that when it comes to political reform, our feminists have been lamentably half-hearted in their efforts. They say they have "come a long way, baby." I am not so sure. I fear they have been seduced but again. Moreover, I believe that feminism's leaders — the "vozhd" in Russian, the "fuehrer" in German — recognize their political inadequacy.

Some, such as Gloria Steinem and Betty Friedan, write cheerless books suggesting that the whole fevered enterprise would have begun on a surer footing had the sisterhood just settled for a personal growth movement for guys and gals alike, a la est. Other feminist elders are simply angry. In fact, many are angrier today than they were when the feminist light first flashed on in their lovely cocos, illuminating all the hellish iniquities of America. They have a right to be. Feminism gave them no rigorous methodology comparable to that of the late Lenin and no truly resolute leaders such as the aforementioned Stalin.

Consequently, the movement has been almost ladylike, and this "Year of the Woman" fools only the dunces. As the learned, albeit unreadable, Susan Faludi demonstrates in "Backlash," the achievements of the feminist movement have been a vast illusion. Everywhere, the gals are in retreat, as the clever guys of the republic start playing hardball. Tomorrow, the gals will be back in the kitchen relearning their recipes for meat loaf. In time it will be a forced march from the kitchen to the purdah.

Why would Faludi and her sisters ever have dreamed that a more felicitous outcome was possible? Has she not read her own feminist literature? This is a republic whose Constitution was written by Founding Fathers; with such cads in charge, no loophole for the gals was possible. I believe it was Germaine Greer who pointed out that, at least until the late '60s, America was actually a gigantic men's club complete with cigar smoke and spittoons. Women were in a state of slavery. A civil war had been fought for blacks but not even a lone suffragette had suggested that one be fought for women. Four thousand years of worldwide male domination weighed down on us all. Every institution in the land was under the suzerainty of some guy. Even the Daughters of the American Revolution had a guy lawyer. In fact some of the suffragettes were probably guys.

Now, even in the aftermath of this political "Year of the Woman," little has really changed. The Fortune 500 is blatantly under male control. There are some female priests and ministers but only in the religious denominations where God has died. Today, as yesterday, men dominate Congress, the judiciary and the White House; though with the arrival of Hillary on Jan. 20, that last branch of government may be liberated, at least temporarily. True, there are brilliant women prominent in the arts, but always at the sufferance of the guys. And not one woman is even on the roster of a professional athletic team. The National Football League, for instance has no woman lineman or running back or head coach. To be sure there are feminists who have the demeanor of Mike Ditka and probably the brains, but not one has been tapped to coach an NFL team.

At the dawn of feminism back in the 1960s, feminists could have saved themselves from their present slough of disappointment had they made a simple inquiry. Why, then, after centuries of oppression, should the sisterhood have been able to throw off their ancient fetters? Only three explanations exist, and all are very unsatisfactory.

The first is that the feminists of the 1960s were vastly superior in ferocity and daring to the women preceding them. More ferocious than Catherine the Great, Queen Victoria or Joan of Arc? Come, come, these were pretty tough cookies, and they did not even try to overthrow the male tyranny. The second explanation is that the men of the 1960s had somehow lost their capacity to dominate. But all feminists agreed: These guys were brutes. And the third explanation for the fancied end of male domination was that the men had become much nicer. Again, no feminist would swallow that.

Actually — and this accords with the latest feminist scholarship — since the 1960s, men have become more devious. It is time for a new feminist strategy. Try kindness, ladies, and a little night music.

Smokers puffing lame excuses out

Today, Nov. 19, 1992, is National Smoke-Out Day.

All across America, nicotine freaks will be making an attempt to stop smoking and to make their contribution to clean air and easy breathing for all those who have noses and lungs.

There are many reasons given by those who smoke for justifying this ugly and foul-smelling habit, besides the nicotine addiction.

Some say it makes them look and feel older. Others say it makes them look and feel more sophisticated, or they say they like smoking because it relaxes them when they are faced with stressful situations.

Those reasons may be valid to those who smoke, but do the positives of smoking outweigh the negatives?

The American Cancer Society estimates that there are about 50 million cigarette smokers in the United States. It also estimates that there will be 168,000 new cases of lung cancer and 146,000 cancer deaths in 1992. Cigarette smoking is responsible for 90 percent of all lung cancer cases among men, and 79 percent among women. Overall, smoking is responsible for 87 percent of all lung cancer cases.

That means that for just under 50 million men and women in America, the future does not look very promising.

Smoking has been implicated in cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, pancreas, cervix, kidney and bladder.

Smokers are charged higher insurance rates, taxed and discriminated against in most public places, and yet many continue to smoke.

One might think that most smokers understand the risk they are taking when they smoke, and that they would, therefore, take responsibility when they begin experiencing painful and uncontrollable coughing, or shortness of breath and chest pains, or when half their lip begins to hang off and they need assistance in breathing from a machine because their throat is full of holes.

One would think they would accept their fate, right?

That's what I thought until I read that a 51-year-old Carbondale, Ill., man who is dying from lung cancer as a result of smoking one and a half packs of cigarettes a day for 30 years, was suing the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. for $3 million. He claims the cigarette maker persuaded him to ignore evidence that smoking is a health threat.

I am usually not one to defend big businesses, especially ones that attempt to monopolize their markets, but in this case, I feel that it is only fair.

If you are a smoker, you are aware that there is a warning on the side of every pack of cigarettes that reads "Warning: Cigarette smoking may be hazardous to your health."

An illiterate person may not be able to read the warning, but those who can read well enough to see the brand of cigarettes they are buying can surely read the warning that is clearly printed.

Smoking to me is worse than eating rat poison.

You wouldn't eat rat poison, would you?

And even if you did intentionally eat rat poison, would you be responsible for your actions, or would the company be responsible for your death?

I think a certain amount of responsibility has to be taken by the individual.

And if you think that man in Illinois doesn't have a chance of winning his case, think again.

The Supreme Court in June ruled that warning labels on tobacco products don't shield companies from personal injury laws.

I choose not to smoke because I don't like the idea of sucking poison deep into my lungs, having yellow-stained teeth and smelling like an ashtray.

I don't know about anyone else, but I need my kidneys and my pancreas and the rest of my internal organs. And I need my esophagus and the rest of the tubes that make up my throat and upper respiratory system.

My grandfather quit smoking almost seven years ago. Every time he felt like smoking a cigarette, he would eat a piece of peppermint candy.

Then again, my great grandmother has been smoking since she was 15 years old. She's now in her 80s with no signs of emphysema or cancer or anything.

But she's probably the exception rather than the rule.

If you want to quit smoking, you can do it.

It might be difficult, but it will be worth it in the end.

But if you don't quit, the end may come sooner than you think.

'Playboy' emphasizes women's bodies over brains

Editor:

I'm writing this editorial in protest to Playboy's recruitment of ASU women to be exploited in their pictorial issue of the nation's top ten party schools. Not only does this promote the devaluation of the prestige of an institute of higher learning but also that of all women at this University and beyond. I would like to start off my argument by explaining that I am not a militant feminist nor a puritanical radical out to abolish all pornographic material in the United States. I am simply a woman and a college student of this University who is shocked and outraged by this latest attack on women's rights.

Women have long recognized that education paves the road to their independence and is the basis for earning a respected position in a patriarchal society. The portrayal of ASU female students in a magazine that idolizes the flesh rather than recognizing academic successes and ambitions is contrary to everything the women at this University are striving to achieve. I'm writing this article specifically for those women drowning in apathy towards the continual debasement and exploitation of the women in our society and, at this particular moment, of their fellow female students.

My goal is not to demolish the pornographic industry. It is obvious that men will always create the demand for such materials. My purpose is simply to create awareness among female students that may not have considered the threat posed to their own status by the presence of Playboy at their academic institution. Ignoring this latest debasement of the worth and dignity of the female college students at ASU has much larger implications. The use of female ASU students in this sexist publication is a direct attempt to reduce us to the objects of men's entertainment and sexual fantasies rather than to be shown as their viable equals in academia and later in the economic world.

Apathy is synonymous to acceptance in this case and automatically spells defeat for women at this University who are working toward a higher goal of mutual respect and equality among all areas of humanity. It's an outrage that educated, responsible women should allow themselves to be exploited and used to satisfy the traditional stereotype of the woman as a sexual object. (A stereotype that has been propagated by men and supported by apathy on the part of most women.) The irony is that these same women are simultaneously working for their intellectual and social advancement at an institute of higher learning. Playboy, in effect, represents the antithesis of this goal and leads to the ultimate degradation of all women.

Chance for celebration of gay rights victory missed

Editor:

I wish to complain in the strongest terms about a cartoon which appeared on the Opinion page of the State Press on Friday, November 13th.

The cartoon featured a male US Army officer addressing in "typical" military fashion and three male soldiers, one of whom was depicted wearing a dress, a bonnet, a necklace, and a frilly blouse. The reference was to the case of a gay Naval officer who was reinstated to his post following his discharge from the Navy after he publicly stated that he was gay. However, rather than celebrate the extension of civil liberties implicit in the officer's reinstatement, the cartoonist chose instead to indulge in offensive, stereotypical imagery, portraying gay men as being less than men, curiosities and objects of humor and disdain. In short, the cartoon was distasteful, offensive, humorless, and devoid of social or political insight.

Indeed, other than to reflect and strengthen the prejudicial and homophobic climate pervasive throughout society, I cannot see any reason why such an offensive cartoon should have been printed in the first place. Did I miss the point? If so, please tell me: why was this cartoon printed in the State Press?

SRC becoming elite party club with asinine rules

Editor:

The Student Recreation Complex (SRC) is being paid for by all ASU students equally, yet its director and staff are not willing to accommodate the needs of all ASU students equally. The SRC caters basically to the party crowd and leaves out the rest of us. Repeated and numerous complaints about the loudness and the type of music the SRC chooses on its own to impose on everyone who uses the ASU health and fitness facility, are routinely ignored. While it is probably true that a lot of the people who currently use the weight room, the pool and the equipment in the lobby of the SRC, are those who like or can put up with the programming dictated and broadcast by the SRC staff over the audio system, it is also true that many do not, and that many more are kept from using the SRC at all because of it. The message that the SRC staff is sending is loud and clear: "This is our party. If you don't like it, pay up and stay out!"

Why are we all made to pay for a facility which is in fact an exclusive party club rather than a health fitness center for all ASU students and paying staff and faculty? President Coor, how is SRC policy reflecting, supporting or promoting diversity and respect for individual rights on this campus when it clearly reserves a university facility only for a certain segment of the student population? And, Dr. Coor, how is the reputation of ASU for being a party school being helped by the fact that we have such an expensive facility basically serving as a party clubhouse which discriminates against those students who are here to get an education and who are not welcome if they do not fit into the party mood of its staff?

Renato D. Salomone
Senior, Psychology

Editor:

Recently the SRC weight room posted a notice stating, abuse of the collars used to keep free weights on the bars was breaking these collars. Abuse being defined as tossing the collars to the floor. Therefore the SRC is requiring users to keep these collars off of the floor and on the weight bars. This is complete nonsense. As a Ph.D. candidate in physical science, I can assure members of the campus that dropping steel collars 3 feet to a carpeted floor will not subject the collars to damage!

I am sure those in charge at the SRC will insist it is simply their concern over rising costs that have prompted this action. However, if cost was truly a concern then why are three paid employees sitting at the front desk each morning at 6 a.m., two doing homework while the third endures the task of scanning ID's? Instead, this new regulation is simply designed to allow an underworked (overpaid) set of "weight room supervisors" an opportunity to annoy users of this facility. Moreover, the fact that these collars occasionally break is more likely due to their constant use, and fixing them to the weight bars will not only slow down users' workouts, it will probably increase the rate of breakage for the collars!

If those in charge of the SRC are truly concerned about the conditions of the facility, perhaps they would consider remedying the following ailments instead of creating fictional ones:

1. Have all of the drinking fountains in the SRC work at one time.
2. Fix the shower heads (the majority of which are broken).
3. Fix the ceiling leaks throughout the building.

It is likely there are others, but I hope the point is taken.

ASU tuition situation could be worse, official says

By NATALIE YOUNG
STATE PRESS

Compared to the budget situations of four-year institutions across the nation, ASU has little to cry about, a national higher education top official said.

Jim Mingle, executive director of the State Higher Education Executive Officers, headquartered in Boulder, Colo., has been commissioned by the Arizona Board of Regents to examine national trends in the tuition-setting process.

The Board of Regents will meet Thursday at UofA to explore options in setting tuition and fees.

"According to national statistics, ASU was not typical at all of the national trend," Mingle said. "Tuition this fall for four-year public institutions increased by 10 percent, and the year before there was a 12 percent increase. ASU was extremely fortunate in that last year there was no increase."

"Arizona has the opportunity to explore more options because the state is relatively well-off compared to other institutions across the nation who are going through major budget cuts, the cancellation of programs and drastic increases in tuition," Mingle said.

He added, "It is the first time since the Depression that state governments have appropriated fewer dollars to state-supported institutions."

Mingle said that, like ASU, most Western states are operating under the philosophy that universities should have low tuition and low aid so that access is not compromised.

But he said offering high tuition and high aid is a viable option.

"There are students who can and would be willing to pay more; however, the general concern from some Arizona leaders is that the residents may not be willing to support additional aid for students," Mingle said.

Although federal student aid is being expanded to a larger group of students, the problem is that there hasn't been an increase in appropriations," he said. "So what happens is Pell grants begin to decrease."

Arizona Board of Regents President Andy Hurwitz said the obvious issues in the tuition-setting process are access to the university, financial aid and the revenue needs of the university.

"When you look at the importance of the three issues, it's always difficult. There is always an uneasy compromise," Hurwitz said.

While the actual tuition figure for the 1993-94 school year will not be set until mid-April, Hurwitz said it is important to explore the national issues early.

POLICE REPORT

ASU police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

•An ASU employee was struck by a bicyclist while she was walking on Forest Mall. She went to the Student Health Center.

•A thief removed several items of property belonging to an ASU student from a locker in a third-floor room of the art building. Loss is estimated at $300.

•A vandal damaged the window of a fourth-floor room in Best Hall's C-wing. Damage is estimated at $112.

•A thief removed property from the vehicle of an ASU student while it was parked in Parking Structure 5. Loss is estimated at $3,025, and $100 in damage was inflicted on the 1990 Toyota pickup.

Tempe police reported the following incidents Wednesday:

•Two Tempe men were arrested on a felony theft charge after they allegedly conspired to steal automobile parts from Kmart, 1330 W. Baseline Road.

According to police reports, Kenneth Russell, a 23-year-old Kmart employee, allegedly removed a set of tires and a car battery from the store on Monday night, intending to sell them to Orville Frankin, a 42-year-old Tempe man.

The men were arrested at about 7:45 p.m. after Russell had allegedly taken the equipment from the store and was helping Frankin load it into his vehicle. Frankin said he was purchasing the equipment from Russell, but he did not know it was stolen. The equipment is valued at $1,465.

The two men were taken to Tempe City Jail and booked. They were both charged with four counts of Class 6 felony theft. During questioning, Russell reportedly told officers he has committed similar thefts on three other occasions.

at ASU do not compare to the number of Asian, Southeast Asian, Native American and European studies classes offered.

ASU President Lattie Coor, who attended the meeting, said the administration's intent was not to exclude members of the African-American student population from the meeting.

"Since we couldn't include everybody, we had students participate on the panel," Coor said. "Had it been clear in advance, we would have avoided that."

Levitt said he believes community leaders would like to see and converse directly with African-American students at ASU, and that the students would benefit from such meetings.

"I really feel we need to take this time as black people, and you as black community professionals, to mingle with the students," Levitt said to the reception members. "The only time I saw black community people (at ASU) is when we have protests. That is a very bourgeois thing to do."

Levitt said his suggestion is "plain and simple": The next time a meeting is to be conducted with the African-American community, all African-American students should be invited.

"My suggestion is that the University should take the time out to support an event for the black community and the black students here," Levitt said. "You can hear the issues from us and not the other people."

Coor said the members of the coalition raised a "very important point" when they interrupted the meeting.

"They wanted to make sure that this group of leaders from the community knew who they were personally and I agree with that," Coor said. "I feel very strongly they should have that opportunity and I encourage the students to get acquainted and work together with the members of the community because it is a very positive thing."

Coor said the reception was held because a number of the members of the African-American community have been active with the University through the years.

"The University has gathered leaders from the community just to give them background to say, 'Here is what we are doing, here is what the issues are and here is how we are trying to tackle it.' If they have any suggestions, we would like to hear from them," Coor said.

Interfraternity Council President Sean Barry, who was interviewed by Playboy for its party school survey, said he is shocked so many women are responding to the offer to be photographed. He said the women who participate are helping to "fill a stereotype that (Playboy) is trying to build up."

"There is no positive benefit for a woman being placed on display in a magazine," he said. "People are losing their self-respect by doing this."

Fiesta

"The contingency will cover the extra costs of the Fiesta Bowl, and no departments would suffer from lack of money," Smith said.

Goodrich said the amount of money to be spent would be divided equally among Tempe, Phoenix, Scottsdale, Maricopa County and the state of Arizona.

Each city would be allotted television advertising time during the game and in the stadium where Sunkist advertisements have stood before, he said.

"We (Fiesta Bowl Committee members) are talking with a number of people and there still is a chance for a sponsor being found," Goodrich said, adding that the committee wishes "to keep the Fiesta Bowl one of the elite bowls in the country."

Giuliano said a lot of national companies were waiting for the result of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday vote before committing to the game.

Tempe Mayor Harry Mitchell said the game will be played on schedule and the selection of the teams to play in the game will not be affected without a sponsor.

There is a good chance for a Fiesta Bowl national championship matchup between Miami and Florida State, Goodrich said. The revenue generated in Arizona and Tempe would increase significantly if the Fiesta Bowl held a national championship game, he said.

Court

His trial is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. Feb. 2 before Judge Robert A. Hertzburg at the Maricopa County Superior Court downtown Phoenix facility, 101 W. Jefferson St.

O'Connell faces a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $150,000 fine for each of the counts.

O'Connell, 42, is now executive director of the Wausau (Wis.) Performing Arts Foundation. He was released on his own recognizance and is free to return to Wisconsin until the beginning of his trial.

Jeremy Toles, O'Connell's attorney, said his client did not act with any criminal intent when making the cash advances, which the State Auditor General's Office said occurred between September 1989 and April 1991.

"Obviously, (that's why) we pleaded innocent to each count," Toles said. "We feel it's a case of a chief executive acting in the bounds of his authority. I think that he made the loans in good conscience, without any intent for personal gain."

"My client was a good official who may have lost money on this particular deal, but his department made (a profit) overall. There's a number of questions here that need to be settled, both legally and factually."

Warren Granville, an assistant Arizona attorney general who is the prosecuting attorney, was not available for comment.

O'Connell, who was public events director for seven years, was placed on administrative leave by the University in June 1991, after the outstanding debt was revealed in a performance review of the public events department.

Brent Brown, ASU vice president of university relations, said after O'Connell's indictment that the department had to lay off employees and reduce spending to help cut the deficit, which he said had been pared down to about $470,000.

Most of the money paid back from the $1.6 million loan came from ticket sales for events at Gammage Auditorium and the ASU-owned Sundome in Sun City West. Brown added that he thinks O'Connell mistakenly assumed that all of the loan money could be made up in ticket sales.

Ron Newcomer, who was artistic director of the Musical Theatre of Arizona at the time of the loans, said after O'Connell's indictment that the company had paid back more than $50,000 of the loans this year. He added that the company was planning to re-open with the help of out-of-state funding.

Newcomer is out of town and was not available for comment.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Madonna's book Sex has been removed from two public libraries but not because of the revealing photos.

Two library branches pulled the book off shelves because of wear and tear on the spiral bindings, the city's library director said Tuesday.

"The books were absolutely falling apart," said director Brenda Branch. "Spirals don't usually hold up. But when you have 40 people a day looking at it, that's pretty heavy use."

Branch said officials are deciding whether to have the books repaired, which could take a month to six weeks.

The book shows the pop diva pumping gas in the nude, hitchhiking in nothing but heels and enacting sexual fantasies laced with bondage and bisexuality.

The book had been available at the libraries to any patron with photo identification. Austin police have said they will review the book to determine whether it violates obscenity laws but add they have had trouble locating a copy.

"It's not an easy book to get a hold of," said senior Sgt. Jack Kelley, head of the department's vice unit.

The $49.95 book remains the No. 1 best seller in nonfiction this week, according to Publishers Weekly.

PEOPLE

GENEVA (AP) — Sophia Loren plans to go to Somalia to call attention to the suffering of refugees and perhaps "change my whole life."

"There are moments in our lives when by an unpredictable event we find ourselves facing horror, pity and shame," Loren said Wednesday after being named a goodwill ambassador for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

The 58-year-old actress said such a moment came to her about a year ago when she saw a picture of a starving Somali child "tragically attempting a smile."

The child is probably dead by now, Loren said, but she said she hoped to be able to do something for the refugees still alive.

She plans to leave for Kenya by the end of the week to visit a refugee camp, then cross into Somalia.

"When I come back maybe I'm going to be a different person, because whatever I see over there it's going to be something so incredible that it may change my whole life. It's possible."

NEW YORK (AP) — Pop star Paul Simon is outraged that the man who killed his "Graceland" colleague Headman Tshabalala won't spend a day in jail.

Tshabalala, a member of the black South African vocal group Ladysmith Black Mambazo, was shot to death Dec. 10 by a white security guard. Sean Nicholas, 26, was sentenced by a South African court last week to five years, two of which were suspended and the rest of which will be served under house arrest.

"This isn't the sentence for murder," Simon, 51, was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Daily News.

"This is an insult to Headman's family, as if his life has no value.

But that's the way it is under apartheid. It makes you ashamed to be white."

The shooting occurred when Nicholas pulled Tshabalala, 44, over to make a "citizen's arrest," saying Tshabalala was driving erratically.

Tshabalala was one of four brothers in the 10-member Ladysmith Black Mambazo, which performed intricate harmonies on Simon's Grammy-winning "Graceland" album.

CHICAGO (AP) — Neil Young put on a two-hour show before fewer than 200 invited guests, but the concert is destined for a wider audience in the first joint production of a performance series by cable and public TV.

Cable music channel VH-1 and Chicago public TV station WTTW are co-producers of the "Center Stage" series, which aims for an older audience than the "Unplugged" concert specials on VH-1's sister channel, MTV.

Young ranged through a ballad-heavy set of 20 songs — nine from his new album "Harvest Moon." VH-1 said it will broadcast portions of the concert in a half-hour special Dec. 19 and 20.

The series will have its official premiere on Valentine's Day on VH-1, also in a 30-minute format. Hour-long versions of the concerts will begin airing on the public television system next summer, VH-1 and WTTW said.

Other artists signed for "Center Stage" include k.d. lang, Lindsay Buckingham, Michael Bolton and Keith Richards.

Chris Jeffries, a member of the Sun Devil women's swim team, will be one of the ASU swimmers who will be traveling to California today through Friday to face UCLA and USC. It is the second meet of the season for ASU, who easily beat the University of California at San Diego in its first meet last weekend.

Sun Devil swimmers anxious to compete against USC, UCLA

BY LISA I. KRANZ
STATE PRESS

ASU men's and women's swimmers have been making waves since day one, and now they find themselves both very psyched and very anxious about competing against USC and UCLA this Thursday and Friday.

This past weekend, the Sun Devils easily pounded the University of California at San Diego in what the coaches said was a needed tuneup in preparation for the California schools.

"We're getting closer to the real thing, and I think people are a little nervous right now. Basically, we'll be going into battle (against USC and UCLA)," men's assistant coach Barry Schriefels said.

However, the team is definitely not overcome with worry.

"It's going to be fun, senior David Holderbach said. "We're all excited to go away and race some better teams."

Men's swim coach Ron Johnson is equally confident, saying everyone has worked very hard the past week and is taking a mini-taper for USC and UCLA.

"We're not taking full taper first semester, but are training harder than ever. It's more lactate work at this stage," he said.

Schriefels said newcomers on the squad have done quite well and are starting to realize what it's like to compete at the collegiate level.

"Our sprinters are doing good but a few are injured, but we're doing pretty good," Holderbach said.

This past Saturday, Schriefels noted some were still swimming for spots on relays — the events which will achieve the most points in competition — and also competing against each other for other spots.

Still, the men are in good position to come out strong.

On the women's side of the swim lanes, ASU coach Tim Hill said Thursday and Friday are pretty important for his Sun Devil team.

"We get to go face-to-face with competition," he said.

Knowing his swimmers have to be both mentally and physically prepared for the California schools, Hill states no precise goals but instead maintains a simple work ethic.

"My philosophy's always been you have to take one meet at a time. Every day something different can happen with you."

Assistant women's swim coach Brian Smith knows the opponents will be tough and ASU will have to be primed to beat them.

"UCLA is loaded and were around seventh in NCAAs last year and should be in the top five this year," he said.

Hill said USC is currently ranked 10th. The 1992 Women of Troy have achieved the top-10 each of the last two years. They were sixth at the 1990 NCAAs and placed ninth in 1991.

"This could be one of our best teams ever, if everything falls into shape," said fourth-year USC head coach Darrell Fick.

And while USC men's swim coach Peter Daland lost five senior All-Americans off last year's No. 4 men's swim team, he sees a lot of new talent coming in and hopes to improve on last year's finish.

Sophomore Heidi Toft said a lot of her ASU teammates are starting to taper. For sprinters this means more explosiveness, and for long-distancers, more energy.

"Preseason, (ASU) is ranked 13th. That's a pretty fair assessment because we were 12th last year," Hill said.

Tick, tick, tick: Clock is running for ASU wrestler

Miller wants NCAA title — now

BY JAKE BATSELL
STATE PRESS

The clock is ticking for ASU wrestler Ray Miller.

Miller, a 167-pound senior and one of four returning Sun Devil All-Americans, wants to realize several goals in his final season, including a national title.

"I haven't reached my goals yet at all," Miller said. "I've been disappointed the last three years. This year, there's no room for disappointment."

"It's all or nothing."

Not that Miller hasn't found success: he was the Pac-10 champion at the 158-pound weight class last year and finished second at the NCAA championships, despite a torn ligament in one knee.

He and teammate Shawn Charles are attempting to become ASU's first four-year All-Americans this season, beginning Saturday in a season-opening match at Clairon University in Pennsylvania.

"They (Miller and Charles) came into the season in as good of shape as anybody on the team," ASU coach Lee Roy Smith said. "They're on a mission."

Though he has wrestled at the 158-pound class in his previous three years at ASU, Miller will be moving up to 167 pounds this season.

"I don't think he'll have a bit of trouble," Smith said.

Malauula eager for ASU-UofA game

Quarterback feels he let fans, others down with last year's loss

ASU vs. UofA

BY JAKE BATSELL
STATE PRESS

For those who have followed the rivalry of "The Game" over the past three seasons, George Malauula has become almost as synonymous with UofA as "Bear Down" or Wilbur Wildcat.

Malauula, the Wildcats' senior quarterback, has taken snaps in each of the last three ASU-UofA showdowns and will lead the Wildcats (6-3-1) against the Sun Devils (5-5) in Saturday's contest at Arizona Stadium in Tucson.

Malauula said he is eager to lead the Wildcats in their attempt to reclaim state bragging rights.

"We feel we let the people of Tucson — as well as the UofA alumni — down," Malauula said, referring to last year's streak-ending 37-14 loss to the Sun Devils.

"It's a big rivalry," he added. "Being here in Arizona the last five years, I've come to respect and to learn how much this game means to the people of Arizona."

With UofA's run-based offense, Malauula has had to rely on his speed nearly as much as his arm. He has scored 32 touchdowns over four seasons — 16 rushing and 16 passing.

"In fact, he's capable of being as effective, if not more, at 167. He's big enough, he's strong enough; he wrestles a style that will give 167-pounders a difficult time, because he has good quickness."

Miller said he is looking forward to competing in the new class.

"It's really hard to tell right now, but I think it's going to be to my advantage," he said.

Off-season strength conditioning bulked up Miller, who weighed in 10 pounds heavier than he had in previous preseason weigh-ins. To get back down to 158 pounds, Miller would have had to drop almost 35 pounds, which he said "made it almost impossible" to return to his former weight class.

"We'll just have to evaluate how well he maintains his weight," Smith said. "He's probably as healthy as he has been in the last couple of years."

Miller's successful career has had only one obstacle — injuries. Various ankle and knee ailments have plagued him in the past, but Smith said Miller is virtually injury-free for the first time in awhile.

"He's not behind the 8-ball," Smith said. "He's been hurt from the start of the season last year and the year before."

"Now, it's kind of like, 'Jeez, I've got a new lease on life.'"

Miller is on target to graduate with a degree in mechanical engineering. He said he hopes to compete internationally and plans to keep wrestling "as long as my body will let me."

But first things come first for Miller, who will begin his campaign for a national title on Saturday.

"If I didn't think I could win a national title, I wouldn't go out there," he said. "That's the attitude I've kept all three years."

"To succeed, for me, is a must. I've got to succeed just to satisfy myself. If I don't, then I feel like I've let myself down."

Tyson's rape case continues

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The attorney for boxer Mike Tyson said the sexual history of the teenage beauty queen his client was convicted of raping must be explored in court now that she has accused Tyson of giving her a venereal disease.

Alan Dershowitz, a law professor at Harvard University, said Desiree Washington knew she had the disease before Tyson's criminal trial earlier this year. But he didn't enter it as evidence because, "if she had, it would have opened up the door for exploring the full range of her sexual activities. And she didn't want to do that," he said.

"If in fact she has these diseases, the first question is, who gave it to her? We're going to have to know who could have given it to her," Dershowitz said.

Washington, 19, of Providence, R.I., is undergoing treatment for a sexually transmitted disease she allegedly contracted when she was raped by Tyson in July 1991 in Indianapolis, her attorney, Deval L. Patrick of Boston, said Tuesday.

Patrick declined to say what disease Washington has, but said it has left her physically and emotionally scarred.

Tyson, the former heavyweight boxing champion, was convicted of rape last February and was sentenced in March to six years in prison. He could be eligible for release from the Indiana Youth Center in less than three years.

Malauulu

This year, he has completed 90 of 179 passes for 1,133 yards, six touchdowns and six interceptions.

"He's made good decisions, and he has operated in the framework that we wanted him to," Wildcat coach Dick Tomey said of Malauulu's performance this season.

As a prep quarterback at Carson High School in Los Angeles, Malauulu was ambidextrous. Although he has focused exclusively on throwing with his left arm while at UofA, he said his right arm has been convenient.

"It (being ambidextrous) is nothing to boast and brag about," Malauulu said. "But if someone's on my back and I can't throw with the left, I'll be able to throw with the right."

"Everyone is kind of shocked and amazed that I can do that, but it hasn't been something I've really (concentrated on) as far as being a quarterback here at the UofA."

Malauulu has found stability at the quarterback position this season, as he has started in all 10 of the Wildcats' games. In his first two seasons in Tucson, he split time calling signals with Ronald Veal, and last year he shared the quarterback slot with current tailback Chuck Levy.

Injuries have had an effect on Malauulu throughout his career. Last year, he missed four games with a sore right shoulder, and he suffered a torn ligament in his left knee in 1989 that required arthroscopic surgery.

"I think George has been on the verge of being an outstanding quarterback for years, but he just had injuries get in the way,"

Tomey said.

After starting the season 1-2-1, the Wildcats reeled off five consecutive victories, including an upset of then-No. 1 Washington. Malauulu said his years at UofA, 1992 in particular, have been enjoyable but difficult at times.

"As far as the way I've performed here at the UofA, it's been a hills-and-valley kind of performance," he said. "I'm just glad, my senior year, we came back the way we did. To see everyone fight back the way they did makes me feel that much better, as far as being a senior, and as far as being a Wildcat."

Malauulu is on his way to graduating in May with a degree in political science. Currently an intern in the UofA sports information office, he said he hopes to achieve a career in some form of athletic administration.

However, this week "The Game" takes utmost priority for Malauulu, who said he expects a formidable test from the ASU defense.

"They (the ASU defense) are playing great ball," he said. "I'm sure their defense, by now, is tired of hearing about my defense, 'Desert Swarm.' I'm sure they're willing to come into Tucson and show that they can play the same type of defense as our nationally-ranked defense."

"It's going to be a hard-fought type of game," he added. "The Arizona state championship is on the line. We're going to have to claw and scratch our way to a victory."

Clarification

In the State Press sports section Wednesday, ASU golfer Wendy Ward was misidentified in a photo. It was actually a picture of a USC golfer. We regret and confusion this may have caused.

For Thursday, November 19, 1992

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) This is a good day for tackling home chores and making household repairs. Partners are on the same wave length now. Follow through on personal commitments tonight. TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) New ideas come now regarding a work project. Sports and exercise prove invigorating today. Though romance and partying are favored, you may be inclined to overdo. GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Do-it-yourself projects and shopping for the home are favored now. It won't take much to straighten out a misunderstanding. Don't play the field in romance. CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You will act quickly on your ideas now. Make decisions about a home improvement project. Be levelheaded in romance, as you may make unfeasible promises. LEO (July 23 to Aug. 22) This is a good day for both family and monetary interests. A playful mood could cause you to goof off on the job. Tonight favors mental and creative projects. VIRGO (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22) Leadership qualities are to the fore. You speak and work effectively now. A family discussion goes well tonight. You may overspend on pleasure interests. LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You are pulling strings behind-the-scenes where business matters are concerned today. Clarity of thought and good perceptions make this a fine day for you. SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You have many people to see today and may be in the mood for quiet times later. You do not suffer fools gladly and may be put off by someone's attempt to cajole you. SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A good sense of timing is an asset to you in business. You know when to speak out and when to keep still. Social life is more rewarding on a mental rather than emotional level. CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19) You are able to read between the lines where business interests are concerned today. Be careful not to take on more than you can handle. Social life is favorable. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18) A fringe benefit may come to you now at work. You are able to give a friend good advice today. A trip you are considering may be unnecessary. PISCES (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20) Partnership interests are happily highlighted. Good judgment aids you on the job today. Be discriminating about which social invitations you accept tonight. YOU BORN TODAY have a variety of interests and are sometimes restless. You have a good head for business, but are more likely to be found in the arts and professions. Often, you have an interest in politics and reform. You are independent and often choose a creative medium through which to express your individuality. Leadership abilities come naturally to you. Birthdate of: Indira Gandhi, Indian politician; Alan Young, comedian; and Clifton Webb, actor.
